"The Paris meeting went off in splendid shape. Everyone was interested and enthusiastic. All units were represented, and privates as well as generals were delegates. Incidentally, there was no trouble in getting delegates to go. Paris was a lodestone. This group adopted the name, American Legion. The name had been used by my father before the war, when he formed a group of Americans who had experience which qualified them to serve in the army in case of need.

"Meanwhile, I returned to this country, and with some other veterans, arranged for a caucus. We rented an office in New York city and got in touch with ex-service men in every state, asking them to organize the soldiers and sailors in their community, elect delegates and come to St. Louis on May 8, 1919.

"The first order of business was the election of a permanent chairman. We selected Col. Henry D. Lindsley of Texas, a Southern Democrat, thereby giving the lie to those who said it was to be a Republican organization. Next, we confirmed the actions taken by the Paris caucus, such as the selection of the name, American Legion, and adopted a declaration of faith and a temporary constitution. We provided an organization to carry on until the fall, when the first real convention was called in Minneapolis. There representatives of both Paris and St. Louis meetings would be, and the American Legion could take final form.

"At Minneapolis on November 10 our convention assembled. We elected as commander Franklin K. D'Olier, of New Jersey, adopted a permanent constitution, and the Legion came into being."

Dress Problems Solved for The 'Frankly Forty' Class

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

THE original intention was to offer in these few paragraphs suggestions as to fashions for women who register in the "frankly forty" class. However, the more we think of it, what with beauty-parlor magic and fashion necromancy that performs miracles these days in creating youthful dress, we begin to have our doubts as to whether the "frankly forty" (with emphasis on "frankly") idea fits into the modern scheme of things.

However, being forty even though not "frankly" so has lost its terrors for modern women so far as the dress problem is concerned, for the problem that confronted the "forties," likewise the forties-plus, in the past is really not a problem at all in these modern times thanks to style creators who have become increasingly alert to the call for fashions for women that give the young look, yet not so obviously young as to overstep the bounds of good taste.

Subtly and artfully, contemporary designers are handling this question of dress that will accent youthful charm at the same time that it erases traces of birthdays that count to forty and past. You can even go to specialized dress departments nowadays, take your saleswoman into confidence, and under her expert guidance be turned out in new apparel that is age defying.

Note the attractive gown in the inset to the right in the picture. "Last call for dinner" and madame, enjoying summer travels, steps into the diner smartly clad in a pert black and white silk wheat print dress looking delightsomely youthful. Shirring animates the puffed top of the sleeves and it is shirring that achieves a soft draped effect in the bodice. The green shoestring belt interprets chic to the nth degree. Worn with a rough white straw hat and white bag the outfit becomes definitely appropriate and charming for restaurant or country club wear.

For city roofs or dinner at home mother, noted for her discriminating taste in dress, wears a gray silk chiffon dinner gown with elbow length puffed sleeves and high shirred bust line as shown centered in the picture. White flowers with a delicate tracery of wine are caught at the base of the V neckline.

For country club dining or a gathering of her sorority club members, or for an evening of entertainment a multi-colored silk print with slightly flared skirt, topped with a long bolero jacket with pushed-up three-quarter sleeves as illustrated to the left should prove a perfect choice. The advantage of this modish gown is that removing the bolero the dress is transformed into a formal for more sumptuous occasion.

Fall fashion trends give promise of very elegant fabrics that tune to the call of the mode that comes from the "frankly forty" group. Silk faille bengaline, moire, stiff taffetas and stately brocades are fashion firsts on the list and they are being made up simply and exquisitely as becomes a lady of dignity and poise.

The new bustle frocks are proving interesting too, to the "frankly forty" woman. While the old time bustle effects may have been the inspiration for present styling yet the modern versions are modified and artfully interpreted via graceful butterfly bows and drapes and other skilful manipulations.

Linen Jacket

Now that midseason has come upon us the practicality of a smartly tailored linen jacket to wear over silk print frocks is readily recognized. The silk dress in the picture is a maize and white print and with its linen jacket makes a very desirable costume to wear at the immediate moment. This spectator sports outfit is completed with a roll brim sailor hat which sets the outfit out effectively.

Autumn Millinery In Paris Display

The first new millinery collections shown in Paris are the prelude to fall and winter fashions.

Among the fall perennials in the millinery realm which invariably make their appearance about this time are high crowns, lofty trims and berets. Big berets are among this season's most striking novelties. They really do bring something different into this old reliable headline.

Forecast for winter is a revival of real old-time Paris millinery—rich, feminine, unusually luxuriant in trimming. Ostrich plumes are often combined with bows or flowers or fastened onto the hat with glittering jeweled pins.

Fine Red Flannel Jackets Popular

If you long for color, gaiety and style served all in one, buy a new bright jacket smartly tailored of fine red flannel. The younger set is making a dash to the sports sections, walking out proudly wearing a coveted red jacket over their midseason light dresses. The fad is going strong during the evening hours for a red tailored jacket over a party frock is a young girl's pride at the present moment. The jacket of red velveteen is also chic.

Left to Write

By H. A. Grantham

Opinions expressed herein are those of the writer and should not be construed as reflecting the policy of the Republican State Central Committee, any individual or group, or the newspaper in which this column appears.

CIGARETTE INCOME

The first month of application of Iowa's much discussed anti-bootleg cigarette law gives a pretty fair indication of what the measure may be expected to accomplish. While administration opponents pooh-poohed the idea as fantastic and futile, Republican legislators who designed and passed it predicated increased income to the state. Increases up to $800,000 annually were cited by its enthusiastic proponents Cigarette taxes for July show an increase of $100,000 over the same month in 1938 anl top the highest month in the history of the department by about the same figure.

SMOKER PAID HEAVILY

While a heavy percentage of this increase is due to closer supervision of cigarette traffic and the stoppage of so-called "boot-leg" cigarettes from outside the state, use of a new tax stamp has helped materially. Most wholesalers of cigarettes now use machinery to imprint the stamp upon each package but about a third still use an adhesive stamp. The old type stamp did not adhere readily to the cellophane covering of the package and a serious leak in revenue resulted from repeated use of the same stamp. In such cases the smoker paid the tax but the state didn't get the revenue. A newer type stamp, slightly more costly, cannot be removed without automatically cancelling it. It has many times justified the increased cost. If the present trend continues the state will recover more than a million dollars annually at no additional cost to the cigarette smoker

DUMMY PLATES AGAIN

Dummy license plates which were used promiscuously by state employees during the Kraschel administration to disguise the fact they were using state-owned automobiles for personal business, came into the news again recently when the executive council refused to permit such use of the plates except on cars of the bureau of investigation and similar services. Although authorized by law to create the position of car dispatcher whose duty it is to control use of state cars, Governor Wilson placed this duty in the hands of the assistant secretary of the executive council. Dummy plates will be permitted only where investigation or law enforcement work makes it necessary to disguise an official car temporarily.

BIG FARMS, LITTLE FARMS

Without new legislation and with sensible application of laws already in the code, Commissioner of Insurance Charles R. Fischer has evolved what may be a partial solution of the troublesome farm tenancy situation. Through foreclosure insurance companies have acquired large land holdings in Iowa. These companies are forbidden by law to hold these lands beyond a specified time but a sympathetic viewpoint during the late lamented depression suggested that forced sales be postponed to a more settled time. As a result great corporate farms have developed until today it is estimated that insurance companies own Iowa lands equal to eight counties. Commissioner Fischer will not arbitrarily force quick liquidation of these holdings where unusual loss might result, but will point out that it was not the purpose of the law to create corporate farms. However, the commissioner's attitude should not be misunderstood. It appears that he would welcome discussion of some orderly program which would not suddenly glut the market with farm lands offered under pressure but which would in the course of time create many more family size farms.

LIQUOR STORE CHANGES

The first few changes in local liquor store personnel created something of a stir because employees removed for "cause" were of both Republican and Democratic persuasion. The Liquor Control Commission pointed out that these were cases considered and adjudged long before July 1 and that "cause" in these cases had no relation to politics. But some of these discharged employees, perhaps relying upon the Commission's policy of not making public the charges upon which dismissals were based, raised a defense based upon alleged political persecution. The Commission has taken no official notice of these allegations but as individuals have said that it might be necessary and justifiable to publish a complete transcript of each such case.

STATE CAR SALES

When the Wilson administration began to remove so many state automobiles from service early this year, automobile dealers began to fear the used car market might be stampeded by offering these cars for sale. However, while additional cars are being taken off the roads almost daily—the Liquor Control Commission has turned in more than a dozen within the last month—the administration has been using them in replacement instead of buying new cars. This has had somewhat a similar effect on certain dealers who complain it has blocked sale of new cars to the state. Using these unneeded automobiles to replace obsolete equipment will absorb most of them over a few months time but certain of them will probably be offered for sale. Included among these latter cars will be the limousine once used by former Governor Kraschel. It is of a type too costly of operation to be satisfactory o rwise in every day service.

TAG ENDS

Ioma continues to trim its state payroll for the benefit of taxpayers while at the same time congress approved 531 additional house and senate clerks at an annual cost of $832,000 . . . . . headahces are nothing new around the state house and the pharmacy board furnishes about 100 free aspirin tablets a month to ailing inmates and visitors . . . . . current Federal debt total $40,648,491,310; your share $311.28.

WILL EXHIBIT KLEMME PRODUCT AT TWO LARGE STATE FAIRS

Ed. Thompson is working on his displays of Runway Mouse Traps and getting ready for two large state fairs. Mr Thompson will go first to the Wisconsin State Fair at Milwaukee where he will exhibit for ten days after which he will take his display to the Minnesota State Fair.

Last year the Wisconsin fair attracted over 800,000 visitors. A unique fact regarding the Wisconsin fair is that they do not have a midway or concession on the grounds. The exhibits are the major attraction. Since cutting out the midway and concession ballyhoo they have increased their attendance by thousands.

The Minnesota fair last year attracted 600,000 people.

South American Jungles Motherland of Our Corn

The long-sought motherland of maize, historically the chief agricultural crop in America, is credited to the jungles of Central South America, according to reports to the National Academy of Science by investigators from the Texas Agricultural Experiment station, writes Thomas R. Henry in the Washington Star.

Corn was found by the earliest white explorers as a cultivated crop throughout the Americas, essentially in the form known today. It had been domesticated by the Indians from some wild grain, but there was no trace of this hypothetical ancestor Only two grasslike growths remotely approached it—teosinte in Mexico and Central America and tripsacum, which grows through the southern United States southward through Mexico.

Neither approached very closely the cultivated maize which seems to have spread from two centers where two great civilizations had been built up upon it—Peru and Yucatan. The Texas botanists conducted their search for the origin of corn within the grain itself by microscopic study of the structure of its chromosomes, or bundles of genes which are the units of heredity.

These show clearly, they report, that it could have descended neither from teosinte or tripsacum The former grass, they maintain, actually appears to be a later development from a cross between maize and tripsacum. There are tripsacum elements in the corn grown in the United States, but these apparently are only later developments.

No Snoring Allowed in Churches of Old England

In these days if anyone goes to sleep in church there isn't much that can be done about it. But this was not so in the past, as a study of old parish registers will show, relates a correspondent in London Answers Magazine.

In those days there was an official known as the Sluggard Walker. He probably enjoyed his job. This was to patrol the aisle, rod in hand, waiting for the first nod Then—rap went the stick on the sleeper's head. An entry from a Derbyshire register dated 1772 shows that he was paid an annual fee of ten shillings for the work.

Even more interesting must have been the work done by Robert Walton of Youlgreave, in 1699. The entry shows that he was paid 16 pence "for whipping ye dogges forth of ye church in time of Divine Service."

From a Castleton register comes an entry of real historical interest: "1745. Paid to ye ringers at the flight of the Rebels. 5s. 0d."

Speed of Ducks

The magazine American Shotgun gives the following table of flights for various species of ducks: The canvasback duck, 130 to 160 feet per second, with an average of 145; bluewing teal, 120 to 140 feet per second, average 130; greenwing teal, 100 to 130 feet per second, average 115. Other authorities give the redhead duck 110 to 130 feet per second, mallard 50 to 90. To convert these figures into miles per hour, multiply by 0.6818, so that the canvasback duck's average speed is over 98 miles per hour. According to an article in Scientific American by S. F. Aaron, it would seem that these figures are exaggerated. He states it is doubtful that wild ducks or other sea birds can attain speeds of more than 60 miles an hour for short or long distances, as the result of his observations and measurements. This same author regards the bluewinged teal as the fastest of the duck family, faster than the canvasback or pintail.

Monastery Depends on Spring

St. Anthony's monastery, founded in 315 A. D. in the mountains east of Cairo and believed to be the oldest continuous monastery in the world, depends upon a single spring of water which flows out of the perpendicular rock wall of the adjacent mountain. Should this spring fail, the beautiful gardens of St. Anthony's would die and the monastery would be compelled to close down. Persons visiting the monastery after dark are hauled up to a small door in the wall by means of a rope.

Human Burglar Alarm

Further evidence that old customs never die in Great Britain comes to notice in Yorkshire. Each day at 9 p. m. in the town of Ripon a hornblower stands in the center of town and blows a blast to each of the four points of the compass and a final one before the mayor's house. The custom has been handed down from Saxon times, and the hornblower was once paid for acting as a human burglar alarm during the night.

Used Verse From Micah

An excerpt from the eighth verse of the sixth chapter of Micah is in the rotunda of the Library of Congress at Washington, D. C. It is one of the many inscriptions that form part of the decoration of this building.

STORE EMPLOYEES HELP TO HARVEST HIDDEN TAX CROP

Hancock county has an estimated 498 "unofficial tax collectors" who indirectly are helping local, state and national government harvest their annual revenues, the National Consumers Tax Commission declared today.

The unofficial, and generally unwilling "tax collectors," according to the NCTC are the proprietors and employees in the 226 local retail stores.

"There are 7,497 official tax levying and spending governmental agencies in Iowa," said Mrs Melville Mucklestone, president of the nation-wide women's organization "But every clerk behind a store counter is actually a tax collector, too.

"In every sale these clerks collect fractions of hidden taxes that have increased the cost of production and distribution of the article purchased These taxes, of necessity must be passed on to the consumer a part of the price A major share of all local, state and national taxes now are hidden to the consumers who pay them this way

"However, retail merchants should not be blamed. No business could possibly survive today if it attempted to absorb the multitude of taxes to which it is subject In consequence, every ring of the cash register represents not only a sale but a tax payment

The NCTC now has study groups in approximately 5,000 communities in 45 states in its educational campaign to expose "unnecessary consumer-penalizing taxes" Mrs Mucklestone said The crusade in this state is led by Mrs Charles Stephen Hickman, of Centerville national committee member, and Mrs. E. A. Hunt, of Des Moines state director.

By Virginia Vale

VIVIEN LEIGH, the English girl whom you'll see in the movie version of "Gone With the Wind," arrived in New York a while ago for a vacation. The vacation had begun a week or so before, but she had spent the first part of it in the country near- by, resting, after 22 weeks of work, with only five free days in that time, she needed a rest!

In many ways she really resem- bles "Scarlett O'Hara." She has the squarish jaw and pointed chin that you're familiar with if you read the book, and her eyes, though they're hazel, are near enough to being green so that the effect is almost the same.

As for her Southern accent, it should pass muster even with the most critical of Southern audiences.

She'll have to abandon it when she returns to work, for her next assignment in Hollywood is that of the young wife in "Rebecca," an- other popular novel She will play opposite Laurence Olivier—it's ru- mored that their interest in each other is more than mildly senti- mental, but in Hollywood that ru- mor has a way of bobbing up when- ever publicity is needed for a new picture.

If you want more data about Miss Leigh for your scrapbook—she was born in India, received her educa- tion in Germany, Italy, France and England, and has a five-year-old daughter.

It's a new version of "Smiling Through" that will be Jeanette Mac- Donald's first picture under her new Another foreign actress, Ingrid Bergman, makes her bow to Amer- ica soon. The picture, "Intermez- zo," is an American version of one she made in Sweden. She is return- ing to Sweden when it is completed.

And, while we're on the subject of Sweden, Paul Muni's superb acting aided greatly in obtaining for War- ner Brothers permission to screen the life of Alfred Bernard Nobel. No less a person than Sir Robert Vansittart, chief diplomatic adviser to the British government, has been engaged by Alexander Korda to write the lyrics and dialogue for Korda's forthcoming technicolor production, "The Thief of Bagdad." He's doing it between diplomatic assignments. Korda is shooting the works on this new picture; it is one of the most ambitious productions ever to come from his studio.

Michael Fitzmaurice has been typed as an unlucky suitor so fre- quently on the air that he's afraid it will affect his private life. As you've probably noticed by her pictures, Deanna Durbin is growing up. ### ELISHA: A LIFE OF HELPFULNESS

LESSON TEXT—II Kings 5:1-10, 14.
GOLDEN TEXT—Be ye kind one to an- other.—Ephesians 4:32.

"Loving kindness and tender mer- cies" (Ps. 103:4) are among the glo- rious attributes of our God, and con- sequently characteristic of those who love and serve Him. The world has all but forgotten these virtues, for in its brutal determination to achieve results there is only an out- ward veneer of courtesy and consid- eration which extends itself primari- ly to those from whom some advan- tage may be obtained or who are highly regarded because of their wealth or position. The poor and needy, the aged and afflicted are quickly brushed aside as unfortu- nate hindrances in the path of prog- ress.

In all times God's people have been those most considerate of oth- ers. It is they who have given time and effort and means to help those in need. The life of Elisha is well characterized as a life of helpful- ness. It is surprising to find how many of his miracles were for the purpose of helping others. God's servants are called to be leaders and to be preachers, but they are none- theless called to carry on a life of helpful service. Elisha's experience with Naaman suggests how we may exercise such a ministry. Without seeking to designate verses in the text, shall we observe that we must

I. Find the One in Need.

It is not always that the one with the deepest need makes himself known. In fact, it is commonly true that those who have the greatest need and are possibly the most worthy of help keep their sorrows to themselves. Certainly it is true that those afflicted with the leprosy of sin do not often come to church. We must go out and seek them and bring them in.

One of the weaknesses of many churches today is that they go through their regular services, which may include preaching the gospel, and then they lament the fact that sinners do not come to the services to hear and be saved. Let us be reminded that it is our busi- ness to go out into the highways and the byways to find those in need. Naaman's experience illustrates how the simple word of a little slave girl was instrumental in bringing the leper in touch with the man of God. Had she failed in her responsibility, the prophet would have missed his opportunity to minister. Even the humblest believer has his important work, seeking out the lost and needy, and may thus be the means of bringing about great blessing.

II. Locate and Diagnose the Con- dition.

Naaman knew that he had leprosy, but he did not know that he had a blight of soul called pride. The prophet, acting under the guidance and control of God, struck right at the heart of things when he directed Naaman to crush his pride and to show his faith by obeying God's command to wash seven times in the Jordan.

The story has many important ap- plications. Let us be sure that in our efforts to help people physically or socially, we get through to their real need, the need of Christ. Let us also be careful not to modify or change God's requirement. There is one way of salvation—through faith in Christ; there is no other remedy for sin. A man "must be born again" or "he cannot enter the kingdom of God" (see John 3: 3-7). If men are too proud to go that way, they cannot be saved. Observe also that there was no re- spect of persons on the part of Eli- sha. Naaman was a great and dis- tinguished man, ready to bestow rich gifts, but the man of God had no interest in those things. He want- ed only to give God's message.

III. Apply the Remedy.

One would be quick to condemn the trained physician who, having found his patient and having given his attention to his need, made a careful and accurate diagnosis and then sent him away without apply- ing the cure which was in his pos- session. As the servants of Christ the great Physician, engaged in the cure of souls, we need to be equally wise. It is commendable to engage in a discussion of the problems of needy men and women, expressing our heart interest in that need. It is desirable that we clarify our knowledge of their need and accu- rately understand the truth of the gospel which meets that need. How- ever, all of these things are quite meaningless unless they result in the bringing of the gospel to bear on the lives of the unconverted.

Solitude

An hour of solitude, passed in sin- cere and earnest prayer or con- flict with, and conquest over, a sin- gle passion or subtle bosom sin, will teach us more of thought, will more effectually awaken the fac- ulty and form the habit of reflection than a year's study in the schools without them.—Coleridge.

HOW TO SEW

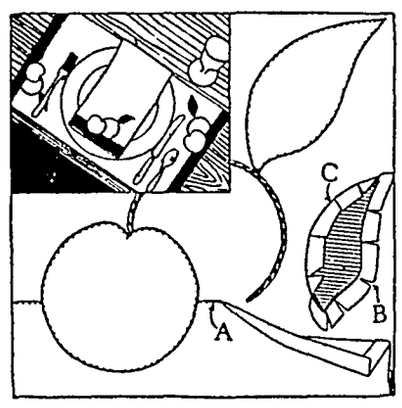
by Ruth Wyeth Spears



The luncheon mat and napkin shown here offer a suggestion for a way to use your cut-out de- signs for simple but effective applique work.

The long sides of the mats are hemmed and the ends faced with one-inch bands of green, as at A. The napkins are also hemmed on two sides and faced with green bands on the other two. The stem for the bright red cherry follows a circular line embroidered in green outline stitch. The leaf is of the green material.

Experiment with cutting the cherry and leaf in paper. When you have cut a design that pleases you, make a pattern in lightweight cardboard. Cut the fabric a little larger than the pattern, clip the edge as at B; then press it over the pattern with a warm iron as at C to make a firm crease. Re- move the pattern, and sew the pieces in place with fine hemming stitches.

NOTE: Readers who have not secured their copies of my two books should send in their orders at once. Your choice of the CRAZYPATCH QUILT leaflet showing 36 authentic stitches; or the RAG RUG LEAFLET will be included FREE with orders for both books, for the present. Ev- eryone should have copies of these two books containing 96 How to Sew articles that have not ap- peared in the paper. This offer will be withdrawn soon. Send or- der with 25 cents immediately to Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill., and both books will be mailed postpaid.

For Salty Gravy.—Put pieces of toasted bread into soups or gravies which are too salty, take them out in a few minutes, and it will be found that the bread has absorbed a good portion of the salt.

Identifying Sheets.—If you use sheets of two different sizes, one for single and one for double beds, fold sheets for double beds in a large square and those for a sin- gle bed in smaller squares. You will then have no difficulty in finding the right sheets.

Cook Changed His Liking After a Bit of Difficulty

His wife had been away for a week, and he had been looking after himself.

"How did you manage, you poor darling?" she asked on her return.

"I lived like a fighting cock!" boasted her husband. "Bacon and tomatoes for breakfast. Steak or chop in the evenings. Oh, I've become an expert cook."

"But, dear, why bacon and to- matoes? You know you always liked bacon and eggs."

"Well, I was beat there," he said, looking a little sheepish. "But tell me, dear, how do you manage to make eggs stick on the griller while you cook them?"

Lots Of Water

Paving operations of the Mt. Ayr-Benton highway require 60,000 gallons of water per day.

Sponges Like Other Animals

Strange though it sounds, sponges live and grow and die just like any other animals. And because they're salt-water animals, the fresh water was their finish, observes the Washington Post. Actually, sponges as we know them aren't sponges but the skeletons of sponges. The sponge is a collection of tiny one-celled creatures who get together and build the skeleton. These curious animals first attracted the attention of the Greeks many years ago Grecian soldiers wore metal helmets and shin guards and cursed at the blisters they raised. Then someone dove into the Mediterranean, came up with a sponge and discovered it would make a good pad Sponges were used for bathing then, too, and also as floor mops and brushes

Glass Snake Is Lizard

The so-called joint snake or glass snake is a lizard which has the appearance of a snake. It has a very brittle tail, which will break off when grasped. Its scales have a highly polished surface, like glass. There is, of course, no truth in the belief that the broken part will reunite with the rest of the lizard. Some glass snakes are blackish with a bright green spot in each scale, others are olive, with yellow dots on scales, while in others the dots fuse in the form of longitudinal stripes

Swiss Thanksgiving

"Thanksgiving" is observed annually in Switzerland on the third Sunday in September. It is generally known as "prayer day" and as such it is kept as one of the holiest days of the year. All the churches have special services and places of amusement are tightly closed

Collector Purchases First Bill of Rights

Dr. A. S. W. Rosenbach of Washington, D. C., has acquired the original manuscript of the bill of rights, which the congress of the United States assembled to consider 150 years ago.

The noted collector of rare books and manuscripts has declined to indicate from what source it had come into his possession.

It was on March 4, 1789, that the congress assembled in New York city, then the national capital, to consider the first 12 amendments proposed for the Constitution. Of these original 12, the first two concerned the number of members in the house of representatives and the manner in which their salaries could be altered. These two were rejected, so that Article III became the first amendment, and so on down the list to Article XII, which became the tenth amendment—the first 10 constituting what the world has since known as the bill of rights.

The manuscript acquired by Dr. Rosenbach has been placed on display at Philadelphia. Written on parchment, it bears the signatures of Frederick Augustus Muhlenberg, then speaker of the house, and of John Adams, then vice president of the United States and president of the senate. The document was attested by John Beckley and Samuel A. Otis, respectively, clerk of the house and secretary of the senate.

Big Cuts in Lend-Spend Bill Traceable to Lewis Barrage Against Garner, Wage Shifts

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

CONGRESS:
Drifting

Time was when C. I. O.'s John L. Lewis and President Roosevelt were close friends. If this was an excuse for anti-Roosevelt sentiment in the rural U. S., such sentiment might have been dispelled the day John Lewis appeared before a hostile house labor committee. In a few choice words he denounced proposed amendments to the 1938 fair labor standards act. In a few more he called Vice President Garner a "labor-baiting, poker-playing, whiskey-drinking, evil old man . . ."

While this denunciation at least won Jack Garner the poker-playing and whiskey-drinking vote if he runs for President next year, its actual effect was much greater—indeed, it was stupendous. By denouncing wage-hour amendments Mr. Lewis stepped on rural toes (especially in the South) which wanted processors of agricultural products eliminated from minimum wage requirements. Thus he fanned into a blaze the growing coalition between Republicans and rural Democrats who are coolish toward the New Deal. Cheering Jack Garner in house and senate, this group proceeded to raise havoc with President Roosevelt's pet multi-billion lend-spend program, aimed to hasten recovery.

JOHN LEWIS

In the senate a $2,490,000,000 original proposal lost a $500,000,000 item for toll highways, bridges and tunnels, another $350,000,000 for leasing equipment to railroads. In the house the bill was tied in committee. While adjournment hinged on this bill and no other, Senate Majority Leader Alben Barkley had to bite his fingernails and listen to an irrelevant two-hour neutrality harangue by North Dakota's Sen. Gerald P. Nye. Finally, after remarking quietly that "there seems to be some sort of an undercurrent that's causing this bill to drift," he dashed from the chamber and yelled at waiting reporters: "I don't know anything about anything!"

Finally passed and sent to the house, the emasculated measure looked something like this: (000,000 omitted)

| | Original Bill | Senate | House Committee |
|---|---|---|---|
| Road | $750 | Omitted | $500 |
| Farm Tenancy | 600 | $600 | 400 |
| Public Works | 350 | 350 | 350 |
| Electrification | 500 | 500 | 350 |
| Exports | 100 | 75 | 100 |
| Rail Equipment | 500 | Omitted | 250 |
| Reclamation | Omitted | 90 | Omitted |

The price Senator Barkley had to pay for his measure: (1) adoption of the amendment of Virginia's Harry Byrd removing tax exemption on government securities financing the project; (2) offering his own compromise amendment reducing Export-Import bank loans to $75,000,000 and providing all loans should be spent in the U. S.

AGRICULTURE:
Subsidies

Last year the U. S. agriculture department placed 118,000,000 bushels of wheat on the world market, losing an average of 27 cents a bushel in subsidies because U. S. prices were above world levels. This year world production will hit a new high and Liverpool prices have reached their lowest levels since 1592. Thus, to compete on the world market and still give farmers a fair price for exported wheat, the U. S. would suffer a subsidy loss of between 45 and 50 cents a bushel.

Offsetting bigger subsidies, however, is smaller domestic production. As Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace began estimating production, domestic consumption, required carryover and export surpluses, the picture looked brighter. Although a 100,000,000 export would cost the treasury between $45,000,000 and $50,000,000, the U. S. probably will not ask so great a share of the world market when the international wheat conference meets in London. To maintain a carryover of 175,000,000 to 200,000,000 bushels, an export of only 70,000,000 is needed. Thus, compared with the $31,860,000 spent on subsidies last year, a 50-cent subsidy this year would cost only $4,000,000 more.

Referendum

Only as a last resort does the agriculture department want to hold a referendum on corn marketing quotas for next year. With production estimates running high and flirting with the mandatory referendum figure, President Roosevelt signed an amendment to the AAA act allowing Secretary Wallace to delay the election, basing his decision on the crop board's September 1 report instead of the August 1 estimate. Other amendments, placing marketing quotas for wheat, corn and cotton all on a similar basis:

¶ Extend indefinitely the 10,000,000-bale minimum in establishing cotton acreage.

WHITE HOUSE:
Hatch Bill

Passed by both senate and house, the bill of New Mexico's Sen. Carl A. Hatch to "clean up" politics found its way to the President's desk for signing or veto. Its purpose: To remove influence or interference of all federal administrative officials from elections or nominating efforts for President. Its result: Incumbent federal administrations will find their personal payroller machines of little help at nomination or election time. But state machines will wield great power.

Whether he liked it or not, President Roosevelt told his press conference he favored the bill's "objectives," yet he feared it was unconstitutional because vaguely drawn. For example, what can people legitimately do under its very broad language? Can officeholders attend political rallies or voluntarily contribute to a friend's campaign expenditures? Pending a decision from Attorney General Frank Murphy, the bill awaited presidential action. If not signed or vetoed by August 3, Mr. Hatch's bill would become law

The White House also:

¶ Nominated James Lawrence Fly, TVA solicitor, to succeed much-persecuted Frank R. McNinch as a member of the federal communications commission.

¶ Ordered Secretary of State Cordell Hull to move from the second to the fourth floor of the old State, War and Navy building, making room for the six "assistant presidents" appointed under the reorganization bill, men with "a passion for anonymity."

RUSSIA:
Purge

In the U. S. an incompetent public official is demoted, or fired at the end of his term. In Soviet Russia, where Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinov disappeared mysteriously last May 3, public officials may expect a fate ranging from imprisonment or execution to exile in Siberia's wastelands.

Strangely coincidental as July neared its end were two bits of Russian news. In Moscow, Dictator Josef Stalin and his right-hand man,

CONSTANTIN OUMANSKY
Purgee?

Premier and Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov announced in the Official Gazette the names of 79 high military and diplomatic officials who had been "stripped of their decorations," i.e., placed under arrest, for "actions unworthy of order bearers." Biggest shakeup was in the Japanese-pestered Far East, where Gen. Grigorio Shtern (successor to the vanished Marshal Vassily Bluecher) was succeeded by General Popov.

The other bit of news was gathered from such widely separated points as Berlin, Rome, Washington, and Tokyo. In each case Soviet embassies reported their ambassadors missing. Washington's Constantin Oumansky, who sailed from New York July 5 for a "vacation" back home, had not been heard from since he watched Moscow's annual physical culture parade two weeks later. Best guesses held that Premier Molotov, who has been shaking up the Soviet's diplomatic service ever since he replaced Comrade Litvinov, is doing some more shaking up—possibly via the custom-tested purge route.

Short, Short Story
OR 1-2-3 SEQUENCE

1—SURRENDER. Quick on the heels of Jap-Chinese anti-British protests and Jap army barricade of British concessions in north China, Prime Minister Chamberlain ordered Ambassador Craigie to recognize the "new order in China" and to promise not to obstruct the Jap army in its undeclared war. Britain hoped thus to free her hands in Asia, meanwhile "detaching" Tokyo from the Rome-Berlin axis. But he was wrong.

2—PROTEST. In Washington, the state department tabulated more than 600 attacks on U. S. citizens in China the past two years. Gallup polls showed 72 per cent favoring an arms embargo against Japan. Petitions (above) rolled into Sen. Key Pittman of the foreign relations committee. Suddenly, as Britain surrendered, the U. S. abrogated its trade pact with Japan, paving the way for an arms embargo six months hence. Britain's foreign office called it "co-operation" but it was far from that. It was a U. S. protest against Britain's weakness.

3—REVENGE. At first stunned, then angry, Japan announced the price for a new trade treaty would be recognition of the "new order" in China. Then Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita (above), an ardent admirer of Hitler, suddenly initialed the long-pending trade pact with Germany, bringing Japan into the anti-Soviet axis with Italy and the Reich. Next she threatened abrogation of the dead nine-power pact guaranteeing China's integrity. Net result of all incidents: U. S., Britain, France and Russia inadvertently found themselves aligned against Japan, Germany and Italy.

ASTRONOMY: ### Silence

At New York's World fair the management ordered a "blackout" and anti-aircraft defense against Martian invaders, but concessionaires wouldn't co-operate. At Mendoz, Argentina, an earthquake was blamed on Mars' proximity. At Bloemfontein, South Africa, scientists thought they found millions of square miles of snow on Mars' surface, but it melted in two days.

Cause of all this concern was the planet's approach to within a mere 36,000,000 miles of the earth, closest in 15 years. At Baldwin, N. Y., home of Press Wireless, Inc., Dr. Clyde Fisher of the American Museum of Natural History led an attempt to contact Mars. Figuring it would take 6½ minutes for a radio message to bounce back to earth if it hit Mars square on the nose, scientists Morse coded the letter "N," waited the allotted time and got nothing but cat-like squeals.

As a last effort they tried swing music. That, too, failed to penetrate and Mars began fading into the distance, still an enigma.

MILK STILL RATES AS PERFECT FOOD

Nutrition Studies Disclose High Vitamin Content.

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN

In the last quarter century the field of nutrition has advanced more than in all the previous centuries of mankind. In that advance milk has held its place as the most nearly perfect food. From the point of view of protein and of fat, of mineral salts and of vitamins, it stands supreme. True, milk is somewhat deficient in vitamin C, in vitamin D, and in iron, but these values are easily supplied and no other food gives as much as milk for the money.

If there is any other highly important fact which our studies have revealed, it is that ordinarily we do not consume as much milk as we should, being led frequently by improper advice to other foods not nearly as efficient in human nutrition. Yet one-fifth of the food budget of the average American family is used for milk and milk products.

So important is milk for the human being that the health section of the League of Nations has recently made available a study of this product by a committee with representatives from Denmark, Holland, England, and France. It may surprise many Americans to relize that the milk supply in most foreign countries does not approximate in its general safety the average milk supply of the United States.

In many countries it has been customary to gloss over the unsatisfactory contents of the milk supply with the assurance that the benefits to health resulting from increased consumption will outweigh the danger of drinking milk that is not hygienic. In this country we know that the development of a good milk supply begins back on the farm with the cows and the quality of feed given to the cows.

Farmers Should Study Tractor Operating Cost

Two factors are important in tractor costs. One is the number of hours used, the other, economical loading. The first entails a study of the machine's varied uses, and of the possibility of increasing these uses. The latter necessitates a study of the draft requirement of different implements, and the ways and means of devising tractor hookups.

An example will help to make this point clear. A 14-inch moldboard plow at a certain depth will have a draft of 600 pounds. A one-way plow 14 inches wide would require a pull of about 250 pounds, while that width of spike-tooth harrow has a draft of only slightly more than 50 pounds.

Such a variation is true of all field implements and to load a tractor of a certain size economically, the operator must know the approximate draft of each tool.

Tractor engineers and farm management experts agree that each tractor owner should make a study of his machine to determine what will be an economical load, and then eliminate as much as possible the application of hitches with lower draft requirements. Manufacturers of tractors can furnish approximate figures on draft for each machine.

Milk for Diet

Although milk is considered by scientists as nature's "most nearly" perfect food, it can supply the nutritive requirements of a mature body for a long period of time without other supplement. The proof of this is well illustrated in the case of John Flaherty, a tailor in Niles, Ohio, whose diet for the past 20 years consisted only of milk. Mr. Flaherty recently died at the ripe old age of 75 years. He began the "all milk" diet in 1917 as a result of a stricture of the esophagus, which he contributed to an overdose of serum in inoculation during the war. From 1917 until his death he drank only a quart of milk a day.

★ A Picture Without Men
★ Remembered for Another ★ Right Up Raft's Alley

By Virginia Vale

"THE Women," the movie version of the very successful play of the same name, is going to be something to see. Norma Shearer, Rosalind Russell and Joan Crawford head the cast, which includes those excellent actresses, Phyllis Povah and Florence Nash, and one hundred others, all girls.

Women will want to see the picture, if only to see the clothes—super-special frocks have been whipped up for their benefit. One of Joan Crawford's is black velvet, split to the waistline, and worn over very tight black knickers.

And men will want to see it, both to see some of our best screen actresses trying to outshine each other, and to see what cut-throat

If there were any other cut-throat battles while the picture was being made—little things like arguments over billing, scene-stealing, and things like that—the great public will never know.

Roscoe Karns has played featured roles in more than 100 motion pictures, but is best remembered for one he didn't play, in a series of pictures in which he didn't appear.

For years his friends and his fans have insisted on remembering him as the fight manager in the "Leather Pusher" series, in which Reginald Denny starred. But it was not Karns, but Hayden Stevenson, who played the fight manager. The two men don't even faintly resemble each other.

Karns is mystified, but at last is resigned. Just the other day, when he arrived at the studio to work in "Everything's on Ice," an assistant cameraman hailed him with, "It's been a long time, Roscoe, since we worked in the 'Leather Pushers' together!"

George Raft's performance in the new James Cagney picture, "Each Dawn I Die," won him a new contract and an assignment to do a remake of "The Patent Leather Kid" (in which Richard Barthelmess once made a come-back,) as his first picture. He is to make three a year. The hero of the picture is a prize-fighter, which is right up the Raft alley—in his days as a fighter he fought 22 professional bouts.

Capt. Pickett's action was not only a violation of the treaties between the United States and Great Britain in regard to settlement of disputes over title to the northwestern country, but, all in all, it was a most unheard-of proceeding.

Sir James Douglas had at his disposal enough troops to sweep the insignificant little American force into the sea and if the Yankees were foolish enough to resist, they would jolly well deserve the treatment that they got, etc., etc., etc. All of which was duly reported to Captain Pickett who calmly went ahead putting his camp in order.

British Warship Appears.

On July 30 his orderly told him that a ship was in sight and at the same time handed him a letter. When Pickett stepped out of his tent he saw a British warship bearing down upon the island. It was the Tribune, a 31-gun frigate from the naval station at Esquimalt near Victoria.

This looked as though the British really meant to make good their threats. But Pickett was undaunted by this show of force. Ordering his men to run their only piece of artillery, a little six-pounder, to a place where it could sweep the island's only wharf he instructed his force of 66 men to stand to arms, ready for instant action.

But suddenly the sails of the Tribune were furled and she dropped anchor, broadside on, a short distance off shore. There she lay grim and foreboding while Pickett, seeing that no immediate trouble was likely, tore open the envelope the orderly had handed him. In it was a letter from the agent of the Hudson's Bay company informing him that San Juan island belonged to the company and ordering him to leave immediately. If he did not, the letter said, the company would appeal to the civil authorities at Victoria to force him to go.

The captain wrote a letter in reply in which he denied the right of the Hudson's Bay company to dictate his course of action, pointed out that he was there upon orders from his government and affirmed his intention of staying until he was recalled by the same authority. Then he wrote a report of what had happened to Harney and ended it with a request for a supply of window sashes and doors which he said were needed to make his men comfortable during the autumn and winter!

On August 3 two more British warships dropped anchor alongside the Tribune. They were the Satellite, 21 guns, and the Plumper, 10 guns. Pickett's only response to this bigger threat was to bring up two mountain howitzers, place them beside his six-pounder and train them on the ships.

Thereupon Captain Hornby, the senior British naval officer, invited the American captain to come aboard the Tribune for a conference on this matter of who owned San Juan island. Pickett declined the invitation but asked the three naval captains to a conference in his camp. His invitation was accepted and the British officers demanded that the United States troops be withdrawn.

When Pickett declined to do that they next proposed that troops of both nations occupy the island jointly Pickett refused to accept any such arrangement and added that until he could communicate with his government and receive its instructions on the matter, he would oppose with force any attempt of the British to land troops on the island.

Seeing that they could neither bluff nor persuade the American captain, the Britons returned to their ships The parting was amicable enough, with many expressions of respect and esteem on both sides. Meanwhile the H. B. C. had been busy and prevailed upon the civil authorities of British Columbia to summon him to appear before a Victoria magistrate Pickett's reply to that move is not recorded in the official correspondence of this whole affair—it was probably a bit too warm to be entrusted to paper.

A week passed with the British on Vancouver island in a turmoil over the situation. Pickett calmly sat tight as though unaware of all the fuss that his British neighbors were making. It was all rather ludicrous but it is doubtful if Pickett's men saw the humor of the situation. There was no telling when the British might launch an attack.

A Critical Situation.

Of course, if they did, the first shot fired would be a declaration of war and would brand them as the aggressors. But that would be small comfort to the 66 infantrymen if a blast from the British cannon snuffed out their lives. They probably thought of that when two more British ships joined the three already at anchor off the island. Now there was a force of five ships, carrying 167 guns and 2,140 men, 600 of them marines and engineer troops, trying to intimidate them and force them to evacuate the island.

But the British evidently didn't realize the caliber of this man Pickett. He just wouldn't be bluffed! Neither would General Harney who, from distant Fort Vancouver, sent dispatches by the Shubrick, a small vessel commanded by Captain Alden of the United States navy, approving of Pickett's action and taking the responsibility if an armed clash should result. He also engaged in a fierce but dignified correspondence with Governor Douglas in which he steadfastly maintained his right to keep his troops on the island.

On August 10 the tension lessened somewhat for Pickett when reinforcements, consisting of four companies of infantry, commanded by Lieut. Col. Silas Casey of the Ninth infantry and a battery of eight 32-pounders arrived at San Juan. Because of a dense fog they could not get up to the wharf near which lay the British men-of-war. So they landed on the beach a short distance away and the first intimation that the British had of the arrival of help for the Americans was when they saw their tents pitched beside those of Pickett's 66 men. With the arrival of the lieutenant-colonel, the young lieutenant's responsibility ended, for Casey immediately assumed command of the whole force on the island. Four days later three more companies of infantry arrived. With the opposing forces more nearly equal, the danger of a conflict was lessened.

Eventually the diplomats arranged for a joint occupation of the island by both nations, each keeping one company of soldiers there. But when the final settlement was made San Juan island became a part of Oregon territory. Today it is a part of the state of Washington.

The San Juan island pig, whose death nearly precipitated a war between the United States and Great Britain, wasn't the first to be the central figure in an "international incident." Just 100 years ago there was a similar case down in Texas.

At that time Texas was a republic to which the United States, England and France sent official representatives. The French charge d' affairs was Count Dubois de Saligny who, upon his arrival in Austin in 1839, lodged at the leading hostelry kept by James Bullock. After a time the French diplomat called for his bill. When it was presented he declared indignantly that it was too high and refused to pay it.

So arbitrators were appointed and they reduced the bill to a sum which Bullock refused to accept because he said it was much too low. Meanwhile De Saligny had moved from the hotel to a wooden structure which became the official French embassy building. Being a fastidious gentleman, the count furnished it beautifully and had his servants cultivate an attractive garden around it.

Not only did Mr. Bullock run the principal hotel but he also owned a number of hogs which he permitted to roam at large. One morning Count de Saligny glanced out his window and was horrified to see some of the Bullock hogs rooting in his garden. He hastily sent his servants to scare them away. But no sooner had they returned to the house than the hogs returned to the garden. Again they were chased out and the count, thoroughly exasperated by this time, gave his servants orders to shoot every pig that ventured into his garden thereafter.

A short time later Bullock missed some of his hogs and, blaming the French diplomat for the loss, complained to the government of Texas. James S. Mayfield, secretary of state, addressed a formal inquiry to the count. In reply the Frenchman wrote bitterly of his sufferings "from the many hogs with which this town is infested" and particularly those of Mr. Bullock. He declared that his servants had used no less than 140 pounds of nails in repairing the palings of his fence "which these animals have thrown down for the purpose of eating the corn of my horses and destroying my garden." But he didn't deny responsibility for the disappearance of Bullock's hogs.

Thereupon the keeper of the hostelry flew into a rage and when he encountered Eugene Pluyette, one of the count's servants, on the street he gave the man a thrashing. The result was a formal demand by De Saligny upon the secretary of state for protection due a foreign minister and his retinue. Although Bullock was indicted for the assault it was evident that the Texas officials were sympathetic to him and had little intention of punishing him.

Irritated by their stalling tactics, De Saligny complained to the French government. But he soon had an even more serious matter to report. The choleric Mr. Bullock proceeded next to thrash the French emissary himself. When the officials of Texas refused to take official cognizance of this attack, the indignant count rushed off another complaint to Paris, pointing out how the honor of dignity of France itself had been injured by this ruffian of a hotelkeeper.

More than that he announced to his friends in Austin that the French government was sending a fleet of warships to the Texas coast to see that proper apologies were made for the humiliating assault upon the honor of France. Next he demanded his passports and went to New Orleans to await developments.

It so happened that about this time the government of the United States sent a squadron of its warships to the Gulf of Mexico. Whether this was done as a warning to France, which may or may not have intended to make good De Saligny's threat, is unknown. But the fact remains that no French warships appeared off the coast of Texas although it is a matter of record that, because of the indignities which her ambassador had suffered, France declined to make a loan of $5,000,000 which Texas was trying to float in that country at that time.

BEVERAGE ALCOHOL AND THE COMMUNITY

LESSON TEXT—Joel 1:5-7; Daniel 5:1-5, 17, 25-28.

GOLDEN TEXT—Woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink.—Habakkuk 2:15.

"None of us liveth to himself" (Rom. 14:7).

What concerns the individual concerns the community, for the community is made up of individuals. The man who uses alcohol has no right to claim that it is a personal matter, for alcohol is a poisonous drug which not only injures the individual, but makes him a danger and a liability to his community. Before going into our lesson let us look at only a few of the many facts available.

In the five years since repeal, it is estimated that $30,000,000,000 has been spent for intoxicants with a profit to the industry of $13,250,000,000. But what has it cost the people?

"In 1937, an entire city the size of Detroit was maimed and injured, and an entire city the size of Omaha was permanently injured, by the automobile. Sixty per cent of auto fatalities are due to alcohol" (Chief Justice of Municipal Court, Evanston, Ill.).

"Rape has increased 13 per cent and the more atrocious forms 40 per cent in the last eight months" (Police Commissioner, Boston, Mass.).

"Criminals are for the return of liquor, wet propaganda to the contrary notwithstanding, and with the coming of repeal will come the greatest era of wholesale crime this country has ever known. The criminal world is tensely expectant and is prepared to launch immediately into its millennium of crime. The return of the saloon inevitably will bring open prostitution and gambling" (Statement by a criminal in prison before repeal became effective).

"America is on the worst gambling spree in its history. A gross population, not including all rural districts, of 80,000,000 persons is dallying with $6,000,000,000 in winnings and losings, of which all but about $1,000,000,000 passes through the hands of the underworld, where much of it remains" (Courtney R. Cooper).

The American Business Men's foundation, Chicago, reports that liquor was responsible for the rejection of more than 93,000 applications for insurance last year, and that as a result widows and orphans will ultimately be deprived of over $200,000,000 of insurance, making some of them public charges.

Three words which are altogether appropriate for the liquor problem will serve to summarize our lesson.

I. Devastation (Joel 1:5-7).

Drunkards are called on to awake from their stupor and weep and the drinkers of wine (note that!) to wail over the loss of their drink because of the devastation wrought by the locusts. This plague had come because of the sins of the people, and may well serve to exemplify the devastation which will follow the use of alcohol as a beverage. The nations of our day need not think that they will escape if they continue on their present road of reckless indulgence.

II. Debauchery (Dan. 5:1-4).

The familiar story of Belshazzar's feast should be made to live again as we point out that we here "have vividly manifested three of the great characteristics of the day in which we live—a coming together of great multitudes for a riotous night of drinking, which must of course end for many in disgusting drunkenness; provision for acts of darkest sensuality in the fact that all the wives and concubines were invited to this feast . . . and a contemptuous, deliberate insulting of the name of God" (Dr. Wilbur M. Smith).

III. Death (vv. 5, 17, 25-28).

Dramatically swift was God's judgment upon Belshazzar's presumptuous sin. Magnificently bold and direct was the condemnation by Daniel, the prophet of God. Relentless was the immediate judgment of physical death (see v. 30), and equally sure is the ultimate judgment when the drunken king stands before his Maker to answer for the deeds done in the flesh.

The fact that God does not write in our day in flaming letters on the saloon wall before the bleary eyes of the drinker does not mean that His judgment is any less certain, nor does it make it less dreadful.

Cost of Happiness

God has ordained that happiness, like every other good thing, should cost us something; He has willed that it should be a moral achievement, and not an accident.—Dr. Gasparin.

Walk in the Light

Walk in the light and thou shalt see thy path, though thorny, bright; for God, by grace, shall dwell in thee, and God himself is light.—Barton.

By H. A. Grantham

Opinions expressed herein are those of the writer and should not be construed as reflecting the policy of the Republican State Central Committee, any individual or group, or the newspaper in which this column appears.

INTERSTATE CO-OPERATION

When Governor Wilson announced his committee on interstate co-operation, it included only four members instead of five. This is because the legislature specified that one appointment should go to the head of the planning board or corresponding official of the state government. The legislature, after passing the resolution, abolished the planning board, which employed 13 persons, and the governor found no "corresponding official." The other appointments were specified, the comptroller and the attorney general. The other appointments could have been made any citizen of the state, but the governor chose the state treasurer and the secretary of agriculture because of their numerous relationships with other states. The commission, including five senators and five representatives, works without pay and is a part of the council of state governments, an organization in which all states cooperate in the interests of uniform legislation and exchange of data.

ONLY ONE PARDON

In several cases Governor Wilson has been reported as issuing "pardons," but the files of the governor's office reveal only one pardon issued, and it was not for the purpose of returning a convicted criminal to his haunts. The case was that of a bell boy who was to have been given a suit of clothes for taking care of a drunk in pre-prohibition days, only to find himself accused later of larcency of the suit, a charge to which he pled guilty. He since became a respectable citizen, married and raised a family during the last 20 years, and found out upon entering Canada recently that he was not a United States citizen. His father had come to this country when the boy was 2 years old. While he had received a final discharge from the late Governor Harding, the pardon saved him from deportation to Italy, a country with which he was not familiar and whose language he could not speak. In cases of final discharges from parole granted by the governor, the law directs that the governor "shall" issue the discharge upon recommendation of the parole board. In case of county jail paroles, they have been issued only upon the recommendation of the proper county officials, the records show.

MORE SAVINGS

While Governor Wilson's insistence upon economy in government has already borne much fruit, with every department showing an appreciable saving in operating costs under the present administration, more savings are in sight under the operation of the "car dispatcher" systemized supervision of all state-owned automobiles. After the governor had taken his oath of office one of his first official acts was to put an end to the previous administration's policy of "a car in the garage of every official who asked for one." Many expensive deluxe model cars were retired from service. as the governor set the pace by driving his own modest car rather than use the Cadillac driven by the previous governor for his personal use. No longer did either appointive or elective public servants ride regally to and from work at state expense. Now, under a program that follows closely that under which numerous private concerns operate large fleets of automobiles, the administration will know (and the information will be public property) just where state-owned cars are being operated and for what. Thus another hap-hazard method of handling state business goes into the discard under the insistence of Governor Wilson and is replaced by a business-like system that will mean a very ubstantial saving of taxpayers' money.

NOT "YES-MEN"

The Executive Council, composed of Governor Wilson, Secretary of State Miller, Auditor of State Akers, Treasurer of State Bagley and Secretary of Agriculture Thornburg, is not a "Yes Man's" organization. The Council, which must approve all expenditures of public monies, does not pass over lightly the requests that are made by the various departments of state government. Council members are not so parsimonious as to veto expenditures to the point of hampering efficiency, but they insist on evidence that these expenditures are necessary to properly transact the public business. Many a department head has felt the economy lash when a requisition for some "frills" has reached the council. No frills with state funds has been and is the council policy.

TAG ENDS

Indications are that when the new administration's policy of eliminating useless employes reaches into all departments, a half-million dollar annual payroll savings may be effected . . . . . There were 523 state cars in use, outside the highway commission, at the end of last year, and the number probably will be cut more than 100 . . . . . Current Federal debt total $40,654,313,388.59 . . . your share $312.72.

POULTRY OUTLOOK ISN'T TOO BRIGHT

Flocks Of Both Layers And Young Chicks Larger Than Last Year

The outlook for poultry producers improved slightly during July, but poultrymen are still in a less favorable position than at this time a year ago.

Farmers are raising about 3 per cent more chickens this year than in 1938. Economists in the Extension Service of Iowa State College point out that this means poultry marketings will continue heavier than a year earlier for the next few months.

Prices To Continue Low

Chickens sold this fall will meet more competition from turkeys and other meats than a year ago. In addition, storage stocks of poultry are much heavier this year. Demand, the economists believe, will probably improve too slowly to offset the effect of these larger supplies on prices this fall. The outlook is for prices to continue below the levels of a year earier.

Egg production is declining seasonally as the summer advances, but hens are still laying heavily for this time of year. Receipts of fresh eggs at the principal markets were heavier last month than a year ago at the same time. The economists expect this situation to continue through the fall. for farm flocks contained 4 per cent more layers on July 1 of this year than on the same date a year earlier

Egg Production Heavy

Present storage stocks of eggs are not excessive, but the outlook for relatively heavy production during the fall and winter is having a depressing effect on storage demand. Government purchases through the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation have helped support egg prices for the last two months. Egg prices are several cents lower now than a year ago, and a smaller than usual seasonal rise is in prospect for the late summer and early fall.

We were well pleased with prices for fall—Furniture and Rugs of good quality at less than we expected to pay. We had intended to buy "light" for fall as we have quite a heavy stock on hand, but we changed our mind and bought "heavy."

Our first carload for fall will arrive about September 1st.

LITTLE DAUGHTER OF MR. AND MRS. WALTER HENSCHEN WILL BE BURIED HERE FRIDAY

The little girl had been playing about as Mr and Mrs. Henschen were doing the evening chores when the body was found at about 6 30 o'clock The parents had seen the child playing about the yard only ten minutes before the accident.

When the frantic parents discovered the accident they rushed the child to a physician but she could not be revived Coroner Kenneth Boughton of Britt was called and proclaimed the case one of accidental drowning

Funeral services will be held for Darlean Joan Friday afternoon at 2 00 o clock at the Klemme Reformed Church with Rev Calvin Grosshuesch preaching the sermon Arrangements are in charge of the Wellemeyer Funeral Service of Klemme

Besides her parents the little girl leaves two brothers, Walter Calvin, age five weeks; and Norman Eugene, age three and a half, and her grandparents, Mr and Mrs E C Henschen of Klemme and other relatives

Who'll Set the Record?

An easy way to get an argument started is to ask who has the tallest corn in Iowa At Winterset last week, W W Brown produced a stalk thirteen and one-half feet in height. This paper is wondering who will set the Iowa record this year (The line forms to the left!)

No Sideshows.

People still like good, claen fun. At West Des Moines last week, 2,500 townspeople and farmers turned out for a community picnic, staged without beneift of ferris wheels, merry-go-rounds, strip-tease acts or concessions. Last year the festival, staged without attractions other than such home-grown events as slipper-kicking and hog calling contests, attracted over 2,300 people It's a "city" town, too.

Sweet Tooth.

Marion county chinch bugs have won the Iowa title for just pure meanness. Early this spring they ate up a sorghum field of the Slack brothers. The field was re-seeded and was coming along nicely until recently, when the bugs suddenly descended and ate it up again. Eating field corn is bad enough but when chinch bugs threaten the future of Iowa's famous flapjacks and sorghum, they are going to far.

Crash Fatal.

When Oscar Anderson, of Meriden, used his trailer last week to haul dirt, he warned a group of youngsters not to "hook rides" in the vehicle, then drove away for another load. A few minutes later, his companion, Herbert Gibson, looked back and saw that the trailer had uncoupled. Anderson drove back over the route and came upon the trailer, which had collided sharply with a stockyard chute Near the wreckage lay fatally injured 12 year old Garland Adler, who had been a "stowaway" in the trailer box.

The Mediterranean is the only one sea that has been contemporary with all history The Pacific and the Atlantic have been known to travelers for less than a thousand years but the Mediterranean has been the great sea from the unremembered past. Discovery of Felt

It is said that felt came to be because of a weary, footsore monk Back in the days of William the Conqueror, when pilgrimages were in vogue, St Feutre, tired and footsore, happened to pass a flock of sheep. He plucked a few handfuls of wool from their backs and placed it inside his shoes, praying for a miracle to show that God did not object Lo and behold, at the end of his journey he removed his shoes and found the miracle! His feet had matted the wool into a new and hitherto unknown material—Felt. So goes the old legend

hic Fur Ingeniously Trims Gorgeous Woolens for Fall

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

N INGENIOUS and out-of-the-or- dinary use of fur trimmings is prospect for fall. As a matter of t, the vogue has not really been d back until the arrival of cool s, for during the summer, suits d ensembles of daintiest, sheerest ols in rapturous pastels highlight- with touches of delicately toned have held high favor with wom- who pride themselves on keeping e with the mode.

hen, too, "coming events cast ir shadows before" in advance season collections which include ny fascinating ensembles done in rring wools that are enhanced h lovely, lightsome fur after the nner of the stunning costume il- trated. Gaston of Paris designed handsome beige wool crepe en- ble trimming it with exquisite or-matched fox.

rom beginnings such as evi- ced in this fascinating ensemble vogue for fur trimmings is rap- developing into a passion for que and highly decorative treat- ts that will manifest itself in full e as the autumn and winter style gram unfolds.

reparatory to the coming call for trims that are distinctively new out of the ordinary, designers e put on their thinking caps in r to play up the idea in in- ous ways for it is said that em- is will be placed on unique hes of fur that have dramatic eal. For instance, such in- uing effects will be worked as -knot appliques of fur, bands of that outline the fronts of jackets ning pockets in cunningly ec- ric ways. The cuff-muff idea cute trick that cuffs bishop ves in fur flared from a tight t. The cuffs form a muff when hands are clasped together. n again the fur yoke, front or k, is worked in varied ways.

Cloth sleeves that are patterned all-over with applied huge polka dots of fur present an attractive new note. Then there are bindings and borderings galore together with swatches here and there in unexpected places that make for decorative and amusing fur fantasies.

However, not by any means does all the glory go to the furs that trim. They tell but half the story of the enchanting fashions under way for the new season. It's the perfect teamwork that carries on 50-50 between luxurious wool weaves plus dramatic fur trimmings.

That the forthcoming is going to be a season of luxuriant fabric there is no doubt and the new vintage of woolen materials gives emphasis to this forecast. It is said that plaids will be more conspicuously in the mode than ever, and when we say plaids as now are it means as resplendent an array as ere eye has seen. For the girl going away to school the cape costume pictured in the inset panel is enough to excite the envy of every sorority sister on the campus. The cape is fashioned of a strikingly handsome wool plaid. It tops a two-piece navy wool suit. The suit can be worn alone and the cape with other costumes. The fur that collars it adds chic and charm to a high degree.

In regard to the grand and glorious woolens that will feature for fall and winter it is said that vertical stripes in raised effects or contrasts of yarn are scheduled among weaves that will prove foremost in fashion. There are many mossy worsted crepes too that are highly attractive in the new wool fabric showings.

Lace-Top Dress

e of the most attractive fash- on the current style program is of the lace-top dress. The mod- ictured shown at a revue held he Style Creators of Chicago is ing to be one of the big suc- es of the season. It is liked par- arly, for worn with a jacket, ill carry on through midseason fall. It is navy for the corselet with white for the lace top. idea of the lace top admits ver- e interpretations.

Warm Honey Beige Smart Tan Shade

The "look pretty" edict this season extends to headgear, footgear and makeup. Though some well-tanned skins are seen (treated this year with a new shiny finish and no other makeup except vivid rouge), the most talked-of tan tint is a warm honey beige, made up with a little rouge, mat powder and colorful lipstick.

Heads are topped with peaked hoods attached to suits, wide hats and fishnet turbans caught with two big colored hairpins. Cork clogs and raffia sandals are seen on smart feet. Beach bags are bigger than ever, and can be liberally equipped with makeup to insure that pretty look.

Fetching Costume In White and Blue

White and deep blue linen are combined for a natty costume from Bruyere, the blue making the deep sailor on the jacket and the bodice of the dress. On the shoulder of the dress is a white anchor, embroidered, and the anchor on the jacket sleeve is blue outlined in red. The buttons are flat, of mother-of-pearl.

Gray Woolens High Style

Gray wool weaves that blend to gray furs will be featured this fall. The coming coats and suits stress the gray vogue.

Pain in Front Of Ear Often Boil Symptom

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON

A PATIENT may feel a little pain or soreness in the ear, which later becomes so severe that when he telephones his physician the latter has almost made up his mind that he will find a severe ear infection and that the very severe pain is likely due to the formation of pus in the mastoid—the spongy bone behind the ear.

TODAY'S HEALTH COLUMN

He finds the patient in great pain, but is relieved to find that the pain is not behind the ear, and the mastoid is not painful when pressed. The pain is really in or in front of the ear and is increased when he moves the ear about.

What is usually the trouble when the pain is in front of the ear, and moving the ear increases the pain?

These are symptoms of a furuncle or boil in the canal going in to the outer side of the drum of the ear—not in the ear proper at all. The pressure of the boil and the inflammation in this small round canal causes intense pain.

Dr. Barton

In speaking of these boils or furuncles in the outer ear canal, Dr. F. S. Wrigley, Manchester, in The Practitioner, says that the majority of cases do not call for operation and a soothing and "waiting" or palliative treatment often gives the better result. The canal should be packed with half-inch ribbon gauze moistened with some antiseptic preparation such as 2 per cent carbolic in glycerin, and fomentations (warm and moist medicated liquids) over the whole ear give greater relief than dry heat in any form

When the boil comes to a "head" and it can be seen to contain pus, opening should not be delayed. As opening a boil in this region is often very painful, Dr. Wrigley states that a general anaesthetic should always be given

Some physicians clean out the canal with equal parts of peroxide and warm water, dry the canal with absorbent cotton, and then insert a few drops of Keith's dressing (one part carbolic to 16 parts glycerin). If boil is small and "ready," it is opened with a wooden toothpick that has been dipped in carbolic.

It is important to remember that when pain is in and in front of the ear and is increased when ear is moved, the trouble is likely due to a boil in the canal.

Nerves Cause Many 'Symptoms'

It is only natural that a patient who is consulting his physician for all manner of small ailments causes the physician to feel that the patient is just nervous and "imagines" many of the symptoms of which he complains. And even when there is some slight organic condition present, such as a slight heart murmur, the physician knows from exercise or other tests that this condition is really causing no symptoms. The symptoms are due to nervousness.

Similarly with symptoms occurring m the stomach and intestines. "The digestive tract is so exceedingly sensitive to nervousness, worry, anger, and fatigue that the physician must learn something of the patient's temperament, of his sorrows and his problems of life in home, office, and shop. Actually, even when an organic disease is found, such as an ulcer in the duodenum (the first part of the small intestine into which the stomach empties) it still may be necessary for the physician to delve into the patient's private life to learn such things as financial reverses, domestic unhappiness, or bad nervous habits which commonly give rise to an ulcer of stomach or duodenum and later help to keep it active."

Tell Doctor Your Troubles.

In other words, it is the home, office, or shop life that is causing the symptoms whether or not the ulcer or other condition is present, and if present, is causing the symptoms to continue day after day and week after week. No medical or even surgical treatment can cure this condition as long as his nervousness and upsetments continue.

The thought then for patients is to tell their physician about the things that are worrying or upsetting them. The physician may be able to help the patient to overcome these conditions.

Of course, it is not hard for the physician to recognize the ordinary neurotic or fussy individual who is described by Dr Walter Alvarez, Mayo clinic, thus:

"We physicians all dread meeting the woman with so many complaints that she comes to the first interview with a written list of them; we know immediately that she hasn't much seriously wrong with her and we know that our treatment is not likely to be of much help to her."

SANDWICHES MAINSTAYS OF SUMMER MENUS
(See Recipe Below)

'Make Mine a Ham on Rye'

Sandwiches in all their delightful variety are the mainstays of summer menus. Grilled sandwiches make a "one-dish meal" for lunch or supper; substantial sandwiches with hearty fillings make a satisfying picnic lunch; and dainty "tea sandwiches," served with a frosted beverage, are perfect for a party.

But it keeps a woman's wits working overtime to provide sandwiches that are new and different! And new and different they must be, if they're to retain the appetite appeal which makes them popular.

Success With Sandwiches.

1. Use bread that is a day old.
2. Cream the butter—don't melt it.
3. Whatever the filling, use plenty of it.
4. Keep sandwiches moist for several hours by wrapping them in wax paper or in a clean cloth wrung out of hot water.
5. Remember to use a variety in breads, as well as fillings—whole wheat, rye, graham, oatmeal, brown bread, raisin bread, nut bread and orange bread all make delicious sandwiches.
6. Use left-over sandwiches for next day's lunch or supper by "french toasting" them—merely dip the sandwiches in beaten egg, pan fry them on both sides, and serve hot with a garnish of watercress or sweet pickle.

Raisin Orange Filling for Sandwiches.
(Makes 8-10 sandwiches)

2 cups raisins
2 teaspoons grated orange rind
4 tablespoons orange juice

Grind the raisins, add orange rind and juice and blend well. Use with white or whole wheat bread.

Banana Butter Filling.
(Makes 1 cup filling)

1 ripe banana
½ cup peanut butter
¼ cup dates (cut fine)
1 teaspoon lemon juice

Mash banana with a fork and thoroughly blend in remaining ingredients.

Mayonnaise Sandwich Loaf.

1 loaf bread
1 head lettuce
½ cup boned chicken
½ cup mayonnaise dressing
3 slices broiled bacon
1 medium sized tomato
¾ package cream cheese
1 tablespoon prepared mustard
Ripe olives
Celery

Remove crusts and slice a medium sized loaf of bread lengthwise in three long slices. Place crisp lettuce leaves on the slice and add a layer of boned chicken. Spread a second slice of bread with mayonnaise and place dressing side down, on the chicken. Add crisp broiled bacon and thin sliced tomatoes as the sandwich filling on this second layer. Spread tomatoes with mayonnaise dressing and top with third long slice of bread. Mix 3 to 4 packages softened cream cheese with one tablespoon prepared mustard and frost the loaf. Garnish with ripe olives and parsley. Slice as for any ordinary loaf of bread. Serve on individual plates.

Hot Peanut Butter Sandwiches.

Toast 5 slices of bread on one side only. Then spread untoasted side with ½ cup peanut butter, and then with ¼ cup chili sauce. Top with slices of bacon and broil slowly until bacon is slightly browned and crisp. Serve with gherkin pickle fans.

Sandwich Spread.

2 teaspoons dry mustard
¼ cup sugar
¾ teaspoon salt
¼ cup milk
2 eggs (slightly beaten)
¼ cup vinegar
2 teaspoons lemon juice
6 tablespoons soft butter
1 3-ounce package cream cheese
¼ cup pimiento (chopped)
¼ cup olives (chopped)
2 tablespoons pickle (chopped)
1 tablespoon green pepper (chopped)

In a double boiler place the mustard, sugar, salt and milk. Blend in eggs and vinegar, and cook, stirring constantly, until thickened. Remove from flame, and add remaining ingredients. Store in refrigerator until using.

Savory Sandwich Filling.

1 pound American cheese
¼ pound dried beef
1 cup condensed tomato soup

Run cheese and beef through food chopper, then moisten with the tomato soup. You will find that this filling will keep indefinitely if stored in the refrigerator.

WORTH REMEMBERING

Brown paper moistened in vinegar will polish tins until they shine like silver.

Save all paraffin as you remove it from your preserves and jelly.

A man's pipe cleaner makes an excellent device for cleaning the spout of the coffee or tea pot.

Emptying a cream whipper and bowl is wasteful unless one takes time to scrape them carefully.

To prevent sugar from forming in preserves or jam, add a teaspoon of corn sirup to the contents of each pint.

When the faucets in your bathroom need polishing take a soft cloth wet in kerosene and it will brighten them instantly without injury.

Instead of peeling whole apples, first cut them in half, then in quarters, cut out the core and then peel. This is a great time saver.

Instead of peeling potatoes or scraping carrots, scrub same with a chore ball, and skins will come off easily without waste.

For a Higher Effect

Interior decorators have now decided that the use of a deep color on ceilings raises them, instead of lowers, as has been usually thought. A new trick is to carry the side wall paper up onto the ceiling about 10 inches, instead of dropping the ceiling color down on the sides. This creates an optical illusion of greater height.

IOWA MAN WINS TROPHY FOR WORK WITH HORSES

Fifty years of "horsing" bring E. L. Humbert, Corning, Iowa, a silver trophy, acclaim, and the title of Achievement Percheron breeder awarded annually by the Percheron Horse Association of America for outstanding contributions in horse breeding He will be honored at a banquet Wednesday, August 30, at the national Percheron show at St. Paul, Minn, where a portrait of him will be unveiled and a silver loving cup presented in recognition of his achievements. The portrait later will hang in the association's Chicago headquarters

Mr Humbert is probably the longest record for Percheron breeding in America He began in 1885, three years after his father brought the first imported French Percherons into southern Iowa. Since then he has registered 444 purebred colts. His horses have won many championships, notably his famous stallion Egotist, son of a $40,000 horse.

The honor comes to Mr. Humbert as Percheron breeders celebrate the centennial of Percheron breeding in America. Just 100 years ago the first shipment of Percherons was made to this country by an American who took a fancy to the dapple gray and black draft horses pulling his coach as he travelled through France. Since then 233,000 Percherons have been recorded by the American Percheron association. More than 50,000 are now worked on American farms according to the federal bureau of statistics

Government Will Aid Deserving Farmers

REHABILITATION LOANS AVAILABLE TO HANCOCK COUNTY FARMERS

Hancock County has been assured of its part in the Rural Rehabilitation phase of the Farm Security Administration program for the year ending June 30, 1940. Farm Security Administration funds have been made available for this year's lending program according to a statement made this week by F Lee Stewart, Hancock County Rural Rehabilitation Supervisor at Mason City, Iowa.

Rehabilitation loans are made to farmers, farm laborers and share croppers who need operating capital in order to farm successfully, but who lack sufficient security to borrow from the usual credit agencies. Every loan made by the Farm Security Administration is accompanied by assistance in farm and home management. Emphasis is placed on the "Family-sized farm" operated on a plan which will yield a good living off the farm in addition to enough to repay the loan and provide permanent security. Every loan is repayable in not more than 5 years, with interest at 5 per cent on the unpaid balance and is secured by a chattel mortgage on all personal property.

"The Farm Security Administration," erplained Mr. Stewart, "is interested in helping worthy families who cannot get help elsewhere That takes planning in advance It is not too early now too early now to begin laying plans for next year. Farmers who are having difficult problems may be able to solve them by starting early The service of the Farm Security Administration is available to eligible farmers, and the office at Mason City, Iowa is ready to take applications for loans.

For the convenience of borrowers from the Mason City office of the Farm Security Administration, Mr. Stewart announces the following schedule. Mason City office Monday all day and Saturday forenoon of each week. Forest City each Tuesday forenoon at 10:00 A. M. in the Court House. Mr. Stwart suggests that those wishing information or help contact him on those days at the most convenient place.

LOCAL SOFTBALL TEAM LOST TO KANAWHA TEN

Lost 5 To 1 In Second Round Of Tournament At Corwith

Thursday night the Klemme softball team journeyed to Corwith to play a second round game with Kanawha in the tournment there. Everything was rosy except for one bad inning, and we do mean bad. No one seems to know just how it happened, but Kanawha scored 5 runs in that one inning and then held the locals to one lone run during the remainder of the game.

Blank pitched well for Kemme and he was given good support . . . except for that one inning when pitching and fielding both went to pieces. He allowed only five hits. Einhuis was on the mound for Kanawha and backed by almost errorless fielding, turned in a fine game. Klemme got to him for eight hits, but they were too widely scattered to do any damage.

Finals Rained Out

The final games of the tournament, which were to have been played off Friday evening, were rained out. There are two games yet to be played, the consolation final between Klemme and Pioneer of Algona, and the championship final between Kanawha and White Rose of Algona.

Thornton Tournament Postponed

The softball tournament that was to have been held at Thornton, Sunday, was rained out and has been postponed until this coming Sunday. Klemme meets Belmond at 12 o'clock, noon, in a first round game.

BUSY BEES BUZZ

The Liberty Busy Bees 4-H Club held their August meeting at the home of Mildred Goll. Eleven members answered roll call by telling what they were making for Achievement Day. During the meeting plans were made for Achievement Day and the demonstration team, Jean Ardith Griffen and Lorraine Bredlow demonstrated on portfolios. The meeting was adjourned and lunch was served by the hostess.

Mr. and Mrs. John Larson and Lenora were guests for dinner Sunday at the Harry Larson home.

Early Reports Indicate Iowa Will Lead Nation In Corn Production

CAN APPLY PAINT WELL DURING FALL

Wood Needs To Be Dry And Weather Fair, Van Vlack Warns

Farm owners who contemplate painting some of their buildings can accomplish satisfactory results by painting this fall if care is taken to avoid painting over damp wood, says C. H Van Vlack, extension agricultural engineer at Iowa State College, in a new bulletin now availabe, "Selecting and Applying Paints."

Outside painting should be done during fair weather, Van Vlack says During periods of high humidity painting should be avoided. The weather and the surface should both be dry and the temperature should be above 40 degrees F. Paint is thinner when warm, and this permits better working into the wood. If the weather is too hot paint may "crawl." An attempt should be made to avoid painting when insects are numerous or when dust may be blown badly.

Read Paint Label

Before buying any paint it is advisable to know of what the paint is made. Van Vlack suggests Most reliable paint manufacturers are printing, as part of their label on the paint can, the name and amount, on a percentage basis, of each kind of pigment and liquid used in making paint. If the formula is not attached there may be doubt about the quality of the paint

Some Contain Water

To be really durable, house paints should contain not less than 40 per cent nor more than 60 per cent liquid by weight. The formulas should not have excessive amounts of high percentage low-grade and transparent liquids and pigments.

In identifying cheap liquids some of the common names that may be found in the formula label are fish oil, oriental oil, "paint oil," "boiled oil" (other than linseed), mineral spirits, volatile oil and water.

Some inferior paints contain as much as 35 per cent water, indicated on the formula as just water or one of the following: "Emlusified solution," "collodial solution," "solution" or "aqueous body agent."

Copies Available

Van Vlack says that no more than a trace of water should be found in formulas of exterior paint

Two-thirds of a paint job on a building in the labor cost, and it is time and money wasted to use a low-grade, short-lived paint.

Copies of the new bulletin, "Selecting and Applying Paints," are available from the Extension Service of Iowa State College, Ames

ESTIMATE 465,072,000 CORN YIELD IN IOWA THIS YEAR

36 Cent Market Price Would Make Purchasing Power Of $167,425,920

DES MOINES—There can be no question but that corn is king in Iowa.

As of Aug. 1 statistical guesses indicated a yield of 465,72,000 bushels of the golden grain this year. At the 36 cent a bushel Iowa average market price on July 15. a potential farm purchasing power of at least $167,425,920 is to be seen.

Iowa's 214.000 farms have 9,791,000 acres planted to corn this year. about 18 per cent of the total corn crop of the United States. Her closest competitor for the corn-growing crown, Illinois, this year will produce about 16 per cent of the total, according to the estimate.

Nearly 30 per cent of all Iowa farm land is planted to corn annually. This year's estimated average yield an acre of 47 5 bushels may be contrasted with the 10 year, 1928-1939, average of 35.5 bushels an acre.

Between 80 and 85 per cent of Iowa's corn crop is fed on the farm to livestock. Commercial sales of corn alone on the market, representing the remaining 15 to 20 per cent, has averaged $52.000 000 a year over the 10 year period, 1924-1933.

The importance of corn placed indirectly on the market through feeding may be seen in the fact that of the 1938 cash farm income from all sources of $528 275 000, about 65 per cent or $325 000 000, came from sales of cattle, hogs and sheep.

In the six months period through June, 1939, sales of the three principal livestock products totaled $293,011,000 as compared with $251,311,000 during the same period last year, a gain of more than $40,000,000 this year

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS BY JOSEPH W. LaBINE

Anti-Administration Congress Hangs Up Paradoxical Record With Unprecedented Spending

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

CONGRESS:
'Res Ipse Loquitur'

"It speaks for itself," said Franklin Roosevelt in Latin after the house refused on roll call to pass his $800,000,000 bill expanding FHA's lending power. To both house and senate he forwarded "my good wishes for a pleasant vacation." Then he bundled up some 350 last-minute bills and left for Hyde Park while his loyal friend from Florida, Sen. Claude Pepper, was holding up adjournment by denouncing the "unrighteous partnership (Democratic-G. O. P. coalition) of those who have been willing to scuttle the American government . . . and jeopardize the peace of the world because they hate Roosevelt and what Roosevelt stands for."

But when the first session of the Seventy-sixth congress was safely

FLORIDA'S PEPPER
". . . willing to scuttle . . . jeopardize . . ."

packed away, observers meditated on its record: A rebellious, anti-White House gang had nevertheless appropriated the record-shattering peacetime total of $13,344,077,162 (see chart), including a last-minute $119,000,000 farm loan fund for the sake of quick adjournment. Appropriations tabulated:

|---|---|
| Relief, WPA | $ 725,000,000 |
| Relief (supplemental) | 100,000,000 |
| Relief (1940) | 1,755,600,000 |
| First deficiency | 23,765,041 |
| Independent offices | 1,668,218,340 |
| Legislative establishments | 21,851,779 |
| Treasury-post office | 1,700,615,054 |
| Military establishment: | |
| War department | 508,789,824 |
| Supplemental war department | 223,398,047 |
| Nonmilitary | 305,188,514 |
| Navy department | 773,049,151 |
| Second deficiency | 157,619,059 |
| Agriculture and Farm Credit | 1,194,498,633 |
| Interior Department | 172,679,765 |
| District of Columbia | 47,002,347 |
| Department of Labor | 30,536,170 |
| State-justice-commerce departments | 122,177,220 |
| Urgent deficiency | 3,099,377 |
| Third deficiency | 185,176,066 |
| Permanents and indefinites | 3,624,812,775 |
| Total | $13,344,077,162 |

Observers also examined the piece-by-piece record of legislation and found Franklin Roosevelt's early-session victories almost offset his late-session defeats, though they knew no switch back to the sentiment of last January is in prospect when a permanently anti-administration congress meets again next winter. The record:

White House Victories. Congress was not all bad to the President. The senate confirmed all but 10 of his 10,988 appointees (including New Dealish Supreme Court Justices Frankfurter and Douglas, equally New Dealish Commerce Secretary Hopkins and Attorney General Murphy). Passed were his unprecedented peace-time defense program (intact except for Guam fortification); modified governmental reorganization (which will save about $30,000,000 a year), and his 1940 relief program, laden with restrictions. Continued were his gold content devaluation power and his $2,000,000,000 currency stabilization fund.

White House Defeats. Vivid in retrospect, they include: (1) his $3,200,000,000 spend-lend plan, emasculated by the senate, killed by the house; (2) his $800,000,000 housing expansion bill; (3) neutrality revision, on which much of the nation agreed with him; (4) a 1939 relief deficiency appropriation of $50,000,000; (5) rejection by the senate of two appointees (Virginia's Floyd Roberts, as federal judge, and Nevada's William Boyle, as U. S. attorney for Nevada), and withdrawal of two more whose rejection was imminent (Wisconsin's Thomas Amlie, ICC appointee, and Donald Wakefield Smith, NLRB appointee); (6) refusal to hike debt limit above $45,000,000,000 (but long-term bond ceiling was raised).

Other legislative moves, some minor New Deal victories, other minor defeats, but only one (Hatch bill) carrying important political implications:

¶ House approval (over White House objection) of $50,000 to probe NLRB.

¶ Abolition (with apparent White House approval) of undistributed profits tax in "business appeasement" tax revision bill. Bill also provided reciprocal taxation of federal and state employees.

¶ Postponement to next term of badly needed railroad-aid legislation, one of the session's greatest failures. Only move in this direction. Approval of voluntary rail debt adjustment without necessitating bankruptcy

¶ Postponement of much-debated revision of (1) farm program, (2) Wagner labor relations act, and (3) wage-hour act.

¶ Defeat of Townsend $200-a-month pension bill and passage of far-reaching social security amendments which freeze old age annuity pay roll taxes at 1 per cent for next three years, extend coverage to 1,300,000 more people and liberalize benefit payments.

¶ Passage of Hatch "clean politics" bill (received coldly by White House because it eliminates much of the administration machine from 1940's campaign) which proscribes political activities of all except top-bracket federal jobholders.

¶ Continuation (over White House objection) of Dies committee on un-Americanism, which was called a "forum of disgruntled politicians."

POLITICS:
Truths

Open for public inspection this month are two great, pertinent political truths: (1) That the right kind of publicity can turn a third rater into a first-rate presidential candidate almost overnight; (2) that today as always, public sentiment is sufficiently pliable to make room for any new face that may pop up. The conclusions: First, that presidential campaigns are largely a matter of smart public relations work; second, that 1940's election is not in the bag for any man.

PAUL McNUTT
Going up?

Cause of this excitement is Paul V. McNutt, who popped back from the Philippines two months ago, got his handsome picture in the papers, was called a "charming young man" by President Roosevelt, then ended up by getting himself named federal security administrator. From here he may develop into the President's crown prince.

In June Candidate McNutt ranked fifth among Democratic hopefuls as tabulated by highly accurate Gallup polls. In order: Garner, 47 per cent; Farley, 16; Hull, 12; Hopkins, 5; McNutt, 3. Six weeks after his federal appointment, Paul McNutt had jumped to second place. Jack Garner, still well in the lead, suffered a mite. The standings: Garner, 46 per cent; McNutt, 13; Hull, 12, Farley, 12; Hopkins, 3.

Other political news: Ohio's Sen. Robert Alphonso Taft, bad trailer in G. O. P. Gallup polls, became the first to toss his hat in the ring. While finding his senatorial office "interesting," Candidate Taft magnanimously agreed not to "run away from a harder job."

RACES:
One Way Out

Since last March thousands of Czecho-Slovakian Jews have fled to the U. S. on visitors' permits, their property confiscated, their only hope lying in refuge on some distant land. Sometimes even this hope is futile. Within two days the U. S. had this problem brought shockingly to mind twice:

¶ In Chicago, 43-year-old Mrs. Adele Langer (wife of a Czech Jew whose $1,500,000 textile mills had been confiscated), took quarters in a Loop hotel with her two sons, six and four. Late that night she threw her sons from the thirteenth floor window, slashed her wrists and jumped.

LOUISIANA:
Hot Oil

Heaped atop several score other indictments facing prominent Louisianans was a federal charge against former Gov. Richard Leche, whose feet had heretofore been kept clear of the muck surrounding state officialdom. The indictment: Charging Leche, Politician Seymour Weiss and Freeman Burford, Texas oil man, with stepping up production of Rodessa oil wells and running the contraband or "hot" oil over into Texas, violating the Connally act.

INTERNATIONAL:
Chess Game

For two months jittery France and Britain have forecast another "crisis" in August or September. As August was born, it indeed looked like a crisis in which Japan had become of great nuisance value to Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini. What bothered Americans was that their own nation seemed being drawn into this chess game as a result of justified U. S. retaliation against insults in the Far East.

At Italy's Lake Como was played the key move in this game. There met Toshio Shiratori, Japanese ambassador to Rome, and Lieut. Gen. Matahiko Oshima, ambassador to Berlin. Their purpose: To perfect a military alliance binding Japan with Italy and Germany. If it failed, said their friends, the ambassadors had vowed to commit hara-kiri (suicide by disembowelment). Simultaneously, at Tokyo, youngish army leaders began a drive to purge foes of the military alliance.

AMBASSADOR SHIRATORI

Meanwhile there was every indication these three powers were doing their best to confuse and frighten not only France, Britain and Russia (who opened joint military conferences in Moscow) but also the U. S. Sharp on the heels of U. S. abrogation of the Jap trade treaty had come anti-American and anti-British demonstrations in China. Jap airships destroyed two Yangtze river steamers. At Tientsin a mob destroyed offices of the British International Export corporation. With democracies' attention shifted away from Europe for the moment, the axis exerted pressure on Spain and the Balkan states, dragging them into line should Europe become embroiled in war.

While Washington tried desperately to remain aloof, Prime Minister Chamberlain told the house of commons he might have to send a powerful fleet to Asia. More interesting to Americans, however, was the proposal of Laborite John Morgan that British and American Asiatic fleets be combined under a U. S. admiral to keep order in the Orient. Said he: "I would regard it as a first-class move."

AGRICULTURE:
Barter

Forgotten by surplus-ridden U. S. lard producers is the humorous situation several years ago when they bartered lard for German machinery, finding themselves holding several thousand musical but useless harmonicas. Today Germany still needs lard, for which she will pay 60 per cent above the present domestic price of 5 to 5½ cents a pound.

Contrary to the state department's reciprocal trade program is the barter plan producers would now institute. Rebuffed by Secretary of State Cordell Hull, producers and German barter emissaries turned to the treasury department where Undersecretary John W. Hanes agreed to a hearing. The plan, which obviously seeks legal circumvention of very definite foreign trade regulations, is something like this:

U. S. packers, having arranged a transaction in Germany, would sell lard to an American importing firm, which would trade it to private German buyers for "askimarks," usable only in that country. The importer would then purchase German products now on the U. S. free list, paying in Germany money about one-fourth what he would pay elsewhere. Products, turned over to lard producers here, would be largely of farm nature: Machinery, cream separators and fertilizer.

FORECAST—By Chicago statisticians, an aggregate U. S. wheat crop of 710,000,000 bushels (527,000,000 winter, and 183,000,000 spring), or just about enough for domestic requirements.

FARM TOPICS

BIRDS BENEFICIAL TO FARM CROPS
Value of Food Habits Often Misjudged.

Some of the birds that save millions in crops each year are still misjudged by the farmer. The beautiful Baltimore oriole has been accused of damaging grapes and garden peas. But studies show that the oriole's food habits are largely beneficial. Caterpillars are its favorite fare, but it also eats quantities of plant and bark lice, ants, wasps, grasshoppers, spiders and weevils.

Farmers who tear swallows' nests from barn eaves are turning out their best friends. Swallows consume vast numbers of harmful flying insects and young birds in the nest often eat more insects than their parents.

Woodpeckers are often suspected of damaging trees by their drillings. Each hole drilled means that the bird has located the larva of a destructive wood-boring insect. Woodpeckers are among the most valuable forest conservationists and with their heavy bills they get insects that other birds can not get.

Fruit raisers often look on robins as enemies because of the robin's appetite for cherries, yet robins consume insects harmful to fruit crops throughout the year, and only during June and July do they eat cultivated fruit to any extent. One good way to keep robins out of the orchards is to plant mulberry trees near-by. Mulberries ripen at the same time as cherries and the birds prefer them to other fruits.

Bull's Pedigree, Looks, Poor Guides for Buyer

Dairymen who pick a bull only by his pedigree and appearance pick a good bull only one time out of three, but those who use proved sire records as a basis for selecting herd sires choose a good bull three times out of four, says Dr. J. F. Kendrick of the United States bureau of dairy industry. These conclusions are based upon numerous records of breeding activities in dairy herd-improvement associations.

An example of a dairyman who depended only on pedigree and looks is cited by Dr. Kendrick. In 1925 the cows in his herd were averaging 320 pounds of butterfat a year. A new bull was purchased. Four years later the average herd production had been boosted to 354 pounds of fat for each cow. Another sire was added to the herd, chosen by the same method as the first. At the end of another four years the average herd production had dropped to 316 pounds. A third bull has not boosted the production average. Without proved sire records as a guide this dairyman picked only one good bull out of three.

Hog Mixture

A well-balanced grain ration and good legume pasture will bring the pigs through in fine condition after weaning. A grain mixture of 80 pounds corn, 80 pounds oats, 12 pounds tankage, 10 pounds soybean oil meal, 8 pounds cottonseed meal, 6 pounds alfalfa meal, and 4 pounds of minerals is recommended. The amount of oats in the mixture is gradually reduced as the pigs get older and replaced with corn until all oats have been removed. The alfalfa meal can be left out if the pigs have good legume pasture.

Getting the pigs started right and keeping them growing is the formula for success in hog raising.

Farm Purchases

Last year the federal land banks and the land bank commissioner made more than 6,000 loans to finance the purchase of farms. Loans averaged $3,000 to $4,000 each. They are limited to $7,500 and can be as high as three-fourths of the value of the property. Borrowers are required to have experience, equipment and sufficient savings to finance at least one-fourth of the purchase.

Isolate New Animals

New farm animals should not be allowed to mingle with the home stock, but should be isolated for several weeks, authorities of the American Foundation for Animal Health declare. This will allow time for dormant diseases to manifest themselves and will prevent the spread of such diseases to other stock on the farm.

Manure Important

Barnyard manure should be well cared for. Use plenty of straw to soak up the liquid part and protect the pile from the weather and heavy drainage. Of the 10 pounds of nitrogen contained in a ton of average farm manure, about one-half is in the liquid, and is in such chemical combination that it is as easily lost by exposure to the air, with freezing or drying, as free ammonia would be. Neglecting care of manure is a common farm error.

IF YOU'RE interested in taking a comedian apart and seeing what makes him funny on the screen, consider Stan Laurel's shoes. Of course, shoes have always been an important part of a comedian's wardrobe — Charlie Chaplin's, for instance—but Laurel makes use of them in such a way that the audience isn't conscious of the part they play.

The shoes he wears when making pictures have no heels—that's all there is to it. They give him that strange, rolling gait, and you laugh at the way he walks without knowing why. They also help in giving him the woe-begone appearance that contributes so much to his performances.

Watch him in his latest picture, "A Chump at Oxford," and you'll realize how much those trick shoes do for him.

It took John Hubbard just two years to a day, after he reached Hollywood, to climb to the top—the top being the leading role in "The Housekeeper's Daughter," Joan Bennett's new Hal Roach picture.

Hubbard was discovered by Oliver Hinsdell, Paramount talent coach, in one of the Goodman theater plays in Chicago. Paramount gave him some small roles, and then he went to Metro, where Mervyn LeRoy renamed him "Anthony Allen"—perhaps you remember seeing him in "Dramatic School," with Louise Rainer.

Hal Roach liked his work and personality so much that he persuaded Metro to let him assume the rest of Hubbard's contract, and once more our hero became John Hubbard. Keep your eye on him—he may turn out to be one of the screen's top-flight leading men.

Mickey Rooney thought it would be an excellent plan if, when he went to England to do "A Yank at Eton," he went alone. Unfortunately for him, nobody else thought so—the studio felt that everything would work out better if several guardians, including his mother, went along.

Orson Welles, the actor who became famous all over the country when he unintentionally spread terror with that Mars broadcast, is in a spot where he's going to be greatly envied, and, later, greatly panned by many of those who envy him at present.

For he has done what nobody else ever has. He's never made a picture, but the contract he signed with RKO permits him to produce and direct his first one, and star in it as well. The picture will be based on Joseph Conrad's "Heart of Darkness," and if it is good Welles will practically have the motion picture industry in his pocket.

Don Ameche and his wife named their first son Ronald, and their second, Donald; nicknamed "Ronnie" and "Donnie," they seemed to have started something in the way of names. When the third son came he was named Thomas Anthony—he'll be "Tommie," of course, which doesn't quite rhyme. But the senior Ameches didn't care for "Connie" or "Johnnie" and couldn't think of any other names that would do.

Rudy Vallee felt that he'd sung "My Time Is Your Time" to the same sponsor long enough, and that's why he's leaving them in September. It's a 10-year relationship that is ending, the longest of its kind in radio history. Vallee has been responsible for uncovering a great deal of radio talent, and in developing the vaudeville type of radio program that has been so widely imitated. But it seems likely that the one thing he'll be remembered for is introducing Charlie McCarthy to the radio public, and keeping him on the air until he was well enough known to find a place of his own.

Beryl Mercer's death leaves a vacancy that will be hard for the movie makers to fill . . . Johnny Green's new piano concerto, "Music for Elizabeth," will be played by Jose Iturbi at Carnegie Hall this autumn; the "Elizabeth" is Johnny's wife, formerly Betty Furness of the movies.*

Pretty for Afternoon Or to Wear at Home

THE dress with shirring at shoulders and sleeve tops is charming, soft fashion for afternoons. No. 1795 gives you a usually nice figure-line—round above and very slim at the waistline and hips, because the pleated skirt is cut high and becomingly fitted. This is very easy to make. Choose georgette, crepe or silk crepe.

For the Young Girl.

No. 1793 is a perfect dream dress for slim young girls, and look especially sweet in high lines, roundly puffed sleeves, softly bloused bodice and flaring skirt. Little bows at sash add to its fluttery charm. Dimity, organdy, taffeta and printed swiss are especially pretty for this. Later on it will be lovely in thin wool.

The Patterns.

No. 1795 is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 requires, with short sleeves, 3½ yards of 39-inch material; 3¾ yards with long sleeves.

No. 1793 is designed for sizes 10, 12, 14 and 16 years. Size 12 requires 3½ yards of 35-inch material; 2½ yards of ribbon for sash and 2½ yards for little bows.

Common Sense About Constipation

A doctor would tell you that the best thing to do with constipation is get at its cause. That way you don't have to endure it first and try to cure it afterward—you can avoid having it.

Chances are you won't have to look far for the cause if you eat the super-refined foods most people do. Most likely you don't get enough "bulk"! And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It means a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines.

If this is what you lack, try crisp crunchy Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast. It contains just the "bulk" you need.

Eat All-Bran every day, drink plenty of water, and "Join the Regulars." Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.

Need of Encouragement

It takes a good deal of encouragement to counteract the natural despondency of the artistic temperament.—Veronica.

THE TRUTH SIMPLY TOLD

Today's popularity of Doan's Pills, after many years of world-wide use, surely must be accepted as evidence of satisfactory results. And favorable public opinion supports the findings of the able physicians who test the value of Doan's under exacting laboratory conditions.

These physicians, too, approve every word of advertising you read, the objective of which is only to recommend Doan's Pills as a good diuretic treatment for functional kidney disorders and for relief of the pain and worry of such causes.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove waste that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when kidneys lag, and diuretic medication would be more often employed.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination may be warning of disturbed kidney function. You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out.

Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won world-wide use and confidence than on something less favorably known. Ask your neighbor!

The Red Cross Looks Back Over Three-Quarters Of a Century of Service to Suffering Mankind, Regardless of His Race, Nationality or Creed

By Edward Kenneth Stabler
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

ITS after compartment flooded by the inrushing sea, the submarine Squalus plunged to the bottom off Portsmouth, N. H., on May 23. The United States navy, assuming charge of rescue operations, waged a successful two-day battle against time and the elements in bringing to the surface alive the 33 men who survived the sinking.

But the tragedy of the Squalus was not confined to the sea. The many relatives and friends of the entombed men, who came hurriedly to the New England town, were equally victims of catastrophe They required housing, attendance, information and, in some instances, medical care, during the long hours of waiting.

Three weeks later a tornado writhed its way across a rural section of Minnesota, visiting its wrath upon the town of Anoka and villages nearby. In its wake 10 persons lay dead and 90 injured. The toll of property damage included 35 homes destroyed, 110 damaged, and 200 barns completely or partially wrecked. There was instant and widespread need of food and shelter for the victims, of medical and nursing care, and, in the long days ahead, rehabilitation of families and homes.

By press and radio the story of such disasters spreads. We feel a sharp, quick sympathy for those fellow humans and we have an instant impulse to aid.

'The Red Cross Is There.'

The feeling of sympathy remains but the human impulse passes almost as quickly as it came. It fades in the face of our realization of detachment and of our individual inability to help. In another moment we are caught up again in the current of events that eddy round us. That we do not then carry with us an inescapable sense of futility is due to our confidence that the disaster victims are receiving succor as prompt and competent and complete as man has yet been able to devise. Which is to say that we know the Red Cross is there, doing all that can be done.

It may never have occurred to some that this assurance, which holds good at all times the world over, is a comparatively recent and a somewhat miraculous thing; that the organization which we join as a member each year is the largest and most far-reaching in existence, annihilating distance and the man-made barriers of nationalism and prejudice and creed; that in its diverse and largely voluntary functioning, in war and peace, whenever and wherever there is human suffering, it is one of the most effective and remarkable agencies of mankind.

This year marks the seventy-fifth anniversary of the founding of the International Red Cross at Geneva, Switzerland, August 22, 1864, when the representatives of 12 nations signed the Geneva convention, or Red Cross treaty, setting forth the humanitarian principles of the organization.

During these 75 years the International Red Cross has expanded until today there are Red Cross societies in 62 nations which have a world-wide enrollment of more than 34,000,000 adult and junior members.

Although the United States was represented at Geneva and cooperated in framing of the convention, the traditional reluctance of this government and its people to participate in international agreements involving treaties with European powers, prevented ratification by the United States and establishment of its own national Red Cross until March 1, 1882.

The secret of the constant, far-flung preparedness of the American Red Cross of today is the secret of training and organization. Its secretary, Miss Mabel T. Boardman, once asked by an admiring but mystified questioner, "How does the Red Cross get to the scene of disaster so promptly?", replied: "The Red Cross does not have to get there; it is there."

It is there in the personnel of its 3,716 chapters and 8,200 branches, each with its committee on disaster prevention and disaster relief. It is there in the machinery of co-ordination, established through regional and national headquarters, under the direct supervision of its national chairman, Norman H. Davis. It is ready with disaster relief workers, by means of immediate appropriations from its national budget, and with the carefully prepared co-operation of governmental and other agencies whose facilities are at hand, if needed, to supplement those of the Red Cross.

In 58 years the American Red Cross has assisted the victims of more than 2,200 disasters and has expended approximately $140,000,000 in disaster relief, most of it since the World war. During the past 15 years it has served in an average of 92 domestic disasters annually, and during the year ending June 30 last, it rescued, clothed, housed, fed and gave medical, nursing and rehabilitation aid to 100,000 persons, victims of 148 disasters in the United States.

Record of a Year.

Some conception of the magnitude of this continuing peacetime task can be had from the summary of reports covering the 12 months ending June 30 of this year. During that time the American Red Cross has:

Through its civilian home service, assisted 116,000 families affected by economic and other forms of distress;

Provided service for 165,000 war veterans or their families through its chapter home service sections and national liaison representatives;

Through chapters, field directors and hospital social workers, extended help and medical social service to 40,000 men of the army, navy, marine corps and coast guard;

Continued the campaign against injury and death in the water, on the highways, in factories, by training 100,000 new life-savers and 313,000 new first-aiders, bringing the total of Highway First Aid stations to 2,720 and of mobile first aid units to 2,424;

Through 2,126 of its chapters, continued activities in home and farm accident prevention to lessen the annual loss of life and number of injuries;

In co-operation with physicians made 1,000,000 public health nursing visits to or in behalf of the sick, examined thousands of school children for physical defects, and trained 50,000 women and girls in the home care of the sick;

9,000,000 in Junior Red Cross.

Through the Junior Red Cross, stimulated the interest of more than 9,000,000 school children in health education, character building, international correspondence and better understanding and peace among nations;

Through the work of volunteers, produced 330,000 garments for disaster victims and others in need, 4,600,000 surgical dressings for local hospitals, and 720,000 pages of reading matter in Braille for the blind.

This extensive and diversified peacetime activity of the Red Cross, which grows steadily and benefits greater numbers year by year, has gained impetus in all lands since the establishment in May, 1919, of the League of Red Cross societies, with headquarters in Paris.

Founded through the vision and initiative of Henry P. Davison, wartime chairman of the American Red Cross, with the support of the Red Cross societies of the United States, Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan, the league has grown steadily in importance and strength until it now includes all of the national Red Cross societies. Its chairman is Mr. Davis, chairman of the American Red Cross.

The league, however, is but one of the two agencies of the world family of Red Cross societies. The other and older is the International Red Cross committee, with headquarters in Geneva, where it was established in 1864 under provisions of the Geneva convention.

Each of these bodies preserves its individuality and its own field of activity, corresponding roughly to supervision of wartime activity by the international committee and of peacetime activity by the league. They co-operate on a basis of constant, mutual consultation, which is furthered by an exchange of delegates.

The services of these bodies, together with the International Red Cross conferences, held every four years, provide the channels through which the 62 national Red Cross societies function as one gigantic and unified organization, the International Red Cross.

Tribute to Pioneers.

Observance of the seventy-fifth anniversary of this organization in every civilized land is a fitting tribute to the heroic endeavors of the men and women of every member nation, who labored long and successfully in the establishment and the promotion of the national Red Cross societies and the International Red Cross. The names of some of these individuals are famous, others are unknown; but the names of all of them are legion.

One among them all, however, has prior claim to praise and recognition in this anniversary year. For the International Red Cross is his living memorial—a perpetual tribute to his humanitarianism, his vision and his industry. His name, too little known since his death in 1910, is Henri Dunant, and his story is the story of the origin of the Red Cross. It is one of remarkable individual effectiveness in the field of humanitarian endeavor.

It begins in his native city of Geneva, where he was a successful young banker; takes him to the Plains of Lombardy in northern Italy, where he was an eyewitness of the Battle of Solferino, one of the bloodiest engagements of the Nineteenth century; carries him into the nearby village of Castiligione, where he labored heroically for days at the head of a small band of volunteers in doing whatever could be done for the unattended thousands of wounded and dying; finds him in temporary seclusion, while he writes letters to influential friends and a small volume vividly depicting the horrors he had witnessed, setting forth proposals for a permanent, neutral, volunteer organization in all countries, which could be counted upon to care for the sick and wounded of war and the victims of catastrophe in time of peace; and it follows him through the capitals of Europe where he pleaded and fought for his plan, back to the council tables of Geneva, where, at long last, he saw his brain child born, a healthy infant, destined to grow and prosper in the service of humanity.

Heroine of the American Red Cross

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

Just as the name of one man, Henri Dunant, is inseparably linked with the early history of the International Red Cross, so is the name of one woman the synonym for the foundation of the American Red Cross. She is known to fame as Clara Barton although that is not the name which Capt. Stephen Barton and his wife gave to the "Christmas gift" which Santa Claus left in their farm home near North Oxford, Mass., on December 25, 1821. It was Clarissa Harlowe, after the heroine of Samuel Richardson's Eighteenth century romance.

When Clarissa Harlowe Barton grew up, being a practical-minded young woman, she dropped that romantic name and became known simply as Clara Barton. If she had been a boy, perhaps she might have followed in the footsteps of her father, who had served in the Revolution under "Mad Anthony" Wayne, and joined the army. As it turned out, she was destined to go to war but she went to alleviate pain and suffering, not to cause it.

Clara Barton was a sickly child but by engaging in vigorous outdoor exercise she changed herself into a robust young woman, a fact which was important to her later career. In 1854 she established at Bordentown, one of the first free public schools in New Jersey.

Service in the Civil War.

After a very successful career as a teacher Miss Barton went to Washington and served as a clerk in the patent office where she was working when the Civil war broke out. Then she determined to devote herself to the care of wounded soldiers on the battlefield and she was instrumental in organizing the Sanitary Commission which took charge of nursing sick and wounded soldiers in the field and in hospitals.

Clara Barton was first president of the American branch of the Red Cross when it was organized in 1882.

She served with the army of the Potomac and in 1864 was appointed "lady in charge" of the hospitals of the Army of the James.

In 1865 she went to Andersonville, Ga., to identify and mark the graves of Union prisoners buried there and in the same year President Lincoln placed her in charge of the search for missing men of the Union armies.

During the years 1866-67 she lectured on her war experiences and afterward went to Switzerland for her health which had been seriously affected by her strenuous labors during the war. She was at Geneva when the Franco-Prussian war broke out and she assisted the grand duchess of Baden in the preparation of military hospitals. Also she became acquainted with the work of the Red Cross and she gave unstinted aid to that society.

At the joint request of the German authorities and the Strasburg "Comite de Secours," she superintended the supplying of work to the poor of that city in 1871 and in 1872 had charge of the public distribution of supplies to the destitute people of Paris who had undergone the horrors of siege and the reign of the Commune.

At the close of the war she was decorated with the golden cross of Baden and the iron cross of Germany.

Upon her return to this country in 1873 Miss Barton inaugurated a movement to secure recognition of the Red Cross society by the American government and finally, during the administration of President Arthur, saw her labors rewarded. Naturally she became the first president of the American Red Cross when it was organized in 1882.

Miss Barton's humanitarian labors did not end with the wars. During the eighties she was busy superintending the work of succoring the afflicted in the great fires which swept Michigan, in the floods on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers and at the great Johnstown flood in Pennsylvania. She served as president of the American Red Cross for 22 years and to the end of her days, which came in 1912, she was the living exponent of the spirit which has made the Red Cross "the greatest mother in the world."

HAY RIDE ENJOYED BY SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASS

Tuesday evening the members of the young people's Sunday school class met at the Methodist church and from there embarked on a hay ride. Lloyd Ax furnished the transportation, and it took him but a short time to see that he had too big a load for his "dobbins." An emergency call was sent out to the Ax farm and Lloyd's brother, Irwin, came to the rescue with a tractor. Then things went fine except for a few forks full of hay that got thrown or stuffed down the necks of the passengers.

Late in the evening the group took to the hills south of town on the Roy Waddingham farm, and roasted weiners and ate watermellons.

No casualties marred the evening's fun although early in the evening two exhuberant souls, who tried to do acrobatics from the side of the hay rack, wound up on their backs on the ground; and some "practical" joker pulled the pin out of the double tree when the "dobbins" were still in use.

FAIR VISITORS WILL SEE CORN GROW

Visitors at the Iowa State Fair this week and next are seeing some of the state's tall corn actually growing. Through an ingenious device developed by Prof. I. E. Melhus, head of the Botany Department at Iowa State College, a mechanism records the growth and amplifies it so that it can be seen on a dial. This device is included in the Iowa State College exhibit located on the west end of the mezzanine floor of the grandstand.

The Iowa State exhibit consists of four parts, centering on Iowa's leading crop—corn—and how it affects Iowa State and how corn is being utilized in research work at the college. The Agricultural Division has exhibits showing how corn is produced and used The engineering Division is demonstrating corn by-products. The Science Division is showing what is being done on seed treatment and insect control and the home economists are showing how corn is used as food.

art Wool With Gold Accent Is Early Fall Style Formula

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

HERE is one theme more than nother about which fashion in- t centers this fall, that theme e outstanding importance of choice fabric. In assembling autumn wardrobe the thought ep uppermost in mind is that he most part the style struc- for the coming months is being around the idea of handsome rial made up with a studied licity that achieves classic lines h lead to well-balanced silhou- bespeaking a new dignity in mode.

e new wool weaves are adding articularly exciting chapter to current story of fabric elegance. aying the foundation for the ear- all wardrobe the idea of hand- e wool styled to a nicety with hasis on dramatic simplicity, is ing widespread appeal.

hat to offset the amazing sim- ty of the dress or suit of swank l? The answer is gold jewelry ac- s. Which is one of the startling s of news in the new season's ds. There is a "gold rush" on ashion's realm. Black with gold specially a message that is being ed throughout the style centers e world.

lack wool jersey, a particularly rt indication for early fall, is for the fashion-right semi- ored dress centered to right ve in the illustration. Note, with bracelet-length sleeves the un- ally wide gold bracelet. This ter of the wider bracelet is in rdance with fashion's latest de- .

o further dramatize this modish time frock of black wool jersey e are gold clips that highspot lapel. Flattering too, are the le earrings.

o the lower right in the picture, rincess model of billiard green nel, beautifully fitted at the waist, breaks into pleats below the hips. The high round neck practically demands a necklace and a suitable one as here shown is of gold links with gold knobs. The wide link gold bracelet looks well with the necklace and a cunning gold clip climaxes this jewelry ensemble. The plaid hat crowns the entire with glory.

Gold jewelry as a smart accent to colorful tweeds has also become a hobby with fashion. To the left in the picture see a deep bright green tweed suit with a new collar treatment and stitched detail down the front of the jacket. The skirt is widely gored. Take particular notice of the gold and green tourmaline daisy pin with a diamond center worn on the jacket. The bracelets are of the new large gold link type. Gold stitched suede describes the hat.

A few notes in general in regard to the new wool weaves follow. The trend to smoother versions of the velvety duvetyn order is apparent. There are also many ribboned woolens. While black woolens are having a widespread initial call, there is also a big movement going on among richly colorful tweeds and other wool weaves gorgeously toned in new shades of blue green and flower reds with rust tones greatly in favor for sports and travel wear.

Gored Skirt

It's going to be a banner season r sweaters. From the practical gle the skirt-and-sweater idea has peer. Essential to the joy of a nior or teen-age is the skirt that is uchly gored as is the one worn by little girl in the picture. There something very fashion-wise about is model. Sewn seam detail alter- tes with pressed crease to create ded interest in the styling of this irt which is fashioned of naphtha- ted wool gabardine. The soft an- ra sweater assembled with it may in contrasting shade or matching ade of the skirt. Either way you ill be right in style.

Season of Luxury In Fabrics Seen

All signs point to a season of luxury especially in matter of fabric elegance. The tendency is toward dignified trends rather than the much-exploited "little girl" fashions that have been centering the stage during past months.

Suits of stiff faille, rich brocades for evening wear, imposing jewelry accents emphasizing wide bracelets, necklaces that have a broad collarlike spread and massive gold effects in belts, and in clips all indicate return to elegance.

The play being made on fur borderings that is being lavished on coat, suit and frock, the revival of old-fashioned passementrie, the elaborate hand-embroidery and countless such trends are reminiscent of the Victorian age of pomp and glory. The fact of sleek fitted dresses with in many instances the long sleeve, the quaint back-fullness treatments that modernize bustle effects, fitted basques, laced-in corsets all portend the trend to greater dignity in fashions.

Hats Show Wealth Of Ostrich Trims

A definite revival of ostrich is announced for this fall and winter. Many of the new hats show a wealth of ostrich trims. Evening wraps are trimmed with ostrich, little boleros are all of ostrich, and there are bags, and fans, and fanciful muffs to match.

To Show Your Watch

Gloves, designed so that the face of your wrist watch can be seen at a glance, are one of the newest presentations of a famous London designer.

Care Needed In Exercising Weak Hearts

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON

ONE of the points that was taught us as medical students was the use of exercise in weak or failing hearts. Today the first thought in treating an acute heart ailment—angina, coronary thrombosis, high blood pressure — is absolute rest in order to give the heart a chance to regain some of its strength or "reserve." And because rest is the proper treatment at this time, patients, and sometimes physicians, are likely to indulge in or prescribe rest when what the heart really needs to gain new strength is exercise.

TODAY'S HEALTH COLUMN

A popular treatment in former years was what was known as the Nauheim baths and the Schott method of "resistive" exercise in which the patient exercises his muscles against the resistance of the physician's or attendant's hands.

Dr. Barton

In speaking of exercise in the treatment of chronic (not recent) heart or blood vessel disease, Dr. Louis Faugeres Bishop Jr., New York, in Archives of Physical Therapy, X-ray, Radium, states that with bed patients, massage, breathing exercises, and "resistive" exercises are beneficial in that they help to force the used blood in the veins back to the heart.

Gradual Exercise Increase.

What is known as the Oertel method of exercise consists of graded walks carried out until the patient begins to feel the effects of the exercise by very rapid breathing. Beginning on the level, the walks are increased gradually with regard to distance and incline or steepness.

For less severe cases, where the patient is up and about most of the time, Dr. Bishop suggests that as it is difficult to know exactly how much exercise the patient can take safely, he should be allowed to tell how his everyday manner of life affects him.

The stair test or exercise has been much used. Some heart patients live entirely on the ground floor, but Dr. Bishop points out that if they climbed the stairs one step at a time, it might become a heart strengthening and safe exercise.

The thought then is that after the heart has been rested in bed and by sitting around for some time, some form of exercise, as directed by the physician, strengthens the heart muscle and prevents patient from becoming an invalid.

Protection To the Body

During the flu epidemic a consulting physician examinating the chart of a young medical officer, sick with pneumonia (following the flu) shook his head as he pointed to the number of white corpuscles (the disease fighters) present in the blood. As the patient was very ill it was to be expected that the number of these white corpuscles would greatly increase from the normal number of 6,000 to 8,000 per cubic millimeter to perhaps 20,000 or 30,000, whereas there was only about 7,000.

The explanation of the consultant's feeling that there was no hope is that while a rise to 30,000 or 40,000 would show that the illness was very serious, it would show also that the resisting ability of the body was very great in being able to provide this large number of white corpuscles.

Similarly, when there is rapid but strong pulse, increased blood pressure, and a rise in temperature, it is direct evidence that there is infection or other trouble in the body, but just as direct evidence that the body is putting up a fight against the infection or other trouble.

How Body Fights Disease.

Thus Dr. F. M. Pottenger in Endocrinology (science of the ductless glands—thyroid, pituitary, and others) states: "It would seem to me that the conception or idea that the combination of symptoms—pain, increased heart rate, increased blood pressure, increased number of white blood corpuscles, rise in body temperature—which we call disease represents really the condition which the body must assume in order to protect itself against the disease elements which are causing trouble in the body, is most reasonable. With this idea—that the symptoms really show that the body is fighting the disease—we can recognize inflammation and other reactions in the body to toxic or poison products as really a 'protective' process."

You can readily understand then why your physician is more concerned about the strength of the heart and the general condition of the body than he is about the temperature being high or the blood pressure increased.

UZZIAH: A KING WHO FORGOT GOD

LESSON TEXT—II Chronicles 26:3-5, 16-21.

GOLDEN TEXT—Every one that exalteth himself shall be abased; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted.—Luke 18:14.

"Pride goeth before destruction and a haughty spirit before a fall" (Prov. 16:18).

A man's life may begin with every promise of greatness and he may prosper in everything for years as he honors God, and then by presumptuous disobedience he may bring it all to sudden destruction, living the closing years of his life in disgrace and going down to his grave in sorrow. That fact is written so large on the pages of history that one marvels that "wayfaring men though fools" need to "err therein" (Isa. 35:8). Pride makes a man blind to his own weakness and so presumptuous that he walks right into trouble. The story of Uzziah points a moral both obvious and needed by all of us.

I. Prosperity (vv. 3-5).

"As long as he sought the Lord, God made him prosper" (v. 5).

With a heart right toward God, the background of a rearing by God-fearing parents (how much that means!) and the counsel of a man who was an "expert" in his understanding of the ways and the will of God, Uzziah prospered greatly. Chapters 25 to 27 of II Chronicles reveal him as a man of affairs, a successful warrior, a capable agriculturist, an able gvernment administrator, and a king whose fame was known far and wide. For one who took over the government of a nation at the tender age of 16, following the tragic death of his father, Uzziah made a remarkable and commendable record.

II. Presumption (v. 16).

"When he was strong, his heart was lifted up to his destruction" (v. 16). What sad words! Prosperity ruined a man who had made a name for himself in times of adversity. In presumptuous pride he attempted to take the place of the priest ordained of God, in effect declaring that the State was over the Church, as we would put it in our day.

"There is no greater danger attaching to the life of Christian service than the danger of presumptuous pride. I mean the pride which manifests itself in an independence of the ordinary means of grace, of prayer, and of the Word of God. I am convinced that that is the cause of much of the failure in many lives here. It is a pride which says: 'I can dispense with the Word of God'; which persists in living on a minimum of prayer and communion with God, and in yet going about the work of God as of old; a pride which, like Uzziah's, seeks carnal prominence in spiritual things. For that was his sin. He sought a carnal prominence in service which God had ordained was to be of an entirely spiritual order" (J. Stuart Holden).

III. Punishment (vv. 17-21).

"The king was a leper . . . and . . . was cut off from the house of the Lord" (v. 21). The priests of God had holy boldness in rebuking the king, a quality which one could hope would never be missing in the testimony of God's servants. The king, however, resented their wise words of counsel, and punishment from God, both swift and terrible, came upon him.

If the judgment upon Uzziah seems too drastic, let us remember that the king was presuming to set aside an order established by God. It was a question of whether God was to rule or the king. We should also bear in mind that what looks like a single outward bit of presumption was really the expression of a heart that had long since gone far from God. When men in high position either in the State or in the Church fall into sin, it is not very often the result of a yielding to a sudden temptation, but rather the inevitable showing forth of what has long been true in the inner life. The leprosy of Uzziah's heart now showed forth in his face, and he had to be shut off from his people and from his royal position.

God Sees the Heart

Neither is there any creature that is not manifest in his sight: but all things are naked and opened unto the eyes of him with whom we have to do.—Hebrews 4:13.

Spiritual Contradictions

He that was called in the Lord being a servant, is the Lord's freeman: likewise he that is called, being free, is Christ's servant.—I Cor. 7:22.

Patience That Endureth

It is in length of patience, endurance and forbearance that so much of what is good in mankind and womankind is shown.—Arthur Helps.

Power of God

Religion wields the greatest power in the universe, the power of God.

HOW to SEW

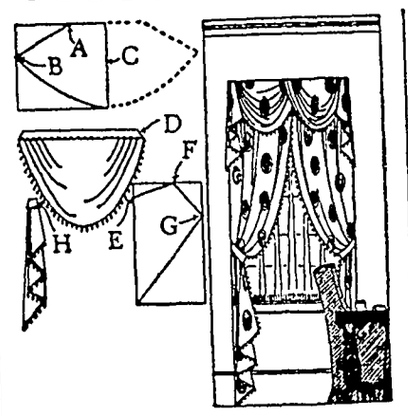
By RUTH WYETH SPEARS



AN IMPORTANT speaker was scheduled, and the club rooms were looking rather shabby. The decorating committee reported that formal draperies would lend an air of distinction. The funds could only pay for the material. Sewing machines hummed and here is a sketch of the miracle that was wrought. Here also are the dimensions that were used for making patterns for the graceful valance sections which were fastened over rods with snaps.

For the looped section, cut paper 18 inches deep and half as wide as the window measured over the frame. From the upper right corner to point A is half of the window width less two inches. Point B is 6 inches below the upper left corner. Draw a diagonal line from A to B, and a curve from B to the lower right corner. Place the edge marked C on a fold of the goods. The diagonal ends are pleated and stitched into a band as at D.

For the end pieces, cut paper 15 inches wide and 24 inches deep. E is 3 inches below the upper left corner. F is 9 inches in from the upper right corner. G is 6 inches down from the upper right corner. Finish the top as at H.

The offer of the two 25-cent sewing books containing 96 HOW TO SEW articles that have not appeared in the paper will be withdrawn soon. At present you can get both books for the price of one; but don't delay; send 25 cents with name and address to Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill., and both books will be sent by return mail, postpaid.

Cutwork for Linens

Here's your chance to own beautiful linens without any trouble at all! Cutwork's easy to do, you know—it's just buttonhole stitch (there's just a touch of other stitchery). Such a variety of floral motifs too. Get busy on a tea cloth, scarf or towel. These designs are stunning on natural linen or soft pastel shades with stitchery in white or the matching color. Pattern 6331 contains a transfer pattern of 16 motifs ranging from 3¼ by 3¼ inches to 4½ by 15 inches; materials needed; color schemes.

To obtain this pattern, send 15 cents in coins to The Sewing Circle, Household Arts Dept., 259 W. 14th St., New York, N. Y.

FARMERS NEEDING ASSISTANCE SHOULD APPLY NOW FOR LOANS

Tenants who have leased farms for the next year will be able to save money by "shopping early" for the livestock and equipment they may need for their farming operations. The Farm Security Administration which encourages good management and planning on the part of Rehabilitation borrowers is advising those who need funds to "avoid the rush" by planning their programs early

"The first step," said Mr. F. Lee Stewart, County Farm Security Administration representative," is a farm lease Then if the tenant is unable to get necessary operating capital from the usual credit agencies he may be eligible for a Rehabilitation loan The loans are made for the purchase of such livestock and farm equipment as is needed on a family-sized farm. The Farm Security Administration is naturally interested in having borrowers buy this equipment at the best advantage."

Rehabilitation loans made to farmers who could not get along without them run for periods not longer than 5 years at 5 per cent interest The purpose is to assist worthy farm families who have no credit resources to get a start toward independence and permanent security.

Sunday School Workers Of Two Counties Will Meet At Liberty

DESIRABLE TO PUT LIME ON IN FALL

Past experimental results in recent demonstrations have shown the value of applying lime in the fall on acid soils for the next year's legume seedings rather than waiting until the spring, says Bruce M. Kilpatrick, agronomist in the Extension Service of Iowa State College.

Not only is limestone easier to apply now than in the spring, but it is much more effective in neutralizing soil acidity and insuring a better stand, Kilpatrick explains.

Work Lime In

Even finely ground limestone dissolves so slowly in the soil that it should be applied at least six months to a year before legumes are seeded Whenever possible it should be worked into contact with moisture

On the 260 TVA demonstration farms which are being conducted in the state, cooperators are applying limestone where needed 6 months to 1 year previous to seeding legumes with excellent results.

Avoid Spring Rush

Other advantages of fall liming are that weather conditions are usually more favorable in the fall; farmers avoid the rush of spring work, and the heavy spring demand at limestone quarries is avoided.

If there is doubt about the soil acidity and the need of limestone, soil samples should be given to county agents for testing or sent to the Agronomy Department at Iowa State College.

Hitler, Duce Lay Groundwork For Five-Power Conference To Escape War Over Danzig

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

EUROPE:
Another Munich?

One fear long entertained but little discussed by France and Britain is that Danzig might simply and peacefully declare its union with Germany. If Poland then went to war, she would be labeled as an aggressor. This crafty scheme has been brewing in Adolf Hitler's mind ever since it became apparent that German force in Danzig would be met by Polish-French-British force. But originally it was Benito Mussolini's idea, for a conflict over Danzig would enmesh Italy just as a war over Sudetenland would have brought similar consequences last autumn. Already tired of aiding Germany's aggrandizement at the risk of their own necks, rank-and-file Italians were about ready to junk the Rome-Berlin axis.

in-law foreign minister, Count Galeazzo Ciano, to confer near Salzburg with German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop. The apparent decision, pressed by Count Ciano and ultimately accepted by Hitler, was that Danzig was not worth a war. Having thus counseled moderation, Mussolini had again pressed his pants and entered once more the good graces of France and Britain. He was now set to repeat the history that led to last year's notorious Munich conference.

Rumors leaked out that Il Duce was loud in acclaim of the Vatican's sincere efforts for peace via negotiation. But Il Duce was not so high-minded. Laying the groundwork for a five-power conference (Germany, Italy, Poland, Britain, France) he intended to settle not only the Danzig issue but a few others as well, attaining his own end by winning colonial concessions from France.

While all Europe awaited an official invitation, the controlled Berlin press laid down a preparatory barrage by thundering that the "European powder barrel may explode" unless the Danzig issue is settled speedily. Significant in this picture was Russia's position. Should British-French military authorities drop their Moscow conversations like a hot biscuit when Mussolini makes his bid, observers agreed Paris and London would be guilty of a heinous crime. But both democracies assured no such thing would happen.

AGRICULTURE:
Paper Money

Script first made news in farm circles this summer when orange and blue stamps were adopted to help dispose of surplus commodities to relief families. Successful, the plan was next tried with non-relievers. Latest development is Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace's announcement that food script will soon be used on a nation-wide basis.

Coming up soon is even bigger script news. In Washington, Georgia's Sen. Richard B. Russell Jr. made known a "certificate plan" he will introduce at the next session of congress to solve the farm problem. Its gist:

The secretary of agriculture would give growers certificates covering their allotted portion of a normal domestic crop. For example, a cotton grower who got 200 pounds from each of his 10 acres over the previous five-year average, would get certificates for that part of his 2,000 pounds which is ordinarily sold domestically. To purchase this cotton, domestic buyers must also buy the certificates, paying for them the differential between the market price and parity price. If the parity price were 15 cents and cotton sold at 10 cents, certificates would cost five cents a pound.

Biggest advantage of the plan is that it lifts the burden of parity payments from government shoulders. Disadvantages: (1) It is merely a disguise for unpopular processing taxes, and would ultimately raise costs to consumers; (2) it still leaves the export problem unsolved.

Other farming news:

¶ Revised and extended to July 31, 1940, was the wheat export subsidy program. Under the old plan, government-purchased wheat was sold to exporters. New plan: Exporters will buy wheat direct from mills and elevators, seek a foreign market and advise the agricultural department how much subsidy they need to finance the export.

¶ Corn crop estimates were placed at 2,450,888,000 bushels, or 111,000,000 bushels under the previous month's estimate. Reason: Hot and dry weather. Meanwhile winter wheat estimates rose from 547,767,000 bushels to 550,710,000.

BUSINESS:
What Challenge?

What congress did or did not do to help or hurt business and labor offers a meaty conversational melange this month. Reason: Congress' refusal to try more pump-priming left the burden of recovery proof on the shoulders of private enterprise. But at the same time congress did little (in business' eyes) to alleviate business' tax and labor woes. Therefore both business and labor jumped into the national political arena soon after adjournment, one anxious to encourage a trend, the other willing to hop the bandwagon for whatever it was worth.

First word came from President Howard Coonley of the National Association of Manufacturers, who wrote his membership that business should be encouraged by the "conservative" trend in congress, but that "further positive action" was needed. One positive action: Amendment of the Wagner labor act.

(In Washington, the LaFollette civil liberties committee opened its hearings by accusing Mr. Coonley's N. A. M. with "deliberate" attempts to promote "organized disregard" for the Wagner act. N. A. M. called the report a "gross misrepresentation of fact.")

Next day C. I. O.'s Vice President Phillip Murray, whose Boss John Lewis has been in the public dog house ever since he called Vice President John Garner an "evil old man," appeared on a radio network to urge that President Roosevelt summon business, government and labor leaders to a national unemployment conference. The Murray position: "Unemployment is America's No. 1 social, economic, and political problem . . . Failure to solve it constructively might very well rock the foundations of our government."

Hesitant to tack political implications on what appeared to be an honest, labor-sponsored move against unemployment, many business leaders nevertheless held their tongues-in-cheek wondering what Phillip Murray had in mind. Should C. I. O. emerge from such a conference as a Great Peacemaker, business' drive to modify John Lewis' pet Wagner act would be seriously hamstrung.

POLITICS:
New Forecasts

When wallop-trading between legislative and executive branches characterizes a session of congress, there is every reason to expect that each side shall take its version of the story to that final judge—the People. In themselves such post-session rebuttals are merely rehashed opinions, yet President Roosevelt's peculiar interest in the 1940 election will continue to make bigger and better headlines until he decides to seek a third term or retire to Hyde Park.

Worthy of note, therefore, was his comment on signing the Ashurst bill creating a federal court budget officer. At that time he boasted that all objectives of the 1937 court reorganization plan had been accomplished despite the plan's defeat as an entity. Next day he charged congress' defeat of his neutrality and lend-spend legislation was leading business over a precipice. On the third day he created a sensation by warning he would bolt the Democratic party in 1940 if the convention decided on "conservative . . . or lip-service candidates" and a "straddlebug platform."

TEXAS' RAYBURN
"I am for . . . John Garner."

This served to produce 1940 forecasts from previously silent sources. Nebraska's Sen. Edward R. Burke predicted the President would organize and lead a new "liberal" party. He also thanked Mr. Roosevelt for bringing about such a realignment, terming the present labels "Democrat" and "Republican" as "an offense to the intelligence of the electorate."

Most sensational development, however, came from the President's own house leader, Texas' Rep. Sam Rayburn. Probably smelling a party rift, he wired this reply to a query by the Fort Worth Star-Telegram: "I am for that outstanding Texan and liberal Democrat, John N. Garner, for the presidential nomination in 1940, believing that if elected he will make . . . a great President."

Meanwhile, North Dakota's Republican Sen. Gerald Nye saw that a Roosevelt drift toward super-liberalism meant that all parties must follow suit in modified fashion. Said he: "If the Republican party is going to get anywhere in 1940 it has got to make up its mind that its candidate and platform are going to have to be forward-looking and progressive. Both will have to . . . maintain and improve some of the advances . . . established under the New Deal."

Another voice, that of Minnesota's Farmer-Laborite Sen. Ernest Lundeen: "If the A. F. of L. and C. I. O. would get together they would hold the 1940 election in the palm of their hand. The farm vote would swing in and they could march right into the White House."

Cottons Take on Importance In 'Back-to-School' Wardrobe

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

PLANNING a back-to-school wardrobe for young 1939 sophisticates? Here's news of smart cottons, for cottons are gaining in style prestige. They are the more persuasive in that they are such grand and glorious washable successes, added to which they are durable as well as smart.

True aristocrats among the newer fabrics are the fine shantung cottons and the highly mercerized poplins, both of which actually seem to improve with repeated launderings, for the iron brings out the native luster of the cotton.

Fall prints are more subdued. The backgrounds are darker. No wise mother chooses any print these days that is less than perfectly washable, completely color-fast and sanforized shrunk.

For dress-up, little girls will wear stunning cloque piques, fine linens, washable spun rayons and new crashes that resemble linens but are actually serviceable cotton.

Another outstanding favorite is washable gabardine for school and for all autumn activities. Blouses, shorts, skirts, culottes, in fact every conceivable type of garment for youthful wearers of both sexes who lead a strenuous outdoor life are showing in cotton gabardines that are processed so they cannot shrink out of fit.

Destined to be a schoolgirl favorite is the cunning dress pictured to the left at the top in the group. As much like mother's bolero jacket outfit as possible is this modish frock designed so cleverly for little daughter with whom it is most certain to prove first choice to wear "first day of school." Made of fine quality shantung broadcloth guaranteed pre-shrunk of course, this model is most attractive. The bolero comes off and leaves a smart little short-sleeved frock. Worn with a new fall felt, the outfit makes a chic junior ensemble to snuggle under a good warm coat when cool weather sets in.

An ideal tubster is the cunning dress worn by the youngster seated in the foreground. It is made of a modern safe-for-washing print, the excellent shantung cotton print that mothers know and approve for back-to-school wardrobes. Note the dainty hand-fagotting in the collar and please observe that a generous shirring gives plenty of front and back fullness. The pockets are clever and new.

The smiling young bicyclist on the right wears a very intriguing frock styled of a striped cotton print that is almost as sturdy a weave as could be found in any collection of materials, added to which is its attractiveness. The skirt is pleated and a gypsy sash of the material ties at the waist.

The teen-age who possess almost an uncanny style sense are having great fun ensembling gabardine outfits that make color their theme. A marine blue gabardine skirt, a yellow blouse, a magenta kid belt, a yellow jacket, a bright headkerchief square that has peasant figurines dancing around the wide border goes to the color limit and yet how effective it is and best of all dependably washable.

In choosing the new bright cottons we can't urge mothers too strongly to stop, look and be cautious before they buy. Look at the label whether it be an all-ready-to-wear garment you are selecting for Junior or little sister or a washable fabric by the yard. Look for service guarantees of non-shrinkage and no-fade on the fabrics.

Leading Vogue

Here is a charming interpretation of the "little dinner" suit. It contrasts a formal floor-length skirt with a wee jacket blouse. The fabric that fashions this attractive dinner dress is tecla twill, a crimped spun acetate rayon weave that looks like sheer suedelike wool and feels like duvetyn. The modish jacket that buttons around the waist accenting a deep V-neckline is in dusty pink. The skirt, in an Indian wine shade, is styled with a front fullness that lends its sculptural grace.

Flare for Suede Knows No Bounds

It's going to prove a record season for suede. Paris cables say "suede" with emphasis, citing accessory ensembles of hat, bag, belt and gloves done in richly colorful suede. Some suede enthusiasts are dressing in suede from head to foot. The new suede processing is so amazing, the results are a lightness and softness that yields perfectly to fabric treatments. In consequence high-fashion women are taking to wearing stunning dresses of suede or perhaps a suede topper completes a tweed suit. It's a complete conquest that suede has made in the fashionable world.

Sweaters in for Big Run for Fall

It's going to be a tremendous sweater season. You can get any type of sweater in any color, keyed to any occasion from the most formal to the most sportsy.

Sweaters, ever the schoolgirls' delight, resort to all sorts of tricky devices, such as the names of leading colleges scribbled in gay print all over. Bars of music embroidered across the front of your sweater is something to attract the eye. Latest college girl whim is to wear the long cardigan sweater backwards—instead of buttoning it up at front button it at the back.

One, already into custody, died on a ish warship. The others were martialed and found guilty six of them, including La- re, former King's Attorney- al in Louisiana, and Milhet, ealthiest merchant in New ns, were shot.

t O'Reilly dissolved the old ior council of Louisiana and ced it with the Spanish su- preme council, or cabildo. He also put into practice the arbitrary colonial regulations of Spain and decreed a new "black code" which provided the severest penalties for all kinds of offenses.

For a year the people of Louisiana suffered under his autocratic rule. Then he was recalled to Spain and in 1775 placed in command of an expedition against Algiers which was unsuccessful. But he apparently did not lose the confidence of his monarch for he was subsequently made commander-general of Andalusia and governor of Cadiz. In 1794, while he was on his way to assume command of the army of the eastern Pyrenees, he died and it is probable that there was no mourning in Louisiana when news of his death reached there.

Quite different was the attitude of the Louisiana citizens, both French and Spanish, toward the man who became their governor in 1777 and their American contemporaries had a special reason for remembering him gratefully, too. For he helped them win their war for freedom from England. Bernardo de Galvez was his name and he was born of a distinguished and powerful family at Malaga, Spain, in 1756.

As a youth Bernardo de Galvez was ambitious to win military glory and did so on his first expedition. Made colonel of the regiment of Louisiana, he went to the colony in America in 1776 and when Don Louis Unzaga, who had succeeded O'Reilly as governor, asked to be recalled, Galvez, through his family's influence, was appointed to that post, although he was then barely 24 years of age.

DON BERNARDO DE GALVEZ

The young governor promptly restored to the French colonials the right to trade with France, thereby winning their gratitude. His predecessor had followed a policy of "benevolent neutrality" toward the American colonies who were then in revolt against England. Galvez not only continued that policy but went farther.

In 1778 the continental Congress sent a Captain Willing to New Orleans to get munitions which the Patriot army so sorely needed and Galvez not only permitted the sale of arms and ammunition to Willing but contributed $70,000 to the American cause.

The king of Spain had offered to mediate in the dispute between England and her American colonies and when the offer was spurned, Spain followed the example of France and on May 8, 1779, declared war on the English. The following July Galvez received permission from his king to seize the British forts in Alabama, Mississippi and West Florida.

Galvez called a meeting of the French inhabitants of New Orleans in the historic Place d' Armes and as a dramatic gesture announced that he would renounce the governorship if the natives would not support him in his expedition against the English. Since France had already joined forces with the Americans, since there were in New Orleans many Acadian refugees, who had good reason to hate the English, and since the boyish Spanish governor had endeared himself to the French in many ways, the young men of that city didn't hesitate long before volunteering to accompany him.

Rejecting the suggestion that he wait for reinforcements from Havana, Galvez, with 670 men, Spanish regulars, French Creoles, Acadians and American volunteers under Oliver Pollock, seized the British fort at Manhuac, captured Baton Rouge and received the surrender of Natchez. The next year Fort Charlotte at Mobile fell.

In 1781, re-enforced by a fleet and army from Havana, Galvez attacked Pensacola. When the men-of-war attempted to cross the bar, however, the San Roman ran aground and the commander of the fleet, Commodore Calbo de Irazabel, declined to risk any more of his frigates.

A Bold Exploit.

Galvez, who realized the importance of having the fleet to be assured of arms and food on St. Rosa island, his base, resolved to shame the commodore into cooperating. He embarked, therefore, on the brig Galveston, commanded by Rosseau, a Creole, and raised his pennant on the brig. Followed by a schooner and two gunboats, he boldly entered the port and acted with such valor that the main squadron followed the next day and safely crossed the bar.

After several months' siege, Fort George and Fort Red Cliff were taken and the way to the main defenses of Pensacola opened. A terrific bombardment was continued until an explosion made a great breach in the walls. Then a storming party rushed in and compelled the surrender of General Campbell with his garrison of 800 regulars.

As a reward for Galvez's brilliant success, the king made him lieutenant-general of Louisiana, the Floridas, East and West, and Cuba. He was also given the royal permission to place upon his coat of arms a figure of the brig, Galveston, with the motto "Yo Solo" (I Alone). In 1785 he was made viceroy of Mexico to succeed his father. He died there in 1786 after having been viceroy for only a year.

The name of Don Bernardo de Galvez lives today in the great city or Galveston, Texas, but Americans have other reasons for remembering him. Not only did he provide the patriot army with munitions at a time when they were most needed, but his conquests of the British posts in the Southeast prevented their using them as bases of attack on the Americans in the old Northwest in Georgia and the Carolinas.

When the Revolution ended, had England held the Mississippi as well as the St. Lawrence the boundaries of the new nation, as well as its future destiny, might have been far different from what they became. Spain later ceded Louisiana back to France and Napoleon Bonaparte sold it to the United States. England made one more effort to gain a foothold on the Gulf of Mexico when, toward the end of the War of 1812, she landed an army near New Orleans. What happened to it when it attacked Gen. Andrew Jackson's army on January 8, 1815. is history.

The first American governor of Louisiana, like some of his predecessors and some of his successors, had his troubles. And one of his worst troubles was an individual named Jean Lafitte.

This first governor was William Charles Cole Claiborne, born in Sussex county, Virginia, in 1775. In 1801 his fellow-Virginian, President Thomas Jefferson, made him governor of the Territory of Mississippi and two years later he was appointed commissioner, with Gen. James Wilkinson, to accept the transfer of the Louisiana Purchase from the French. He was appointed governor of the province of Louisiana for three years and when it was made a territory in 1804 he resigned control of Mississippi Territory to govern the new one.

In 1810 Claiborne took possession of Baton Rouge and Mobile, which up to that time were still held by the Spanish, despite the fact that the French had sold Louisiana to the United States. Two years later, by an act of congress, Louisiana was made a state and the people of the new state elected Claiborne as their first state governor. And then his troubles began.

The source of these troubles were two brothers, Pierre Lafitte, and his younger brother, Jean—two Frenchmen who had come to New Orleans by way of the West Indies. At first they acted as agents for a colony of smugglers living in the Bay of Barataria. Then they became their leaders and moved their home from New Orleans to the island, Grand Terre, in the Bay of Barataria.

From that time on the record is not entirely clear as to the exact nature of the Lafittes' activities. Jean Lafitte always insisted that it was privateering and that they preyed only upon ships carrying enemy flags. But historians are pretty generally agreed that it was piracy and it is as "Lafitte the Pirate" that he has come down in history.

The people of New Orleans were inclined to view these activities leniently—they enjoying being able to buy all sorts of goods at a lower price than that charged by more ethical venders of merchandise than the Lafittes. But Governor Claiborne was not inclined to wink at such goings-on within his jurisdiction.

So on November 24, 1813, he posted his famous proclamation offering a reward for the capture of "Jean Lafitte, pirate." Two days later Jean Lafitte, cleverly using the same language as the chief executive of the state, posted a proclamation offering a reward of $1,000 for the delivery of Governor Claiborne at Grand Terre! Thereupon New Orleans shook with laughter. But not Governor Claiborne.

He saw to it that all of the Baratarians were indicted for piracy and when Pierre Lafitte was caught in New Orleans, he was held without bail. When he came to trial, however, two famous attorneys whom Jean Lafitte had hired for a fee of $20,000 succeeded in getting him acquitted. Soon afterwards, however, public opinion changed and plans were made to wipe out the nest of pirates in the Bay of Barataria. Pierre Lafitte was again arrested and this time he was kept in jail.

Then came the invasion of the British army; Jean Lafitte's offer of his services and those of his men to the American cause, the effort of British officers to enlist the services of the Baratarians and Jean Lafitte's clever bit of double-crossing of them. He sent Governor Claiborne news of the British proposition and renewed his offer to serve the Americans. As a result Pierre Lafitte was allowed to escape from jail and the Lafittes and their Baratarians served valorously in Jackson's army which whipped Pakenham's redcoats at the historic Battle of New Orleans on January 8, 1815. As a result of this patriotic service Jean Lafitte and his followers were legally forgiven by the federal government and reinstated to American citizenship.

Presumably they were forgiven by Governor Claiborne, too. At least he was troubled no more by the Lafittes who established a pirate colony near Galveston, Texas, then ruled by the Spanish. In 1816 Governor Claiborne was elected United States senator but died in New Orleans on November 23, 1817, before he was able to take office.

FARM BOYS FOLLOW FATHERS' BUSINESS

Survey Shows Rural Youths Stay With Agriculture.

By PROF. W. A. ANDERSON

Farm boys are more likely to stick to farming as an occupation than are city boys to follow the occupations of their fathers. Farming as an occupation is continued from father to son twice as often as are other occupations.

When farm boys choose the professions or enter business, they are just as successful as their city cousins. When sons of farmers do not follow farming as a life work, they enter all types of occupations, including law, medicine, business ownership, and skilled mechanical trades.

Although farm boys take city jobs, city boys as a rule do not enter farming or allied occupations; therefore farming is largely self-perpetuating.

A recent study includes facts about the occupation of the student's paternal grandfather, or father's father, and of his sons for 803 families, and for the student's father and his sons for 616 families. This sample does not represent a cross-section of the general farming and non-farming population. The agricultural students come largely from the more successful farm families, and the arts students from the business and professional classes.

For both farming and non-farming occupations, it was shown that similar occupations are handed-down most often to the oldest son in the family, which is more true of farming than of other callings. Brothers may influence brothers in their life work but the influence did not appear to be very great.

Within the same family line, the extent to which farming is passed on through all three generations decreases, but less so than in non-farming enterprises.

One reason for this is that the increasing size of farms, the use of more machinery, and the higher productivity of agriculture means that fewer sons are required in agriculture. As a result, a decrease is to be expected.

In the generation of the farming grandfathers 50 per cent of the sons became farmers; in the generation of the farming fathers but 31 per cent became farmers.

Bruised Potatoes Spoil More Easily in Storage

In storing potatoes damage is done by dumping the tubers through the chute in the roof of the cellar to the floor below, especially if the tubers are immature. Decay follows very quickly and even if the tubers are not destroyed, they are permanently injured by turning black. It will cost little more to drive in and empty the sacks carefully, but it more than pays for the extra cost in better keeping qualities and higher value.

Heavy losses occur from piling the potatoes up high in the bin or cellar without providing for a circulation of air. If the cellar is provided with false floor and partitions are used, and if the partitions are not more than 10 feet apart, the piles may be six or seven feet deep. If no partitions are used, then it is advisable to use bin ventilators made from ordinary woven-wire fencing. These ventilators are made by bending the netting into cylinders eight inches in diameter and setting them six or eight feet apart. These ventilators should rest on the floor and extend to the top of the potatoes. Meshes of the fencing should be small so as to prevent the ventilators from filling up with potatoes.

Agricultural Notes

Of the defects which cause potatoes to be below No. 1 grade, bruising is by far the most serious. Careful handling pays profits.

It pays to pack eggs with the small end down, says H. H. Alp, extension poultryman, College of Agriculture, University of Illinois.

Feed growing pullets so that when they start laying in the fall they will have enough reserve energy built up to lay throughout the winter months.

Clean fleeces, well tied with paper string, bring the best prices. Buyers will not pay wool prices for dirt, burrs, chaff, and other foreign materials.

American farms are now being electrified at the rate of 200,000 a year, a far more rapid acceleration than was recorded in all the years prior to the depression. Nearly a million and a half farm homes are now using electricity.

The city worker depends on agriculture as a market. From him, the farmer buys machinery, fertilizer, fuel, building supplies, petroleum products, household equipment, clothing and a hundred other articles which are factory products.

'Twas High Time to Call Halt, Thought the Lady

Former Senator Fess was condemning in Atlantic City the war talk that is troubling the world.

"How unreasonable war is," he ended. "It is more unreasonable than the prize fight seemed to the old lady. An old lady said on her return from the big city:

" 'One evening my son-in-law took me to a prize fight. I never saw such a thing. The two men came out on the stage and shook hands like the best of friends, then they began to punch each other all for nothing. They kept on punching till a man in the corner yelled "Time" and nobody answered, so I pulled out my watch and shouted, "Ten o'clock"!' "

BACK TO SCHOOL AGAIN

Monday Johnny and Mary in every neighborhood of the United States will pack books under their arm and bid farewell to the summer vacation, as they go back to school. Most of the Johnnies can think of a lot better things to do than trudge back to school, leaving the old swimming hole, fishing, and baseball behind. The Marys' as a rule, find extra thrills in wearing new dresses, slippers, and possibly have a new "permanent" to start off the new year at school.

How we older fellows envy those youngsters, but we are glad that they have a great opportunity ahead of them. Who knows but that Johnny may some day be a big business man, a successful farmer and perhaps someday become a noted statesman. Mary also has an opportunity in business, educational and professional work or may become the wife of Johnny who once carried her books to school and wrote silly notes to her. Who knows?

U S NAVAL ACADEMY BOYS ARE HAELTHY

Since our son, Ray, Jr., has enrolled in the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, we have learned much about how Uncle Sam takes care of his boys. A recent letter from our "sea-going printer" tells of the supplies used in one day at the Academy to feed the hungry naval officers of the future. Here's the list:

2.000 pounds of meat; 1,500 pounds of potatoes; 1,600 pounds of bread; 400 pounds of butter; 350 large pies; 4,000 doughnuts; 3,400 eggs; 350 pounds of bacon; 80 pounds of coffee; 60 gallons of ice cream . . . besides vast amounts of milk, fruits, canned goods, vegetables, etc., etc. And then Ray Jr. goes on to say: "Costs Uncle Sam $50 000 a month for food here. No wonder his boys are healthy what!"

The boys at the Naval Academy work hard, play hard, and are given the very best of care. They get up at 6·15 a. m. and retire at 10:00 p. m Every minute of the day is on a strict schedule for meals, work, recreation and study. The out-door work, consists of drill, rifle and pistol shooting, boating, sailing, seamanship, swimming, signalling, etc. Regular hours are set aside for all kinds of sports and recreation. There are two picture shows each week and other entertainment for the boys. Chapel services are held every Sunday morning. Sunday afternoons the boys who have passed certain requirements are allowed to take small sail boats out on the bay where they can sail around and enjoy themselves in that sport.

THIS BUSINESS OF TRADING AT HOME

The writer was conversing with a prominent business man in one of Iowa's larger cities some time ago, and the topic lead around to the age old question of "Trading at Home."

We business men in the smaller towns think only of our own problems. We wonder why people will drive to Mason City and other larger towns to do some of their trading . . . in many instances they could buy the same merchandise right here at home and save money

But, we were surprised when our friend, a business man, said they were up against the same thing. We will take Mason City for instance and presume he was in business there. This is what he said: "You buiness men in the smaller towns have nothing more to worry about that we do right here. Our 'best' customers will go to Des Moines, the Twin Cities or Chicago instead of buying at home here in Mason City. I am told that the business men in Des Moines, Minneapolis and Chicago also have the same complaint. Their 'best' customers will go to New York, or even London and Paris to do their shopping." Can you beat that?

Klemme stores carry a good stock of merchandise and you will find fair prices here. But if you feel "Ritzie" then why not go to Paris and do this thing up right?

. . . and we read of one Mason City man who went to Des Moines to buy furniture. The poor fellow was murdered. The moral of which might be "Trade at home and stay alive."

NO GADABOUTS

Mark up another score in the economy league for the Wilson administration. A study of the record that has been written since the inauguration of Governor Wilson discloses substantial savings of the taxpayers money in all departments of state government. Not the least of these savings is represented in the matter of out-of-the-state travel by both elective and appointive state officials. During the first six months of Governor Wilson's administration the state Executive Council authorized only 131 persons to make out of the state trips on state business. This number includes all trips to such nearby cities as Omaha, nebr., Rock Island, Ill., and other border cities where auditors for the cigarette and beer department, the gasoline tax department and the real estate and corporation investigators must go at regular intervals to make routine investigations. Compared to the 131 travel authorizations by the present economy administration the records disclose that the democratic Kraschel administration, noted for its generosity with the taxpayers money, authorized 254 out of the state trips for the corresponding period in 1938. A conservative estimate of the savings to the taxpayers of Iowa through the present Executive Council's refusal to issue free travel passes upon the slightest provocation would be $10,000 for the first six months of the Wilson administration. At the insistence of Governor Wilson, too, the Executive Council now requires that all officials making out of the state trips must furnish the Council with a written report of the meetings they attended or the business they transacted.

"DUMMY" PLATES

A recent report shows, and the public records bear out the truth of the report, that the state motor vehicle deparment has issued 77 "dummy" license plates—licenses which disguise official state-owned cars to make them appear as private cars. It is appropriate at this time to look into accomplishments in this regard. All "dummy" license plates issued by the present administration have been issued to men doing police or investigation work for the state, federal or local governments. The records show that approximately the same number were issued for police or investigative cars—the only legal use—during the last administration. But the records further show that the total number of "dummy" license plates issued was 227. By a simple process of subtraction, 227 minus 77, the report shows 150 "dummy" license plates issued illegally to office holders who were not engaged in police activity. The plates were used to disguise official cars so that the drivers could use them on personal trips. It is just one more practice of the past administration of personal gain through the public service which has been stopped by a conscientious Republican administration.

PARDON

Governor Wilson has issued a suspension of sentence to Marvin Grattan, 91-year-old Civil war veteran, who was convicted of manslaughter and sentenced to eight years in the Ft. Madison penitentiary. Grattan's term would have expired November 10 of this year, and the governor's action frees him not quite three months earlier. Grattan has been denied a parole because he virtually had a parole in his transfer to the Iowa State Soldiers Home at Marshalltown, granted by the Board of Control because of his advanced age. He also could not be paroled because his age prevented the parole board from obtaining gainful employment for him. The governor based his decision on the age of his prisoner, his desire to attend what possibly will be the last national encampment of the "Boys in Blue," in Pittsburgh, Penn., August 27 to September 1, and because of Grattan's desire to make his permanent home in Virginia.

THEY LIKE IT

Governor Wilson's "open door" policy of "letting the sun shine in the state house" continues to catch the public fancy. A salesman for a large national manufacturing concern, who calls upon state officials in a number of mid-western states, came to Iowa recently. He called at the state house, was courteously received by the governor, and as he left stated to a state house worker: "I am utterly amazed. I never saw anything like it. In most states you have to run the gauntlet of a battery of secretaries only to find that the governor will not see you. But out here in Iowa you can call upon the governor and chat with him as freely as though you were calling on your next door neighbor." "But," he added, "Why shouldn't you Iowa permitted to call upon with your governor. You ing him to do a job for that's the attitude of Wilson The people of "paying him to do a job and that's the reason for door" policy, that has popular with the people

Dish Towels Marked In Your Hand Writing

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

THERE is logic in the idea that glasses, china and pots and pans should have their own towels. Here is a simple way to make that logic work. Write across a corner of each towel with a soft pencil the purpose for which it is to be used. Use a soft pencil and your best script with the tall letters at least two inches high. If you want to trace the words from paper, blacken the back of the paper with your pencil, place it black side down on the material then draw the outline.

Work over the hand writing with heavy, bright colored embroidery thread. Chain stitch, as shown here at the upper right, gives a good strong outline and may be done quickly. Use a different color for each kind of towel. Colored facings of prepared bias binding used flat as shown at the lower left make a practical edge finish. If you use flour and sugar sacks for dish towels, these suggestions for adding color will be especially useful.

Sentinels of Health

Don't Neglect Them!

Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—itself—is constantly producing waste. No matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure.

When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out.

Frequent, scanty or burning passages may be further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance.

The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed the country over. Insist on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.

THERE'S a plan under way whereby dramatic radio offerings may reach the screen, with you, the public, selecting them.

Radio Guild Productions, Inc., of Hollywood, is behind it. The idea is that monthly contests will be held, the contestants writing to headquarters and giving their reasons for thinking that certain programs should be screened. No serials included, just plays that are complete in one broadcast.

At the end of three months, the winning script would be adapted for the screen. Prizes will be awarded contestants.

ISAIAH: A LIFE DEDICATED TO GOD

LESSON TEXT—Isaiah 6:1-13.
GOLDEN TEXT—Here am I; send me.—Isaiah 6:8.

Crisis! We have had so many of them that they have almost become commonplace. There has been one war crisis after another. There have been world crisis and domestic crisis until the word has almost lost its meaning.

In the life of the individual, however, the times of crisis are very real and important. In a critical illness one knows when the crisis comes, and he who safely passes that hour is on the road to recovery. More vital than a physical crisis is a spiritual crisis, when a man meets God face to face and his future destiny is determined by the response which he makes to God's call. Isaiah had such an experience when he came to realize God's glory, confessed his own unworthiness, and sought cleansing of life as a preparation for commission to service.

I. "I Saw the Lord" (vv. 1-4).

King Uzziah, who had begun well but had forgotten God, was at the end of his life, a leper because of his sin, and dying in disgrace. Israel which had known unprecedented prosperity under God's blessing now hardened its heart nationally against God and was also about to go into eclipse. God needed a man to speak for Him in such an hour, to bring to His people a message of judgment and also of blessed invitation. To prepare that man, the great Isaiah, God gave a remarkable manifestation of His glory and power.

It is essential that the man who speaks for God should first see the Lord high and lifted up and to hear of His holiness and glory. The negative tone of the present-day message, the lack of enthusiasm and interest in holy things, the low standards of personal holiness, the failure to preach boldly the truth regarding God's holy standards are to be explained by the fact that there has been no vision of the eternal holiness and glory of God. The need of the people today is the same as it was in the time of Isaiah. Where are the men and women who are ready for a vision like his and for the commission which will follow?

II. "Woe Is Me! for I Am Undone" (v. 5).

To see the holiness of God is to be immediately conscious of one's own sin and unworthiness. The obvious conclusion which one draws from that fact is that anyone who is proud, who is not concerned about his own sins and the sins of his people, is living far from God and has either never known or has forgotten about His divine holiness.

Isaiah spoke of the pollution of his lips, thereby confessing that his heart was not right. Whereof the heart is full, thereof speaketh the mouth, for we read in Matthew 12: 34 that out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh. Remember that even though Isaiah was a believer he recognized the need of cleansing.

III. "Then . . . He Touched My Mouth" (vv. 6, 7, R. V.).

"Then" — what an important word! When Isaiah called out in humble confession, "then" he was cleansed. The turning point is right at that place for any life. Only when we come to the place of confession and contrition which Isaiah knew, can we expect the Lord to send the cleansing fire and the enabling power.

None but God can give this cleansing. Man is unable to wash himself clean. "For though thou wash thee with nitre, and take thee much soap, yet thine iniquity is marked before me, saith the Lord" (Jer. 2:22. See also Jer. 13:23). Reformation, turning over a new leaf, character development, all commendable in their place, are not sufficient. There must be divine cleansing of the life if there is to be a commission to service.

IV. "Here Am I; Send Me" (vv. 8-13).

God had a difficult and unpopular message to be delivered but now He had a man who was ready to carry it. Isaiah had to proclaim to Israel that because they had turned from the sunshine of God's love, which would have melted their hard hearts, it had for them become the sunshine of His wrath, which could only progressively harden them and turn them from Him. The same sunshine that melts the wax hardens the mud.

The work of God in our day awaits the man or the woman of vision—the one who has been prepared by confession and cleansing and who has then received the divine commission.

Faith

Of all the forces at the disposal of humanity, faith has always been one of the most tremendous, and the gospel rightly attributes to it the power of moving mountains.

PATTERN DEPARTMENT SEWING CIRCLE

GIRLS planning to go away to college will be particularly delighted with these gay and youthful patterns—day and night, night and day—these are the ones you want! But everybody with an eye for style and a flair for sewing will like them! The pajamas (1794) are just as easy to tailor as they are comfortable to wear and charming to look at, with the quaint square neckline and triangular pockets. Flat crepe, silk print, broadcloth and flannel are nice materials for them.

Slimming Basque Bodice.

A dress that will send your morale and your spirits soaring, whether you wear it to an office, classroom, or just on shopping trips, is 1797. And why? Because the basque bodice makes your waistline look about as big as a minute, the skirt has a delightfully piquant flare, and the collar and cuffs give you a fresh, appealing, little girl look. Choose flat crepe or silk print for this—or thin wool.

The Patterns.

Photographs taken during a stratosphere flight of the National Geographic society-army air corps balloon Explorer II, at an altitude of 72,395 feet above the earth's surface showing the lateral curvature of the earth includes a stretch of the horizon 220 miles in length. This represents more than three degrees of a circle, nearly one 100th of the total circumference of the earth.

The curve of the horizon was easily noticeable when the picture was projected on a screen. When the edge of a ruler is laid along the horizon line the curvature is even more plainly visible.

Harley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Barz, had his tonsils removed at a Mason City hospital Monday. Harley is making a good recovery from his surgical experience.

Miss Glenna Gruetzmacher, who has spent the summer vacation with her mother, Mrs. Frank Gruetzmacher in Klemme, left Friday for Winthrop, Iowa, where she will again teach in the high school this coming school year.

Mr and Mrs Herman Back and daughter, Marilyn, and son, Billie, and Mr. and Mrs. Nels Back and daughter, Marcelle, were at Belle Plaine and Blairstown over the week end. They drove down to take in the celebration at Blairstown and to leave Marilyn at Belle Plain where she will be a senior in the high school this year.

Not So Dumb.

Anglers have long praised the shrewdness of the trout. Just to show that this confidence is not displaced, trout in the state fish hatchery at Strawberry Point will rush for the bank when an attendant steps up at meal-time with a bucket of chopped lungs-and-livers. Which reminds us, Delmar Dabbit once claimed that while the trout is a smart fish—the sardine is "cannier." (This is not a very good joke, but it fills up.)

DEPOSIT WITH A STRONG BANK

This is the season American youth goes back to school! In one of the greatest educational systems in the world, boys and girls will settle down to study, not according to the dictates of any one man or group, but according to what experience has shown to be essential for a basic education plus the types of studies they wish to pursue in preparation for their selected vocations.

In some countries, youth is taught only what it is safe for them to know; they are denied an insight into a life of freedom; they learn hatred and intolerance; their games are games of war.

As American citizens, your children are privileged to learn with an open mind, to form their own judgement, to develop into level headed citizens who will be the business men and government leaders of tomorrow. Education is the tool with which individuals in a free country can carve out their niche in life. This is America—keep the boys and girls in school.

This bank joins with the community in extending greetings to teachers at the beginning of another school year with best wishes for a successful term for both teachers and students.

HEALTHY CHILDREN ARE BETTER STUDENTS

In a short time, your children will be starting back to school, and it is your responsibility as parents to see to it that they are physically able to reap all the benefits which education affords them

First, your child's eyesight and hearing should be checked for any possible abnormalities He may never have shown any symptons which led you to believe his vision or hearing was impaired, but minor defects in either sense are often successfully camouflaged.

Second many children have long standing chronic infections of the respiratory passages which keep them in a constant state of lowered resistance. In this condition, they are unable to give close attention to their work; they tire easily, eat poorly and exhibit little energy Such infections must be eliminated before they can meet their school requirements.

Third, when your child goes to school he is surruonded by numerous children from many different homes, and the chance for contracting diseases is multiplied. To check this, your children should be immunized against those diseases for which there is a protection, namely, smallpox, diphtheria and whooping cough

During the school year, you should provide well balanced meals for your children three times a day You can't expect them to be well nourished on a cold glass of milk and a sandwich gulped down at the noon recess Also, each child should have a definite hour at which he must retire and arise Generally speaking, about nine or ten hours of sleep are adequate Personal cleanliness should be emphasized at all times, and a daily bath shoud be a requisite.

The execution of these health habits, in addition to the elimination of any physical dsturbances, will work definitely toward good health for your children during the ensuing year

HOG PRICES MAY RISE MORE BEFORE DROPPING

Major developments in the hog market during August were a seasonal decrease in marketings, an increase in the number of light weight butcher hogs and a decrease in the proportion of sows, report economists in the Extension Service of Iowa State College The decrease in marketing lifted hog prices during the last 3 weeks in August.

It seems likely, the economists report, that marketing of hogs will decrease during the next few weeks before the heavy seasonal expansion begins. Prices probably will go somewhat higher before the real seasonal decline begins.

With a greatly increased spring pig crop coming to market during the next 7 or 8 months and no prospect for a rapid improvement in demand conditions, a normal seasonal decline in prices seems the minimum to expect.

GERADI WILL BE HEARD ON NEW KGLO TIME SCHEDULE

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS BY HENRY W. PORTER

New Crisis Looms as Germany And Poland Mobilize Troops; Chamberlain Summons Aides

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union

World attention was focused early this week on the little town of Zilina (shown above), strategic railway center of Slovakia where 50,000 German troops were reported to be concentrated after the Reich had taken military possession of the Slovak republic which was already under German "protection." From Zilina more than a quarter of a million were deploying along a 100-mile front facing the Polish border.

EUROPE:
Week of Crisis

Peace or war?

Renewed activity, both military and diplomatic, indicated that this question may be answered one way or the other before this week of crisis ends.

Concentration of more than a quarter of million German troops, fully equipped for war, along Slovakia's border with Poland followed closely upon a conference between Hitler and Count Stephen Csaky, Hungarian foreign minister, after which it was announced that Hungary and the Reich had become firmly allied. Both of these moves were regarded as a part of the German plan to "encircle" Poland and as a buildup for Hitler's making a 'final offer" to Poland on his demands for Danzig and a link with East Prussia through Pomorze (the Polish Corridor).

To meet this armed threat, Poland began sending troop reinforcements toward her frontiers facing Germany and Slovakia as a "precautionary measure against any eventuality." However, there were indications that Poland, feeling this military pressure, might advance some plan for settlement of the Danzig question by negotiation.

There were equally strong indications that she would resist armed force with armed force and count upon Great Britain to back her up. Whether or not her confidence in that backing is well-placed will become apparent if Prime Minister Chamberlain, who interrupted a vacation in Scotland to return to London, issues a statement after his conference with Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax, War Minister Leslie Hore-Belisha, Sir John Simon, chancellor of the exchequer, Sir Samuel Hoare, home secretary, and Malcolm MacDonald, colonial secretary. Significant was an editorial in the London Times, which often reflects the views of the British government. It said that Great Britain had given Poland "a specific pledge from which it will not and can not recede. It had given no such pledge to Czecho-Slovakia."

Meanwhile, if negotiation, rather than armed force, is used to solve the Danzig question, the impetus for it may come from Rome. After his conference with Hitler, Count Csaky flew to the Italian capital for conversations with Mussolini and his foreign minister, Count Ciano, after which he returned to Budapest. No official announcement of the result of this conference was forthcoming but it is considered likely that the axis powers hope to make Csaky a go-between for negotiations between Berlin and Warsaw. Since Hungary has been on friendly terms with Poland and with the axis powers, especially Italy, the Hungarian foreign minister would fit well into this role.

COUNT CSAKY
A go-between?

What effect the recently proclaimed trade agreement between Germany and Russia will have upon the resumption of negotiations for a three-power mutual asistance agreement between Great Britain, France and the Soviet is still undetermined. This agreement, which will probably give Germany access to much-needed raw materials, may so strengthen her hand in Europe's power politics that it may have a very decisive effect upon negotiations over Danzig, if that problem is to be settled by negotiation.

The latest move toward maintaining peace by negotiation was made by Belgium. King Leopold's government has invited the ministers of six small powers to rush to Brussels by airplane and join with Belgium in a peace plea to the larger nations. Those who were invited and who are said to have accepted the invitation were the Netherlands, Luxemburg, Sweden, Norway, Denmark and Finland.

LABOR:
'Gag' on Ford?

The Ford Motor company has notified the National Labor Relations board that it would not comply with an order which the board had issued against it reaffirming its earlier ruling that the company was guilty of violating the Wagner act by refusing to reinstate 24 men, said to have been discharged for union activity.

The new labor board decision retained the disputed section of the earlier ruling which required the firm to "cease and desist from . . . interfering with . . . its employees in the exercise of rights guaranteed in Section 7 of the act by circulating, distributing, or otherwise disseminating among its employees statement of propaganda which disparages or criticizes labor organization . . ."

HENRY FORD
Denied "free speech"?

The board referred mainly to the famous "Fordisms" as written by Henry Ford. The quotations contained anti-union sentiments.

In replying to the labor board, P. E. Martin, Ford vice president, denied that the company had discharged members of the United Automobile Workers of America or otherwise intimidated them and charged that the right of free speech was being denied Ford.

AGRICULTURE:
Milk Parley

As the result of renewed violence in upstate New York, marked by more milk-dumping and some skull-cracking when police and state troopers clashed with milk plant pickets, Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York city this week called farmer and distributor representatives into a conference to seek a peaceful solution of their dispute. The mayor's action came after the dairymen's strike had cut the usual supply available to the metropolitan area from 4,400,000 quarts to 2,300,000 quarts, although both sides had given assurance that hospitals, public institutions and other needy customers would receive an adequate supply.

The Farmers' Dairy union, which claims a membership of 15,000 dairy farmers and which is supported by the C. I. O., called the strike in an effort to force distributors to pay them $2.35 a hundredweight (or 47 quarts) for all classes of milk. The present price for such "blended" milk, which is used for manufacturing as well as drinking purposes—is $1.60 a hundredweight.

Hearings in Syracuse and New York city to discuss the price structure have been ordered for this week by the United States department of agriculture.

POLITICS:
'Stop Spending!'

Calling upon the Roosevelt administration to take the lead in a cooperative effort by business, labor, farmers and others to stimulate production, the American Federation of Labor in its monthly survey of business declared that an expansion of industry is necessary to forestall "a further demand for government spending, with its danger of inflation and consequent losses to wage earners."

It said experts contended that production increases could be planned for the country as a whole, but that businessmen were not likely to lead in the expansion because business risks were greater and profits smaller than in predepression years.

Defeat of the administration's lending bill was cited as evidence that congress had rejected the "pump-priming" theory of stimulating recovery and by so doing had placed the responsibility on business.

This suggestion of a farmer-labor-business-government get-together, following close upon the heels of a similar suggestion by Philip Murray, C. I. O. vice president, is regarded as evidence that the A. F. of L. is not only trying to bring a labor peace but will probably side with business in the 1940 campaign against a Roosevelt-backed candidate, unless he discards his philosophy of spending as a method of recovery.

DOMESTIC:
Bund 'Immorality'

Back from Washington, where she had told the Dies committee that she had quit as a German-American Bund Youth leader because of "immorality" in their camps, went 19-year-old Helen Vooros to her home in Brooklyn. As she sat in a restaurant an eight-year-old boy handed her an iodine bottle label, on the back of which was penciled, in shorthand, "Goodbye, life." The boy who delivered this death threat is said to have identified a photograph of a prominent Bund member as the one who handed the label to him with instructions to give it to "the girl in the black dress."

HELEN VOOROS
"Goodbye, life."

Most important witness thus far has been Bundmaster Fritz Kuhn. After hearing his life story, Representative Starnes of the committee asked Kuhn if his organization wasn't intended to establish a Nazi government in the United States.

"That's an absolute lie—a flat lie!" shouted Kuhn.

Flaming with anger, Joe Starnes jumped to his feet. Shoving reporters and photographers aside he strode toward the witness crying: "Don't call me a liar!"

When capitol policemen had put an end to these fighting words, the committee got down to more serious work. With calm deliberation, Illinois Rep. Noah Mason drew enough information from the witness to make German-American bundism distasteful. When faced with the accusation that his bund is "a money-making racket based on the credulity of the American people," Kuhn countered by listing these strange objectives: (1) To unite the German-American element, (2) to fight communism, (3) to give the German element "political background."

ARMY:
'Iron Horses' to Front!

While a group of foreign observers, including military attaches from Germany, France, Great Britain and half a dozen other European countries looked on, the crack mechanized Seventh Cavalry from Fort Knox, Ky., swung into action for the first time in two "battles" in which 52,000 regular soldiers and National Guardsmen were engaged this week in the war games near Plattsburg, N. Y. A day of rain that soaked fields and highways gave Uncle Sam's "iron horses" a real test of their usefulness in modern war.

Before the second phase of the games began, Lieut. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, commander-in-chief, assembled 3,000 officers on the parade ground to present a few facts. Publicly scorned was the suggestion that his troops fight at "paper strength," i. e., with imaginary armament the army hopes some day to secure. The general demanded a campaign of reality, "to bring home the actualities of our state of preparedness." Only in tanks, he said, is the army up to strength. Other deficiencies: manpower, 77 per cent; machine guns, 67 per cent; trucks, 83; automatic rifles, 57.

Said he: "I do not intend to belittle the advantages of speed. But mobility off the battlefield cannot compensate for inefficiency in the conduct of a fight. What we need to learn is how to fight."

INSECTS CAUSE MAN CONSTANT WARFARE

Nature's Balance Often Upset by Cultivated Fields.

By DR. LEE A. STRONG

Civilized man, with his cultivated fields and domesticated live stock, often upsets nature's balance and gives some insect species a profitable inning. To offset this advantage, man must strike an artificial balance.

This he may do by setting one insect to prey upon another, by changes in farming practices, by developing resistant plants and animals, or by the use of insecticides, a principal product of this chemical age.

Insects in other lands may be checked by natural enemies—birds and animals, other insects, or even disease. If in this country they threaten agriculture, the entomologist sometimes can check them by introducing their natural enemies When the citrus industry of California was threatened by the cottony cushion scale from Australia, a little lady-beetle was imported from that country. Cottony cushion scale is no longer a pest in California citrus groves. Wheat growers circumvent the Hessian fly by planting after the flies emerge and die.

However, insecticides are the main reliance of the entomologist. The problem is not simple. The 6,000 insects of this country that are actually pests differ so in physical characteristics and live under such a variety of conditions, that an insecticide that is death to one may not affect another.

Scale insects cannot be poisoned by placing poison on their food. Their mouth parts are a sucking tube which they thrust through the poison into the unpoisoned plant tissue beneath. Young mosquitoes breathe through a tube in the tail thrust above the surface of the water in which they live. Separating this tube from the air with an oil film is an approved control. To better insect control, the entomologist is now turning to organic insecticides. These show great promise.

Sour Cream Important In Good Buttermaking

The sourness of the cream used in butter making is one of the main factors that influence its keeping qualities. Butter made from perfectly sweet pasteurized cream keeps best. The first step is to select fresh, sweet cream and then pasteurize it by heating to between 145 and 150 degrees, holding it at that temperature for 30 minutes.

For pasteurizing, the cream may be put into tall cans or pails and set in a large kettle partly filled with water. It should be stirred frequently while being heated, and then cooled as quickly as possible to 50 degrees or lower. It should be held at that point for at least three hours before being churned to insure that the butter granules will be firm. The churning temperature may be as low as 52 or as high as 60 degrees. Temperature throughout the time the butter is being made is important so that a thermometer is desirable.

Before washing the butter, the temperature of the water should be taken. It should be about the same as that of the cream. Use twice as much water as cream churned. After the buttermilk has drained off, pour one-half the wash water into the churn, give the churn a few rapid revolutions, draw the water off and repeat the washing.

After the salt is added the butter should be worked just enough to distribute the salt evenly. Excessive working destroys the wax-like texture of the butter and also injures its keeping qualities.

Apple Is Popular

"Certain it is the apple has, on the whole, no rival among fruits. There are fruits of more pronounced and even of more delicious flavors. There are fruits which present a high proportion of nutriment. But in variety of color and flavor, in satisfying qualities, in ability to hold its place as a fruit staple against all comers, no other fruit equals the apple."—National Apple Institute.

Picking Pullets Fed Oats

The picking pullet's desire to eat up her sisters is easily overcome by adding oats to her diet, says the Washington Experiment station, in the Country Home Magazine. Oat hulls or oat millfeed will do the trick. But oat hull ash or oat ash will not cure cannibalism.

Contour Plowing

Thomas Jefferson pioneered a theory of government that has had millions of followers since he was President of the United States; but when he urged all farmers to plow on the contours instead of up and down slopes, he did not get enough converts in over 100 years to carry a township election. People believe that the soil is eternal but they forget that its particles are just as well satisfied to spend eternity in the sea as on the hillside.

AT THE studios of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer there is renewed interest in the filming of "Pocahontas"—if they do, they predict that early American history will come in for its rightful share of the spotlight. They've selected that continental glamour girl, Hedy LaMarr, to play the part of the Indian girl, Pocahontas, who captured the heart of Capt. John Smith when she, "whom no entreaty could prevail, got his head in her arms and laid her own upon his to save him from death," when he was captured by her father, Powhatan, and was about to have his brains beaten out.

You probably know any number of people who claim that they gave this or that motion picture star the push that started him or her on the road to fame and fortune. All too frequently those star-starters actually had nothing to do with the person's success.

There are two men who can shine in reflected glory, if they want to, but they're so busy shining in their own glory that they can't be bothered. One is a well-known tailor in Hollywood, Eddie Schmidt.

Adolphe Menjou went to him when he first tackled Hollywood. He knew the value of good clothes, but he hadn't any money. He wanted to make a bargain. If Eddie Schmidt would make him six suits, and trust him for them, he'd tell everybody where he got the clothes. That wardrobe was the thing that turned the balance in Menjou's favor.

The other star-maker is Sardi, who owns the famous restaurant in New York where screen and stage players eat every day in the week.

Not so very long ago William Gargan was stoney broke. He hadn't had a stage engagement for ten months, his wife was in the hospital. But he had to be seen in Sardi's, so that the theatrical world would know that he was still about.

Sardi had noticed him, and had faith in him. He invited the young actor to eat at his expense, also to entertain anyone who was important to him. The investment came to about $800 altogether. Leslie Howard was influential in helping Gargan to make a tremendous success in the stage version of "The Animal Kingdom," Hollywood dangled a contract—and Gargan was set. Both Menjou and Gargan paid their backers' bills the first moment that they had the money.

Isabelle Sheridan, Mary Pickford's cousin, is in the movies yet not in them—and she has no desire to step before a camera.

She's a stand-in—which means that she wears a star's costumes and stands patiently while lighting is tried out on her and the camera man figures what he wants. She's stood in for Constance Cummins, Merle Oberon, Virginia Bruce, Sally Eilers, Joan Blondell and various other actresses. At present she's doing it for Joan Blondell in Hal Roach's "The Housekeeper's Daughter."

Looks as if Jon Hall would go on playing native of the South Seas for the rest of his screen career. "Hurricane" started him, you may recall, and Edward Small's "South of Pago Pago" will keep up the good work.

Bette Davis' performance in "The Old Maid" is so good that people who've never liked her on the screen before are now admitting that the girl can act. And Warner Brothers' plans for screening "The Miracle" have been speeded up and put into production, after three years of discussion and preliminary work. Miss Davis will have the coveted role of the Nun.

The three Cheyenne Indians who were held as hostages by Custer for the surrender of Mrs. Morgan and Miss White and who were later taken to Fort Hays where two of them were killed by their guards. There is much confusion as to the identity of these Indians. Custer gives their names as Fat Bear, Dull Knife and Big Head and those are the names accompanying the above illustration (a wood cut made from a photograph taken at Fort Dodge, Kan., March 13, 1869) which appears in Mrs. Custer's book "Following the Guidon." Grinnell, quoting different Cheyennes as his authority, names them as Younger Bear, Chief Comes in Sight and Island (or Lean Man) but elsewhere in his book, "The Fighting Cheyennes," says that the two who were killed by their guards at Fort Hays were Slim Face and Curly Hair.

ter, with 11 troops of the Seventh and 10 of the Nineteenth Kansas, set out to find several bands of the Cheyennes who were still on the warpath.

A short time before a young man applied for permission to accompany the expedition. At first Custer refused but when he learned that the boy's name was Brewster and that he was the brother of Mrs. Morgan who was still held captive by the Indians he permitted him to go along. Young Brewster did not know which Indians had carried his sister away but he hoped that Custer's command might find them and that, by being with it, he might aid in her rescue, if she were still alive, or at least, learn what her fate had been.

Discovers Cheyenne Camp.

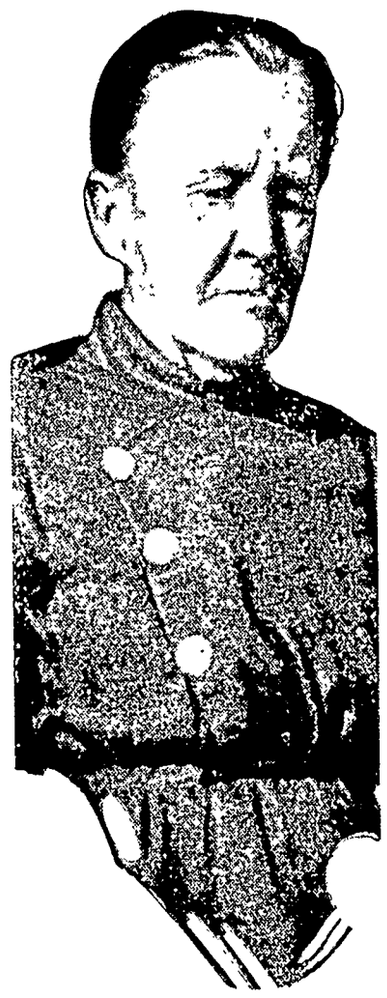
Moving out from Fort Cobb Custer's command struck a fresh trail and followed it to the north fork of the Red river in what is now Wheeler county, Texas. There he discovered a camp of Cheyennes under the leadership of a chief known to the whites as Medicine Arrow but called Rock Forehead by his own people. A little farther down the stream was the camp of Chief Little Robe, a noted "friendly." Sometime during this march Custer had learned that two white women were captives in



Mrs. Sarah Brooks (from a photograph taken in 1934 and reproduced here by courtesy of the Kansas City Star and the Concordia (Kan.) Blade-Empire).

Medicine Arrow's camp and henceforward their rescue became his main objective.

As the commander of the Seventh, accompanied by an orderly, approached the camp, he began making the customary Plains signal of his desire for a conference—by riding around in circles as he advanced. As he drew near, he was met by Medicine Arrow and several other chiefs who invited him to come into the camp for a council. Although Custer was fearful that they had a treacherous intent he agreed to their proposal and entered the camp accompanied only by Colonel Cook of the Seventh. The result was that the soldiers camped near the Indian village and a series of councils ensued.

The testimony as to subsequent events is very contradictory. The version which Custer gives in his book, "My Life on the Plains," is sharply at variance in many details with the Indians' version, as given in George Bird Grinnell's "The Fighting Cheyennes." Custer tells how a large party of Indians entered his camp and strove to distract his attention while the remainder made preparations to take down their lodges and move the village away before the troops realized what they had done. Thereupon, he seized four Indians—"chiefs and warriors of prominence," Custer calls them—to hold as hostages for the surrender of the two white women.

The Indians insinuate that Custer acted treacherously in seizing these men while they were making a friendly visit to his camp and that they were old men of no particular importance. However that may be, the fact remains that when Custer sent one of his four captives to the village bearing a message that he would hang the other three if the captives were not delivered up to him, the Indians, after protesting that the women were not in their camp, finally sent Chief Little Robe to Custer's camp to arrange for the exchange of prisoners.

Rescue of the Captives.

Custer tells a dramatic story of the arrival of the two women in his camp the next morning—how he sent three of his senior officers forward to escort them into camp and how young Brewster, unable to restrain his eagerness to see his long-lost sister, raced forward past the officers and clasped Mrs. Morgan in his arms. "The appearance of the two girls was sufficient to excite our deepest sympathy," writes Custer. "Miss White, the younger of the two, though not beautiful, possessed a most interesting face. Her companion would have been pronounced beautiful by the most critical judge, being of such a type as one might imagine Maud Muller to be. Their joy at their deliverance, however, could not hide the evidences of privation and suffering to which they had been subjected by their cruel captors. They were clothed in dresses made from flour sacks, the brand of the mills being plainly seen on each dress; showing that the Indians who had held them in captivity had obtained their provisions from the government at some agency.

"The entire dress of the two girls was as nearly like the Indian mode as possible; both wore leggings and moccasins; both wore their hair in two long braids, and as if to propitiate us, the Indians, before releasing them, had added to the wardrobe of the two girls various rude ornaments, such as are worn by squaws. About their wrists they wore coils of brass wire; on their fingers had been placed numerous rings and about their necks strings of variously colored beads. Almost the first remark I heard young Brewster make after the arrival of the two girls was 'Sister, do take those hateful things off.'"

The women were placed in an ambulance and the Seventh started on its march to Fort Dodge, taking with it the three Indian captives whom Custer determined to hold until the Cheyennes came in off the warpath. Mrs. Morgan was overjoyed to learn that her husband was recovering from his arrow wounds in the post hospital at Fort Hays. Later they went back to their home in the Solomon valley and lived there for several years. But the memory of her captivity preyed upon her mind which at last gave way and she ended her days in a Kansas state insane asylum.

Miss White also returned to her home and while engaged in teaching school met E. O. Brooks, a veteran of the Civil war. They were married and made their home near the White homestead where she had been taken captive. There she lived for more than 70 years, reared a family of one son and six daughters and tried to forget what she had suffered for seven months as an Indian captive. Death came on May 12, 1939, to end the ugly nightmare of those memories.

Six years after the capture of Mrs Morgan and Miss White by the Cheyennes and their rescue by Gen. George A. Custer occurred a similar incident in which the same tribe of Indians was involved and in which another famous Indian fighter, Gen. Nelson A. Miles, played the role of rescuer. That was the capture and release of the German sisters during the war with the Southern Plains tribes in 1874-75.

On September 10, 1874, a covered wagon, drawn by an ox team, and accompanied by two men on horseback, halted on the banks of a small stream in western Kansas. The party was composed of John German, a native of Blue Ridge, Ga., and a veteran of the Confederate army, his wife, Lydia, their son, Stephen Wise German, and their six daughters—Rebecca Jane, 20; Katherine, 17; Joanna, 14; Sophia, 12; Julia Arminda, 7; and Nancy Adelaide, 5, called "Addie" by her sisters. They were on their way to Colorado where they were going because of German's poor health, and they expected to reach Fort Wallace, not far from the Colorado border, the next day.

The next morning their camp was attacked by a war party of 19 Cheyennes who killed and scalped Mr. and Mrs. German, their son and two of the girls, Rebecca Jane and Joanna. Then they carried the other four daughters away and held them as captives until November 8 when the camp of Chief Gray Beard was attacked by a detachment of General Miles' army, led by Lieut. Frank D. Baldwin.

When the Indians fled, taking Sophia and Katherine with them, they left the two little girls, Julia and Addie, who were found by the soldiers in the deserted camp. "When rescued they were the most emaciated mortals I have ever seen. Their little hands were like birds' claws," writes General Miles in his memoirs.

They were sent to Fort Leavenworth under the care of an army physician and there the women of the garrison nursed them back to health. On returning to Miles' command, the doctor brought with him a photograph of Julia and Addie and when Miles saw this it gave him an idea. On the back of it he wrote this message:

Headquarters Indian Territory Expedition in the field, January 20, 1875.
To the Misses German:
Your little sisters are well, and in the hands of friends. Do not be discouraged. Every effort is being made for your welfare.

NELSON A. MILES,
U. S. Army
Colonel and Brevet Major General Commanding Expedition.

Then he gave the photograph to a Delaware Indian scout and told him to find the Indians who still held Sophia and Katherine and give the picture to them secretly. He was also ordered to tell Chief Stone Calf that no mercy would be shown his band if the girls were not returned alive and unharmed. The Delaware scout set out over the snowy plains and after a remarkable journey of more than 400 miles, found the Cheyenne camp on the Pecos river in New Mexico and managed to deliver his message to the captives who had begun to despair of ever being rescued.

By this time the Cheyennes, who had been kept so constantly on the move by the vigorous campaigning of Miles and Col. Ranald S. Mackenzie, and who were nearly destitute, were quite willing to listen to peace overtures. So Stone Calf took the two girls from their captors, placed them in a lodge next to his and treated them with special consideration on the journey back to the Cheyenne agency in Indian territory. There they were surrendered to Miles.

A short time later the four German sisters were reunited at Fort Leavenworth and on the recommendation of General Miles the sum of $10,000 was deducted from the annuities given to the Cheyennes and $2,500 placed to the credit of each of the girls. Miles became their guardian and served thus until they came of age.

Addie, who became Mrs. Frank Andrews and mother of 11 children, was, at the last accounts, living near Bern, Kan.; Julia, now Mrs. Julia Brooks, was living near Humboldt, Neb., and near her lived her sister, Addie; and Katherine; now Mrs. Katherine Swerdfefer, was living at Atascadero, Calif

HEZEKIAH: A KING WHO REMEMBERED GOD

LESSON TEXT—II Chronicles 30:13-22.
GOLDEN TEXT—Turn us again, O God, and cause thy face to shine; and we shall be saved.—Psalm 80:3.

The way out—that seems to be the chief object of the search of men. The world is in what seems like hopeless confusion with the imminent danger of a devastating explosion which may in the judgment of some destroy civilization. Politics, economics, education, yes, even religion, have tried their hands at solving the problem and we seem to be worse off than ever. Conditions are much as they were when Hezekiah came to the throne after the death of his wicked father Ahab, who had brought Judah into moral, spiritual, and national declension and disgrace.

The young king brought the nation back within a few years to peace and prosperity. How did he do it? He did not do it. God did it, and He did it because Hezekiah remembered Him and led His people in a return to God, in a recognition of His Word, and to restored worship. God therefore prospered them.

It is significant that while our lesson is about King Hezekiah, his person quickly recedes into the background of our thinking and God is given our attention and our praise. Truly great men do not magnify themselves or their own names, but point by their very greatness to the eternal God to whom they give the glory. Let us consider how God worked through Hezekiah.

I. A Cleansed Temple.

Our lesson calls for attention to the context. Read chapter 29 and learn how the priests and Levites first were directed by the king to cleanse the temple which had suffered degradation and disgrace under King Ahab. Sixteen days were devoted to a thorough clean-up.

That's a good place to start. America, how about cleaning up our churches? Some of them need attention to their physical property, cleaning and rehabilitation. Others are beautifully kept up as far as the building is concerned, but the rubbish is in the teaching and in the manner of worship. Let's clean that up too.

II. A Prepared Priesthood.

Hezekiah gathered the scattered priests and Levites, but he did not permit them to serve in the temple until they had been sanctified and prepared for their work. The men who stand in the sanctuary to direct the worship of God must not only be men of God's own choosing, but they must be cleansed by the blood. As the sacrifices were offered in Hezekiah's day, so for us has One been given in holy sacrifice, and unless those who profess to be His ministers have been cleansed by His blood they have no proper place in His service or in the sanctuary.

III. A Purified People.

The people of the nation were not ready for God's blessing. Some of those in the northern kingdom, to whom the royal invitation had graciously been extended to come to the Passover, scorned the invitation (30:10). There was nothing that could be done for them. But others humbled themselves and came (v. 11), and those in Judah came out in a great assembly (vv. 12, 13).

Observe carefully that this was more than a great homecoming or jubilee event. The people were here to worship God and they needed to be prepared by being "healed" of their sins (vv. 18, 20). They too needed the cleansing blood. It is the only way even now, for "without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sin" (Heb. 9:22). Sin is what we must be cleansed from and healed of if God is to bless our land.

IV. A Feast of Joy and Blessing.

The nation and its leaders kept the feast not only for seven days, for they were not satisfied with this, but they kept it for seven more days. Think of many of us who can hardly sit through an hour of service on Sunday morning, and if we also go to Sunday school we are quite worn out. It is just "impossible" for us to get to the Sunday evening service or to the midweek prayer meeting. Evidently we do not have the spirit of the people of Hezekiah's day or the joy that they found in their hearts as they worshiped God. If we did, we would seek His house and give ourselves gladly to His worship. The result would be that we would receive some of the great blessings which came to the people of Judah.

The reading of II Chronicles 31 and 32 will reveal how God responded to the cry of His people and how He blessed and prospered them. He is the same God today and He can and will do wondrous things for those who trust and honor Him.

Commonest Faults

Some of the commonest faults of thought and work are those which come from thinking too poorly of our own lives and of that which must rightly be demanded of us.—Bishop Paget.

To Check Constipation Get at Its Cause!

If constipation has you down so you feel heavy, tired and dopey, it's time you did something about it. And something more than just taking a physic! You should get at the cause of the trouble.

If you eat the super-refined food most people eat, the chances are the difficulty is simple—you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean heavy food. It's a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines.

If this common form of constipation is your trouble, eat Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast every day and drink plenty of water. All-Bran isn't a medicine—it's a crunchy, toasted, nutritious cereal. And it will help you not only to get regular but to keep regular, day after day. Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.

Learn From Fools

Wise men learn more from fools than fools from the wise.—Cato.

NERVOUS?

Do you feel so nervous you want to scream? Are you cross and irritable? Do you scold those dearest to you?

If your nerves are on edge and you feel you need a good general system tonic, try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women.

For over 60 years one woman has told another how to go "smiling thru" with reliable Pinkham's Compound. It helps nature build up more physical resistance and thus helps calm quivering nerves and lessen discomforts from annoying symptoms which often accompany female functional disorders.

SOLDIERS PREEFRENCE

Generally speaking war service has been an important influence in the employment and retention of public employees without regard for political affiliation In the service of the state of Iowa war veterans whose services have been satisfactory rather generally remain on their jobs regardless of changes in administrations Abuses occur but rarely and veterans themselves are quick to condemn obvious attempts to invoke soldiers preference statutes in cases where such claims are unfair and unjust Veterans' organizations are usually jealous of the privileges they have earned under preference laws and counsel constantly against abuses which might create resistance to veterans' applications for employment

HOMESTEADS SAFE

Another measure of the utmost importance to both town and country home owners is the homestead exemption law It was hinted that this fund was also in jeopardy but Republicans were ready to let this product of their own manufacture fail of application in the slightest The homestead exemption law was written and passed by Republican legislatures ever determined Democratic resistance and in spite of a veto of Clyde L. Herring, then governor Funds necessary for full payment of homestead exemption credit were provided by the legislature last winter without additional taxes This week C Fred Porter state comptroller announced that adequate funds would be available for full payment of homestead tax credit on last half taxes without dipping into the general fund Plugging of serious leaks and the elimination of unnecessary overhead expense is the method used by the Wilson administration rather than the continual tapping of new tax sources

IOWA'S THANKS

Comment on President Roosevelt's suggestion for changing the date of Thanksgiving Day occupied much newspaper space in Iowa since the announcement was first made public Editors for the most part consider the controversy "silly business" and are generally of the opinion that Iowa, being one of the few areas of the world that might in emergency be entirely self supporting for an indefinite period can return thanks to the Almighty almost any date of the year Certain critics regret the president cloaked a purely commercial gesture in "pious words" while others believe it "shows genuine concern for the problems of business" Most, however, are inclined to joke and add their own suggestions of more space between Thanksgiving Day. Christmas and New Year's Day as an opportunity for recovery of gorged stomachs and a spread of sales volume for turkey raisers There has been no definite confirmation of the report that the spelling of certain months will be changed to Mayr, Junes, Jurly and Aurgust in order to capture the oyster consumers' vote.

CAN SOW ALFALFA AND SWEET CLOVER IN EARLY SEPTEMBER

It's not safe to seed alfalfa or sweet clover much after Sept 1 from central Iowa north in the state, warns H. D. Hughes, professor of farm crops at Iowa State College.

In extreme southern Iowa many seedings have been successful after the middle of September, Mr Hughes has observed The danger of failure increases with every day of delay after Sept. 1. however

When making seedings in late summer or early fall, it is highly important to have the seedbed firm for this will hasten germination and lessen the danger from heaving the following spring It is desirable to roll the ground if possible

The usual practice in making fall seedings is to use no nurse crop. About 15 pounds of alfalfa seed to the acre is generally sufficient.

1939 IOWA CORN CROP ESTIMATE

Iowa corn crop prospects are estimated at 465,072,000 bushels as based upon conditions reported on August 1 to the Iowa and Federal Crop and Livestock Reporting Service. This expected production for 1939 is about one per cent smaller than the 1938 crop of 468,923,000 bushels, but is 17.0 per cent larger than the average production for the 10-ear period 1928-1937.

1939 PIG CROP TRENDS

The quality of the 1939 spring pig crop indicates that swine breeders are pointing toward an animal that will finish at 180 to 220 pounds, with more ham, greater width over the loin, length of body and quality, according to R L. Pemberton, Field Secretary for the Iowa Swine Producers' Association

Mr Pemberton has recently spent considerable time visiting in the various packing plants studying hog types and observes that this is the type of spring pigs now coming to market According to Pemberton, packing house buyers report this type of hog to predominate in deliveries from the producer.

Pemberton observes that another point bearing out the fact that breeders are striving to produce this type of hog is shown by the swine entries at early fairs. In both market and pure bred classes, entries show a definite trend toward this meat type animal which is a step in helping to solve the lard situation

Dedication.

A marker has been erected at Froehlich, Iowa, dedicating the site where John Froehlich built the first gasoline tractor that propelled itself "backward as well as forward," in 1892. Later Mr. Froelich helped organize the Waterloo Traction company which later became the John Deere Tractor Co.

Electrotype Coins

Instead of being cast in one piece, as are ordinary coins the front and back of electrotype coins are made separately and are then stuck together, and may be easily recognized by the mark on the edge showing where the two sides have been joined together They are also of wrong weight The electrotypes as a rule, are not made to deceive the uninitiate, but are made as copies of very rare coins, where the original of the rare coin can not be purchased Electrotypes may generally be split in two with a strong knife

Harris Porter and sons of Reinbeck are builing a miniature tractor, about seven feet in length The scrap heap is furnishing the material. One More.

Although the swimming season is about over, drowning claimed one victim at Sac City recently.

Richard Dale Claude, 11, fell from a raft into a swimming pool which had been officially closed—and sank to the bottom. The body was recovered in about 30 minutes but all efforts at resusciation failed. Fortunately, not all drowning stories have a tragic ending. Marie Godden, 14, of Burt, was a near-victim at a swimming pool near Fairmont but was saved by a lifeguard who revived her in a few minutes.

Five and a half feet long, and with teeth that would do credit to a jungle leopard, the fish might easily have torn off a hand.

Tractor Death.

The ordinary farm tractor has proved to be one of Death's lethal weapons this season. Another victim was claimed recently when Speros Athinasiou. of near Rock Falls, was hurt by a tractor which upset as he was cutting weeds, pinioning his left shoulder The tractor went up in flames but Athinasiou managed to crawl away. However, he died a few hours later in a Mson City hospital.

One of his horses got too near the edge of the well, lunged around and finally fell down the shaft. ### NOT EVEN TRYING

At a county fair in the Old Country five pounds was offered to the person who could guess the weight of a certain cow. Many people tried their skill, and various weights were suggested. Finally Old Garge, not-too-bright farm hand, came forward. To their amazement, he named the exact weight of the cow offhand.

"How did you do it?" asked the judge, after awarding the prize.

"'Twarn't nothin'," replied the man. "I'd 'a' done better'n that if I'd been tryin'."

...ck or Print Jersey Frock Is Ideal for Immediate Wear

...ry popular this season is polka ...overprinted on checks. Can you ...eive of a more intriguing dot- ...eck print than a black smooth ...ous rayon jersey patterned in ... and white check, splashed with ... dubonnet red polka dots as pictured to the left in the illustration? Just such eye-appealing effects can be had in a long list of color combinations. The dress buttons from neckline to hem. A crushed black patent waistbinder adds the touch supreme from the sartorial standpoint.

Something new in a fall afternoon frock is pictured to the right. The skirt is a 1939 fashion favorite. It is of soot-black silk jersey fashioned according to the latest, which calls for lots and lots of flare about the hemline with snug-fitted hips. In sleek jersey such as this designers have discovered a fabric of matchless draping qualities that performs miracles in the way of slenderizing the figure. Striped white jersey is used for the top given a diagonal treatment.

The emphasis placed on the all-black frock as a fashion "first," for fall leave no alternative to the woman who would be well dressed. A classic black this season becomes an essential. Why not a black silk or rayon jersey? The gown of draped or shirred black silk jersey will prove "a thing of beauty and a joy forever" all through the fall months and on into the winter to wear under your fur coat.

With it you wear, if you are fashion-wise, massive gold jewelry preferably one of the gorgeous gold bib necklaces some of which are resplendent with colored stone settings. These necklaces are so wide they remind of deep yokes. And keep in mind there must always be added a matching gold bracelet.

Unrelieved Black Fashion's Latest

Black unrelieved, save for a dash of bizarre jewelry, is being carried out by those who go in for extremes in striking ways. For instance, with a dull black crepe dress a noted Paris couturier partners a lustrous black satin blouse, adding a tall hat with drape-manipulated towering crown of matching satin. The handbag is also of satin. The effect is stunning.

Reversing the order of things with a lusterful silk jersey frock, smart accessories worn include hat, bag, shoes and gloves of soot black antelope, gorgeous gold jewelry highlighting the ensemble.

Many of the new sheer black woolens are being trimmed with black velvet for collar and other details. Of course, the logical hat to wear must also be of black velvet.

Black sequins glitter on evening gowns of dull blacks in a blaze of glory. French designers are using quantities of black passementrie and braiding on black fabric giving an air of elegance that bespeaks a new dignity in fashions for the coming months.

Massive Jewelry Is Current Style

Jewelry is playing a tremendous part in current fashion. The trend is toward massive gold and jeweled necklaces and bracelets, which, worn with the new black gowns that make simplicity their theme, is startlingly effective.

Size is all-important in necklaces. The deep collar types are in the lead. In other items of jewelry the idea of size also is stressed. Brooches are very large as also are earrings and clips.

Patient Should Tell Physician All Symptoms

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON

THERE was a time when our humorists liked to say, "The patient has had his tonsils and all his teeth removed but he still has his rheumatism." We do not hear this joke any more because practically every family has seen the very satisfactory results obtained by removal of teeth and tonsils in preventing further attacks of rheumatism although joints damaged by chronic rheumatism can hardly be expected to be free entirely of pain and stiffness.

TODAY'S HEALTH COLUMN

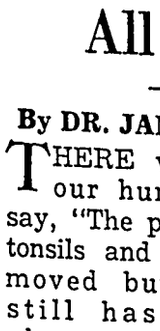
Another joke on the medical profession was based on the "foolish" questions the physician asked the patient—his parents' and grandparents' age when they died and any illnesses from which they suffered; did he wake up in the night and not go to sleep again readily; how far could he walk without getting out of breath, and other questions that did not seem to be related to the pain or other symptoms of which he complained. This questioning or getting the "history" of the patient before making the examination is not considered a joke any more because only the patient can accurately describe his pain or other symptoms. Thus a patient, much worried about his heart as it seemed to be beating too rapidly, visited a heart specialist. He expected the physician immediately to use the stethoscope, the sphygmomanometer (blood pressure machine), the electrocardiograph, which records strength and regularity of the heart, and the fluroscope, which enables the physician to actually see the heart.



Dr. Barton

Exercise Test Made.

Instead, the physician had him walk across the room and asked him how far he could walk at this rate without getting out of breath. When he told the distance that he could walk without getting out of breath easily, the heart specialist told him he had no heart disease, and to worry no further about it.

An examination with stethoscope, blood pressure machine, electrocardiograph and fluroscope was made, however, and the heart was pronounced normal.

Thus the simple question, "How far can you walk without getting out of breath?" gave the heart specialist the information that it was not the heart that was causing the symptoms.

Mucous Colitis Held Incurable

When a research physician who has studied the intestinal tract—stomach, small and large intestine—for many years tells us that no case of colitis (inflammation of the large intestine) is ever cured, it may sound discouraging to the thousands of individuals who suffer with this ailment, the outstanding symptoms of which are soreness across abdomen, pains, colic, jelly-like substance on wastes from bowel.

Dr. Walter Alvarez, Mayo clinic, professor of medicine, University of Minnesota graduate school of medicine, at a meeting of the American College of Physicians said:

"Do not spend much time and attention on the colon (large intestine) in cases of mucous colitis, which might better be called sensitive colon. Find out what kind of person the patient is (most of them are women); how they complain; what it is—physical, emotional or spiritual—that upsets them and then try to remedy these conditions if possible. Listen to the patient. The trouble may be food allergy—sensitiveness to certain foods, a fit of anger, a "cold" or almost any type of physical, emotional or mental stress and strain.

Cases Begin in Childhood.

"Many of these cases begin in childhood due to bad early training and 'no case of colitis is ever cured.' The patient simply has to 'live with his disorder.'

"These patients must be listened to with attention and treated with sympathy, understanding and tact.

"The thought then is that mucous colitis is caused by the nervousness or the emotions, and it is the nervousness and the upsetments that must be treated, not the colon itself. And just as the pernicious anemia patient must always use liver or liver extract and the diabetic patient use insulin or protamine insulin, so must the mucous colitis patient always remain or try to remain calm in spirit if he wishes to keep free of the symptoms of mucous colitis.

"In the meantime, avoiding rough foods, and using plain water containing a teaspoonful of salt enemas, or plain water enemas, will help to prevent symptoms.

Sew a Bag to Keep Your Ball of Twine In

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

WHEN you want to wrap a package do you always know where to find twine? A ball of it in a bag like this one hung over the kitchen table will be ready for use.

Scraps from your piece bag may be used in this way. The bag is just big enough to cover the ball loosely and is made of a straight piece of goods with the ends seamed together with a French seam. The top and bottom are bound with prepared bias binding. A single cord is run through the binding at the bottom. It is drawn up to leave a small opening and the ends are tied and sewn securely. Two cords are run through the top with a loop of each cord left on the outside so that the bag may be drawn up by pulling them. The ball of twine is placed inside with the end running through the bottom opening.

Did you see the good news in the paper last week? About the new Sewing Book No. 3, which is now ready for mailing. It contains 32 useful ideas for home decorating; and things to use as gifts, and to sell at bazaars. You will be delighted with it. The price of this new book is only 10 cents postpaid. ## Enormous Shovel

At Wilmington, Ill., there is in use an electric coal shovel which is equipped with a 36-cubic-yard dipper. Some idea of its size may be gained from the facts that one dipper load would fill the average room, having dimensions of 9 by 12 by 9 feet; two dippers full will fill the standard railroad coal car. The interior of the dipper is larger than the average one-automobile garage, easily holding a large limousine.

Congressman Lemke introduced the Non-partisan Cost of Production Farm Bill H. J. R. 2371 in the last session of Congress.

15 other House members helped Mr Lemke to sponsor the bill.

The bill covers about 50 principal agriculaural products grown in the United States that were valued at more than $10,000,000 each in 1937

The Hog Process Tax Refund Bill H. J. R. 138 was also introduced by Mr. Lemke.

The bill was unanimously passed by the Senate, August 1, 1939

Several cars from this community plan to drive to East Park at New Hampton to hear Mr. Lemke and talk to him personally.

PICTURE CHANGE AT AVERY WILL BRING "WIZARD OF OZ"

On the Avery Theatre's September programs you will find "Goodbye Mr. Chips" advertised for September 17-18-19. Unable to deliver "Goodbye Mr. Chips" by Metro Goldwyn on the above dates, they are substituting the biggest picture of the year, "The Wizard of Oz."

"The Wizard of Oz" was a great book, a stage play that ran for years, and now brought to the screen in a lavish production. The cast boasts of some of the screen's biggest personalities, Judy Garland, Frank Morgan, Ray Bolger, Jack Haley and Bert Lahr, who head a cast of 2,000. Two years in the making. So please remember "The Wizard of Oz" will be shown on September 17-18-19 instead of "Goodbye Mr. Chips."

Bring the family, for it is a picture for the entire family. No advance in prices.

PLAN TO TRAIN 11,000 AIRCRAFT PILOTS IN COLLEGES IN U. S. A.

WASHINGTON—President Roosevelt met with acting Chairman Robert H. Hinckley of the Civil Aeronautics authority and former CAA chairman, Edward J. Noble, Thursday and perfected plans for training 11,000 college students to provide a resevoir of expert pilots in case of war emergency.

Hinckley said that the CAA hopes to designate within the next week colleges and junior colleges where the training courses will be conducted. He said an announcement of state quotas could be expected shortly.

The CAA head emphasized, however, that his agency was deliberately avoiding any efforts to rush the program because of the danger to human life entailed in too hasty training of youthful pilots.

He cited as an example at point the experience of Germany where pressure aerial training programs were put into effect and fatality averages ran high among the youthful students.

NATION'S WEALTH UP 7½ BILLION

EUROPE
War or Peace?

War or long negotiations, either may be the outcome of the diplomatic exchanges now proceeding between London and Berlin. Much depends upon the nature of Hitler's reply to the latest message from the British cabinet. Tension is high in all European capitals, war threats still hold the stage and before these lines reach the reader, the clash of arms may be resounding in Europe. But hope for a peaceful settlement over Poland has not been abandoned.

The British and French, apparently, are willing to concede something to Germany, but by no means all that Hitler demands. The showdown may come quickly.

It is apparent that each side is trying to bully the other with its bellicose intentions in order to force some sort of a deal to avert war. The latest British note, it was said, shows a willingness to facilitate a negotiated settlement between Germany and Poland. It also contained a flat warning that any German threat to the independence of Poland would find Britain and France fighting on the side of the Poles.

It is evident that at last the patience of France and Britain has reached the limit of endurance over Hitler's continual grabbing of territory. The brutality, bad faith and menacing methods of the Nazi government have kept Europe in a state of upheaval for years, and this must stop now, and definite guarantees must be given that will ensure the peace of Europe.

IGNACE MOSCICKI

Diplomantic negotiations have been proceeding in half a dozen European capitals in an effort to avert another world holocaust. Principal interest centered in London where the British cabinet wrangled for hours over Hitler's latest proposals for a peaceful settlement of the German-Polish territorial dispute. These proposals were submitted to Sir Nevile Henderson, the British ambassador to Berlin, in an interview requested by Hitler. Henderson flew to London and laid them before the British government. The ambassador was to fly back to Berlin with the British cabinet's reply.

While the fuehrer's proposals were not at that time made public, it was the belief in well-informed quarters that they were not likely in their present form to offer any hope of providing a solution. Some sources close to the government were downright pessimistic.

Chamberlain's government, armed with dictatorial powers voted by parliament, continued to oil up the British war machine. The first significant act was to sign a treaty giving formal effect to British pledges of aid to Poland. The treaty will run for five years.

Another important war move was to prohibit dealing in a number of foreign securities. This action was interpreted as conscription of wealth. It is estimated that $15,000,000,000 worth of securities will be affected by the order.

Danzig, the Polish corridor and various sections of Poland along the border, these Germany must have, is Hitler's defiant demand, otherwise there will be war. These were the declarations of Hitler in a letter to Premier Daladier of France. This revealed for the first time officially Hitler's full demands on Poland.

"For a nation with honor it is impossible to relinquish a population of 2,000,000 of its compatriots at its border," the letter said.

In the meantime mobilization of German military forces was reaching its climax. New war measures were taken. Food and clothing ration cards were distributed. Purchase of gasoline was restricted.

In Washington it was learned that President Roosevelt is prepared to go the limit of law and perhaps farther to swing the power and resources of the United States to the side of Great Britain and France in the event of war. If he is unable to procure repeal of the arms provision of the neutrality act, he still will be enabled by certain loopholes in the legislation to temper the application of the embargo to favored belligerents. The loopholes are afforded by the rules and regulations on the export of war supplies that the law leaves to the discretion of the executive.

France, with the greatest force under arms since 1919, awaited calmly and vigilantly the outcome of diplomatic negotiations then under way. Notices were pasted up throughout the country ordering reservists to report to their mobilization centers at once. Approximately 2,300,000 men are now under arms. While not a general call to arms this partial mobilization is sufficient to provide France with an army on a wartime footing capable of taking the offensive as well as holding up a surprise attack until the whole manpower of the country could be mobilized, was the general belief in Paris.

In Warsaw a pall of depression settled on the Polish capital. In authoritative circles it was believed mediation by the United States, or some other equally distinguished and disinterested third power, was the only remaining chance to avoid European war. This conviction was crystalized as Warsaw heard from Paris that Hitler had refused direct negotiations with Poland for a peaceful solution of Danzig's status.

In Rome Premier Mussolini was represented as willing, perhaps eager, for negotiations that would avert war. But, along with this, Fascists emphasized, must be considered Italian claims upon France for a greater share in African colonial possessions. Il Duce, nevertheless, pushed military preparations. Hope for peace from an interchange of messages between Mussolini and Hitler was tempered by the frank Italian statement that Hitler was seeking to throw on other powers responsibility for any war that may result.

INDUSTRY: ### Steps Ahead

While the sensitive financial markets had a slight attack of "jitters" as a result of European war threats, industry quickened its pace throughout the week.

Steel production was at the highest level in nearly two years, output of electricity set an all-time record, and the movement of railroad freight reached a new 1939 peak. Cotton textile mills were the busiest they have been this year. Automobile production increased as factories began to make more headway on the 1940 models.

Narrow gains were shown in retail trade over the preceding week.

WAR PROPAGANDA:
Deluges America

The greatest flood of war propaganda since the period immediately preceding American entry into the World war is deluging the United States, according to a report made public by the Dies committee on un-American acitivities.

The war propaganda, according to the report, is traced to two major groupings of European nations—the London-Paris entente and the Berlin-Rome axis. Communist Russia is placed in a separate category. The most effective war propaganda in this country emanates from Great Britain, the report said.

"Already wide sections of American public opinion have been definitely molded to the acceptance of many of the objectives of the current war propaganda emanating from abroad," the report said. "Polls of American public opinion would seem to indicate that certain powers (the London-Paris entente) have won the first major battle of the next war by enlisting the preponderant sentiment of this country on their side."

The report was compiled by Dr. J. B. Matthews, director on research on foreign war propaganda for the committee.

Of all the nations in the world the United States is the most coveted prize to be bagged by foreign war propagandists, says the report, as resources of the United States might well be the decisive factor in any war.

"When all of the war slogans have been stripped away from the underlying interests which they conceal, it is plain on the one hand that certain nations have empires and want to keep them, and other nations do not have empires (not imposing ones, at least) but want to acquire them," said the report. "Moscow's special interest—clearly established by its own propaganda over many years—is that these opposing combinations shall destroy each other, and that proletarian revolution and dictatorship shall be extended on the ruins of that destruction."

"Democracy versus dictatorship" is chief among the war slogans employed in this country to conceal the imperialistic aims of certain nations, according to the report.

JAPAN:
Drops German Ties

As a result of the Russian-German nonagression pact, a drastic change in foreign policy has been decided upon by the Japanese cabinet. Japan casts itself free from the ties which bound it to the German-Italian lineup and embarks on a course of "splendid isolation." The decision to start all over again met with the approval of the entire cabinet.

It was predicted that later the government will realign its internal structure, but no inkling was given as to probable developments.

PREMIER HIRANUMA

The government, it was reported, had abandoned consideration of measures to strengthen the anti-comitern pact, which allied Japan with Rome, Berlin and Hungary. Japanese newspapers were virtually agreed that the anti-comitern pact is dead as a result of the German-Russian pact.

The Japanese army was prompt in giving their unqualified approval to the cabinet's action in severing ties with Germany.

Finding it impossible to make the adjustments made necessary by the German-Russian pact, the Japanese cabinet resigned and a new cabinet is being formed

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—On his record, it would appear that Gen. Edward Smigly-Rydz, Poland's strong man, might be more inclined to fight Germany without Russia's aid than with it. He made his career fighting the Bolsheviks, and news dispatches of the last few weeks have hinted that he has been considerably embarrassed at being drawn into the new apparently broken fellowship with Russia. It has been clear that being saved by Russia was the least and last of his ideas.

Polish Leader Started Career Fighting Soviet

He is beyond doubt the ablest of Poland's military leaders, and, once the bell rings, there is no question that he can and will fight, as he proved in the campaigns to free Poland and in his forays against early-day Bolshevik Russia.

He never has quite come through as a dictator. In 1936 there was one of those "ideological" build-ups in which he was to emerge as the head of reconstructed Poland. Handsome and imposing, of dominant bearing, he looked the part, but he couldn't seem to manage the big talk necessary for the job. The best they could get out of him was something to the general effect that nobody would ever be allowed to take a single button from Poland's robe.

On August 6 of this year, when it appeared that Germany might just take the robe and leave the button, he was expected to make a sizzling speech at Cracow. His audience was howling for a knockout punch, but the speech was mostly shadowboxing, with nothing specific about what he proposed to do about Danzig.

Fifty-four years old, with an engaging personality, he has been a popular dinner guest and holds the honorary presidency of the Polish academy of letters. The old Marshal Joseph Pilsudski, nearing the end of his life, anointed the general as his successor. He has been supremely efficient in his army job, but, as a strong man, has been somewhat overshadowed by the showier, more facile and adroit Josef Beck, the foreign minister. But fighting is his main business and knowing observers figure that, talking little, he is more apt to fight.

A MICHIGAN friend of this writer reports that Gov. Luren D. Dickinson's war on sin may turn out to be good political medicine out there.

War on Sin May Be Very Cute Politics

While big-town political leaders are said to be somewhat embarrassed by the aged governor's alarmed discovery of wickedness in high places, the word is that his forces have been intrenched and widened since he let loose about the drinking and dancing orgies of the Albany conference of governors. His Bible class at Eaton, Mich., is crowded to the doors and he is besieged with requests for lectures and participation in revival campaigns. Currently he tells a gathering of Chicago and Detroit "pupils" that this Albany conference was pretty much like Belshazzar's feast and that our Babylonian wastrels will drag us down if we don't mend our ways.

For 25 years, Mr. Dickinson has held in fee simple the anti-sin vote of Michigan. It has held steadily around 200,000 votes, undivided in its allegiance in his repeated forays against evil, chief of which has been his still continuing prohibition battle. He is a spare, bald evangel of righteousness, his friendly eyes glinting behind his octagonal rimmed glasses when he is aroused, his meager frame shaken with pietistic fervor. He employs much of the lexicon of the late Dr. Parkhurst of New York, in assailing sin, and some of his philippics seem to voice again the pious horror of the author of "New York by Gaslight," written 60 years ago.

He is a native of New York, born near Lockport in Niagara county. His parents removed to Eaton, Mich., when he was a small boy. There he still lives, happily engaged with his Methodist church Bible class, and, more recently, with the state of Michigan and, unhappily for his peace of mind, in a bout with evil which he never knew existed before.

Shays's rebellion of 1786 jolted the big-town politicians with a realization of what a mixture of agrarian discontent and old-time religion may amount to. In Governor Dickinson's compact voting phalanx, things are something like that. His allied conservative Republican organization appreciates all this.

WITH practically everybody liking "The Wizard of Oz" very much indeed (and those who didn't like it getting almost violent on the subject, saying that it couldn't even be compared with "Snow White"), the picture got off to a flying start.

Judy Garland and Mickey Rooney, who play the leading roles, made personal appearances with it when it opened in New York. They arrived at the theater at 8:45 in the morning, and remained there until almost midnight. Meanwhile young people of the same ages as the stars lined up outside the theater, waiting to get in—and because of the enthusiasm of these young fans, Judy and Mickey had a body guard when they did get out for a breath of fresh air and a look at the city.

They gave five shows daily except on Saturdays and Sundays, when ex-

In "In Name Only" Carole Lombard shows that she could give Bette Davis some rather stern competition as a dramatic actress if she put her mind on it. The girl who has been playing ga-ga comedy roles with such zest ever since the public acclaimed her as a comedienne in "My Man Godfrey" has turned in a bit of acting that makes her a promising candidate for one of those Academy statuettes, next time they're awarded.

Now that Nelson Eddy is back on that coffee program on Sunday evenings his program-makers are busy once again. He selects his songs chiefly by the number of requests from listeners. His secretary tabulates the requests every two weeks and delivers the final count to him. If possible, he sings the songs for which there are the greatest number of requests. The only difficulty is that people keep requesting the same old favorites over and over.

Shelf Edging Dresses Up Kitchen Windows

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

SOME of us can remember seeing our mothers cut scallops in shelf papers. Dextrously folded and snipped the edges to points or curves, sometimes leaving a cut out diamond in the center of each scallop. For me there is more satisfaction in the creation of their own hands, and in using fancy lace edge paper by the roll. Today, we find the same satisfaction when we choose oilcloth shelf edgings—thinking in terms of color has a fascination even beyond scallops with diamonds in the center.

The suggestion sketched above for using shelf edging to dress kitchen windows was sent in by a reader. The busy homemaker will appreciate the fact that these curtains are perfectly straight, plain and easy to remove for laundering. When windows and shelves match the effect is especially good. Banded towels may be of the same color, and tin containers for bread, sugar and spices may be painted in bright enamel, to match.

The new Sewing Book No. 1 by Mrs. Spears is packed full of useful, money saving ideas, that almost any homemaker may put to practical use. Every idea is clearly illustrated with large sketches. You will be fascinated with the variety of interesting things to make for the home and for gifts. The price is only 10 cents postpaid. Send coin and your name and address to Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago.

Welcome Nugget

The largest gold nugget ever found was the Welcome Nugget, discovered at Bakery Hill, Ballarat, Australia, on June 11, 1858. In the early days of placer mining in California and Australia nuggets of considerable size were found with much greater frequency than they are today, but the Welcome was the greatest of them all. It weighed 2,217 oz. 16 dwt. (troy), and was sold for £10,000. No wonder it was called "Welcome"!—Montreal Herald.

The Virginia Military Institute Looks Back Over Its 100 Years of Stirring History as "West Point of the South"

A view of the parade ground of Virginia Military Institute, the "West Point of the South," with its 700 cadets going their final review before the summer quarter begins. In the background are the barracks where they live.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

ITS official name is the Virginia Military institute but down in Dixie everyone knows what you're talking about when you refer to the V. M. I. For this school, which is celebrating its centennial this year, is the "West Point of the South" and back of it there is a tradition as full of glory as the honored legends which cluster around the school on the Hudson and one in which all Americans, North as well as South, can take pride.

Although it is officially only 100 years old this year, its history really goes back to 1838 when the general assembly of the state of Virginia provided for two more arsenals for the preservation of state arms in serviceable condition. The location of these two arsenals was not decided, however, until the end of the War of 1812 made them a necessity. In 1816 it was decided to place one of them in the city of Lexington and a reservation of about seven acres overlooking the North branch of the James river was set aside for this purpose.

Here about 30,000 stands of arms and other munitions were stored and it was not long before the citizens of Lexington began discussing the idea of a military school at the arsenal.

Roosevelt to Speak.

So the assembly passed legislation establishing the Virginia Military institute there. The first corps of cadets was mustered into service on November 11, 1839, and it is on November 11 of this year that the climax of the centennial celebration will come with President Roosevelt going to Lexington to deliver the principal address.

There were only 23 young cadets at first, then 31, and gradually the enrollment increased. Although only 58 men had been graduated from V M. I. when the Mexican war broke out, 25 of these went into service at once and distinguished themselves in that war.

On August 13, 1851, there came to Lexington a man whose name was destined to become a part of V. M I. tradition. He was Brevet-Major Thomas J. Jackson of the First Regiment of United States artillery who had made a brilliant record in the Mexican war. He had been appointed "professor of natural philosophy and artillery tactics," obtained a furlough for nine months to accept this position and finally in February, 1852, resigned from the army to remain at V. M. I.

At the outbreak of the War Between the States, there were 1,902 living former cadets at V. M. I. and although 94 per cent of these served in the Confederate army, it is recorded that 15 of them put on the Union blue. When Virginia seceded from the Union in April, 1861, the corps of cadets marched to Richmond to enroll in the Confederate service and they marched there under the leadership of their "professor of natural philosophy and artillery tactics." Three months later this professor was to win immortality as "Stonewall" Jackson at the Battle of Bull Run.

The cadets were used to instruct and drill volunteers but many of them rapidly advanced in rank in the various branches of the Confederate service. It soon became apparent that the South would have need for a training school to supply skilled and trained officers for the Gray army and V. M. I. was reopened at the beginning of 1862.

Heroic Schoolboys.

Two years later the cadets were called upon for another service and as the result of it V. M. I. is the only school in the world entitled to wear an active service pennant on its flag. It won that right in a battle which was fought just 75 years ago last May—the Battle of New Market, where the repeated charges of these bearded lads was one of the most heroic incidents in American military annals.

It came about in May, 1864, when Lee had just commenced his death grapple with Grant which was to end within a year at Appomattox. All of his available forces had been engaged in the Peninsula campaign and concentrated for the defense of the Confederate capital. Valuable supplies for this great army were being furnished by the rich Valley of Virginia, "the Granary of the Confederacy."

Early in May, the Federal commander, General Sigel, with about 12,000 troops proceeded southward down the Valley Pike to cut off this source of supply. General Lee detailed Gen. John C. Breckenridge with less than 3,000 men to stop this advance and to protect the lines of communication from Staunton to Richmond.

On May 10, 1864, the superintendent of V. M. I., General Smith, received an order from General Breckenridge to send to him at Staunton the cadet corps and a section of artillery. At midnight the long roll was sounded, the corps assembled in front of barracks and an order was read, directing the corps to take up the line of march to Staunton.

The next morning a battalion of four companies of infantry and a section of three-inch guns left Lexington for Staunton, arriving in Staunton the evening of the twelfth. The corps left Staunton at daylight on the thirteenth, marching 18 miles, moving at daylight on the fourteenth for another 16 miles. At midnight on the fourteenth, the corps received orders to march immediately without beat of drum and as noiselessly as possible and at 1:30 a. m., on the fifteenth took position in the general column in rear of Echols brigade.

After proceeding up the Valley pike a distance of some six miles, a halt was called, the troops remaining on the side of the road two or three hours The Federal troops failing to advance as had been expected, General Breckenridge proceeded to attack the enemy at 12:30 p. m. in the general vicinity of New Market.

General Breckenridge formed his infantry in two lines. Wharton's brigade of infantry constituted the first line, Echols brigade, including the battalion of cadets, the second. The cadets were next to the last battalion in the second line of the left flank, the second line following at an interval of 250 paces in rear of the first. The battle lasted from 12:30 until 6:30 p. m , by which time the Confederate forces of less than 3,000 men had completely routed the 12,000 opposing them, the Federals retreating across the river.

Three Cadet Charges.

The fighting lasted only six hours, but it was hot and furious and the Confederates carried everything before them by impetuous charges, the cadet corps being called upon to make three separate advances all under most withering fire. Out of 225 men engaged, the corps lost 56 killed and wounded. It is a well-known fact that a casualty of 10 per cent will strain the morale of seasoned troops and yet on this occasion, the cadet corps suffered a casualty of nearly 25 per cent without wavering.

As a battle, New Market was of minor significance and had no material bearing on the final outcome of the struggle in Virginia. For soon afterwards the raid of the Union General Hunter swept through the valley, burned the institute buildings and was not checked until he was met by General Early at Lynchburg. But the achievements of these school boys still in their teens who had never before smelled the smoke of battle or seen the carnage of warfare is not only a bright page in V. M. I. history but symbolical of what we like to believe is all that is best in American courage and American devotion to an ideal.

Charge of the Virginia Military Institute cadets at New Market, Va., during the War Between the States, as depicted by mural painting in the chapel of the institute. It was painted by Sir Moses Ezekiel, who as a youth was a member of the corps that participated in the battle.

Inextricably woven with the story of V. M. I. is the story of one of the greatest military geniuses that America ever produced—"Stonewall" Jackson. An interesting view of this great soldier, while he was "professor of natural philosophy and artillery tactics" at that institution, is given in these reminiscences of a former student at Washington college (later Washington and Lee university) which appeared many years ago in the Wheeling (W. Va.) Register. He writes:

"My first recollection of Stonewall Jackson is when I was a college boy at Lexington, Va., in the fall of 1860. I am not able to say whether it was the peculiar carriage of the stiff, military looking institute professor who daily passed the college grounds, that was of chief interest to the students of Washington college or whether the stories told of daring and reckless courage in his early military life, invested him with a halo of romance and made him an object of hero worship in their youthful minds.

" 'Old Jack,' as he was familiarly called by the cadets and students, was so plain in manner and attire, there was so little effort at show, his feet were so large and his arms and hands fastened to his body in such an awkward shape, that the cadets didn't take much pride in him as a professor. They feared him in the lecture room, they paid the strictest deference to him on parade, but in showing a stranger the sights about the institute, a cadet was never known to point out 'Old Jack' as one of the ornaments of the institution. He was more popular with the college students . . .

"The next spring the fires of war threw their lurid glare over the entire land. Then it was Jackson took a final farewell of Lexington, never to return until he was brought back to be buried, according to his dying request, 'in the Valley of Virginia.'

"The cadets were ordered to the field. Major Jackson was selected to command them. After the passage of the ordinance of secession on the seventeenth of April, 1861, the war spirit was at fever heat in Virginia. The steady-going old town of Lexington had suddenly been metamorphosed into a bustling military camp. Volunteer companies were being organized, and every preparation being made for a horrible war. But no event of that memorable period has left a more vivid impression upon my mind than the departure of the cadet battalion from the military institute.

"It was a bright Sabbath morning early in May, and a vast concourse of people had gathered on Institute hill to see the youthful soldiers start for the war. The baggage and camp equipage had been put into the wagons, the horses hitched in, the drivers mounted, with whip in hand, waiting for the command to pull out. The cadets were in line, their cheeks aglow, and their eyes sparkling with the expectation of military glory awaiting them. Poor boys! Little did they know as they stood there, in their bright uniforms and gilt guns shining in the morning sunlight, how few of them would be left to answer at the last roll call of the Army of Northern Virginia.

"As they stood thus, Major Jackson, mounted on an ordinary-looking horse, rode up His face was as calm and unmoved as ever, the thin lips tightly compressed, and looking just as he looked at Kernstown and Manassas. Riding up to the side of an elderly looking gentleman in clerical cloth, standing in front of the main entrance to the institute, Major Jackson wheeled his horse, and facing his battalion as he raised his cap, said 'Let us pray.'

"The venerable Dr. White, pastor of the Presbyterian church, then stepped forward, and baring his gray locks to the sun, poured forth a feeling prayer. It was a memorable scene. Just as the clergyman pronounced the 'Amen,' Jackson wheeled his horse, and in a short, crisp manner, gave the command, 'Forward, march.' Waving a silent adieu to the assembled crowd, he rode off at the head of the column. That was the last time his gaze fell upon the town of Lexington."

Strange Facts

Bats Aren't Batty Set for Next World Swift Blow-Up

The only animals known to carry their lunches on journeys are certain species of bats, notably the Pipistrellus pygmaeus. They curl their tails into pouches, fill them with insects and feed while in flight.

On the day before a Chinese funeral, the family of the deceased purchase and burn a number of paper representations of horses, boxes of money, extra clothes and servants, which he or she will need in the next world. Incidentally, the shops selling this merchandise are usually known as "hell-equipment stores."

Polar bears are the champion long-distance swimmers among land mammals. It is not uncommon to find them at sea as far as 40 miles from land or on an ice floe.

Nitroglycerin acts with such rapidity that if a five-mile pipe filled with it were detonated at one end the entire column would explode—and produce 10,000 times its own volume of gas—in about one second.—Collier's.

Moral: It's an Art To Know When to Fight

A loud, noisy and particularly objectionable skunk, obsessed by its own prominence and the attention paid to it, challenged a lion to single combat. The challenge was promptly declined by the lion.

"Huh!" sneered the skunk, "You're afraid to fight me."

"No," answered the lion, coolly, "but why should I fight you? You would gain fame from fighting me, even though I gave you the worst licking of your life, as I would do. How about me, though? I couldn't possibly gain anything by defeating you while on the other hand, everyone who met me for a month would know I had been in the company of a skunk."

A Good Temper

Good temper, like a sunny day, sheds brightness over everything; it is the sweetener of toil and the soother of disquietude.—Irving.

ORANGE AND BLUE

For the first time in several years Iowa automobile license plates will carry colors other than the familiar blue and white. The 1940 plates will be orange with blue numerals and while their general outline will be much the same, still another departure from the usual is under consideration for the 1941 plates. The 1940 color change is an attempt to determine which color or combination is most resistant to fading. In continuation of the drive against unauthorized use of state automobiles for other that state business, official plates for 1941 may be deigned to distinguish between official cars of state, county and municipal governments The method of controlling state cars recently put into effect keeps a daily record in the office of the car dispatcher detailing each car's position, for what purpose in use and by whom.

RED BOOK STREAMLINED

Before October 1 a streamlined Iowa Official Register, known more familiarly as "The Red Book" will be ready for distribution. In general appearance it will resemble those of the past but in mechanical makeup and method of handling of material it has been noticeably modernized In all cases pictures and biographies of state officials are together on a page. More attention has been given to the state's educational institutions and to its many natural beauties and points of interest from a recreational standpoint. It contains many new pictures and in its modernized form will be of great value to schools ad libraries. Schools have already filed heavy requests for copies of the new Red Book and the unusual interest in the new edition is expected to take up the 20,000 copies in a short time.

TAG

According to the new Official Register the G.A.R. reached its peak of 20,324 members in 1890 . . six Civil War veterans later became governor of Iowa . . . . . ### FARMERS WILL START TO RECEIVE AAA CHECKS ABOUT SEPTEMBER 20TH

DES MOINES—First applications for conservation payments will be certified to the general accounting office for recertification and subsequent payment Sept. 11, Chairman O. D. Klein of the state agricultural adustment committee said Thursday.

This means that checks will start to be received by farmers about September 20, he said.

Steps that payments go through before they finally reach the farmer, start with the making out of the application blank by the county committee, following a check by spot checkers of compliance on each farm that has filed intention of compliance.

After the application is signed by the farmer, it is sent to the state AAA office for first check and certification The applications that are okayed are sent on to the general accounting office and rechecked by certified accountants.

From the general accounting office, each application is sent to the disbursing office in Chicago where payments are given final check and checks sent to the farmers.

Total applications for conservation payments will reach 225,000 this year, it is estimated. This will mean about 1.20 applications a farm included in the conservation program, as compared with 1.14 applications a farm last year. It is estimated that 185,000 of the 234,000 farms in the state will be included in the payments, Klein said.

The flood of conservation payment applications into the state AAA office which is expected to continue through the next three months at the rate of 3,000 a day has made possible early computation of county administrative expenses for this year, Klein pointed out.

The Connecticut Compromise

The Connecticut compromise was the first great compromise of the Constitutional convention, whereby it was agreed that in the senate each state should have two members and that in the house the number of representatives was to be based upon population. ### Federal Liquor Permits

Iowa taverns and clubs totaling 1,685 have each gladly shelled out the $25 that buys a federal retail liquor permit. With such a permit the holder knows his establshment, or joint, will not be raided by federal men, which is quite a load off a bootlegger's mind. For some reason the last legislature neglected to pass a law which would have made possession of a federal permit prima facie evidence that Iowa's liquor control laws were being violated Des Moines leads the list with 163 of the federal permits; while rip-roaring Sioux City and Dubuque are close behind with 150 each.

"Corn Whiskey, suh, is nothing but the illegitimate orphan of the royal line (Bourbon), born out of wedlock in the shine of the moon, left as a fondling on the doorstep of some convenient bootlegger and abounding in fuel oil," says Irving S.Cobb "It smells like gangreen starting in a mildewed silo, it tastes like the wrath to come, and when you absorb a swig of it you have all the sensations of having swallowed a lighted kerosene lamp. A sudden violent jolt of it has been known to stop the victim's watch, snap both his suspenders and crack his glass eye right across—all in the same motion."

Saved Farm.

Farmers near Lenox did an "impossible" job of fire-fighting recently When fire broke out in a hay-barn on the Nels Johnson farm, neighbors came to the rescue, worked all night, saved the barn Spontaneous combustion caused the fire and the pile of hay was so hot that when tenant Clark pushed an iron rod into the mass, the rod sizzled when removed even though no flames were yet visible.

Its cunning tunic bustleback and its full circular-cut skirt gives it swank and distinction such as collegiate fashionables demand. Its red suede belt supplies a fetching dash of color. Approval for the new bustle-back dresses is assured for being interpreted in simple words, bustle-back is merely a way of saying "back fullness" achieved in ingenious ways that are conservative and wearable without being overdone.

The suit to the right is very style-revealing, stressing as it does the continued triumph in the mode of richly colorful striped woolens. The stripes, the plaids and the marvelous artistry with which designers combine them with monotones in related tone simply hold one spellbound. The gorgeous striped wool that fashions the costume suit keys to the smartest fall colors, harmonizing vibrant greens with luscious blackberry tones. The skirt is all-around pleated. The boxy jacket tops an emerald green velvet blouse closing with novel key-and-keyhole ornaments. An oversize quill tops the moss green sailor hat.

You may expect to see gay little velvet jackets dotted all over the college campus. The girl centered in the picture wears a snug black velveteen jacket quite military looking as so many of the newer fashions are, with a plaid pleated skirt that introduces an artful blend of grape, pink and yellow tones, climaxed with a sweater in warm yellow hues. Juniors, likewise college sophisticates, simply dote on the new plaids and stripes. A Scotch cap of black velvet with satin ribbon streamer, together with the plaid carries the message that fashions for young folks have gone very Scotch this season.

Offers Solution For One Problem

For many women, the most trying coat length of recent inspiration is the rather popular just-below-the-waist length that nips in at the midriff and hugs the hips.

It is a good style for a slender woman with a streamlined figure and is being shown in any number of varieties, of which one of the most popular is a monotone wool jacket worn over a gay print dress. But the problem is not so simple for those who border on plumpness.

One suggestion is that the slightly swallow-tail version deals more kindly with the heavy woman.

Two-Skirt Outfit Real Money-Saver

A money-saver for the bride consists of a two-skirt suit of very sheer wool or crepe, designed with a suave fitted jacket. The street-length skirt can be worn with the jacket and printed crepe or organdy blouses to make a smart runabout costume by day.

A floor-length skirt of the same material, combined with the jacket and a sheer chiffon blouse make a chic dinner costume for boat and hotel wear in the evening.

New Coat Silhouettes

Coats are no longer a simple matter of straight boxy lines or fitted and flared effects, for Parisian designers are showing intricate details of cut and design in their most recent collections.

SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

Dean of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.

Lesson for September 17

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education, used by permission.

MICAH: A MESSENGER OF SOCIAL JUSTICE

LESSON TEXT—Micah 3 1-12; 6.6-8.
GOLDEN TEXT—What doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God? —Micah 6 8.

We demand human rights, social justice, and economic security. Corrupt judges and bribe-taking officials must be put out of office. Landlords must not squeeze every penny out of their tenants; loan sharks must be put out of business; the rich must not oppress the poor. The Church must have ministers with a real message and must share in the solution of the problems of humanity.

No, we did not copy that paragraph out of today's newspaper. It is the message that the prophet Micah preached more than 2,500 years ago And what's more, he not only presented theories, but he knew how to accomplish his purpose of real social justice. It is time some of those who talk about this subject got back to the Bible and really learned how it can be done.

I. Social Injustice (3 1-10).

The inhumanity of man toward man is not something that just happened There are fundamental reasons for such conditions, and they are the same in our time as in Micah's day. The responsibility rests squarely on the failure of our national and spiritual leaders to perform their God-given tasks.

1 Rulers without Judgment (3:1-4, 9-10).

The obligation of anyone who is given or who seeks public office is to know judgment. This does not mean only that he is to have a general knowledge of the law and its technicalities, he is to know justice in his very heart, to love it, and to see that it is always rightly administered.

The leaders of Israel had woefully failed, in fact had deliberately departed from the standards of God, and Micah exposed them in plain, dramatic, well-spoken words. While verses 2 and 3 are not to be taken literally, they do in striking figurative speech describe just what unscrupulous politicians do to an unsuspecting people.

2. Prophets with a False Message (3:5-8).

In such a day might one not expect God's messengers to have a word of condemnation for the leaders and of comfort for the people? Not only did they keep quiet about the sin and corruption which they saw about them, but they actually encouraged their prominent and wealthy "church members" in their sin by saying, "All is well." Such religious leaders have not altogether perished from the earth.

Let ministers of God be like Micah, who is described in verse 8 as a man of judgment and justice, because he was "full of power by the Spirit of the Lord."

II. Social Security (3:11, 12; 6: 6-8).

No, that idea was not discovered by the politicians of the 1930's. It has been in the plan of God from the beginning; in fact only in Him is there any real national, personal, or social security. Micah skillfully unmasked false security and revealed the way of true security.

1. False Security and Divine Judgment (3:11, 12).

When the heads of a nation "judge for reward" and its religious leaders "teach for hire" and its prophets "divine for money" (v. 11), there is no use to talk piously about God being with us.

The prophecy of verse 12 was fulfilled three times—by the Chaldeans in 586 B. C., by Titus in A. D. 70, and under Hadrian in A. D. 135. God always keeps His promises, even if the promise be a promise of judgment.

2. True Security and Divine Blessing (6:6-8).

God is not to be propitiated by the offerings of material things as a sacrifice or by any outward profession of piety. He looks at the heart.

Verse 8 is a remarkable and beautiful epitome of God's requirement of man, namely, justice, kindness, and humility; but note that this is the requirement of the law, and one which no man can possibly fulfill apart from Christ. It is evident folly for men to quote this verse as did the agnostic Thomas Huxley and others, to justify themselves for not responding to the claims of the gospel of Christ. Only Christ can make any man capable of true justice, constant kindness, and genuine humility Only thus can we meet the demands of the law of God.

Real social justice and security will come only as there is a recognition of Jesus Christ as Saviour and Lord by the leaders, by the prophets and by the people.

Self Abnegation

After you have been kind, after love has stolen forth into the world and done its beautiful work, go back into the shade again and say nothing about it. Love hides even from itself. Love waives even self-satisfaction.—Henry Drummond.

TASTY SUNDAY NIGHT SUPPERS
(See Recipes Below)

Sunday Night Suppers

Even though you expect everyone to have had a noon meal with staying power on Sundays, people do like to eat when Sunday evening rolls 'round! To be sure, they like food that's somewhat lighter, and food that's out of the ordinary. So it's a grand time to leave the beaten path and serve something a little different.

If you serve left-overs, be sure to serve them in a new way or with an unusual accompaniment like the jellied chili sauce I've suggested in menu No. III. If you plan a meal especially for Sunday night, plan one which can be served "help-yourself" style and arrange foods, dishes and silver on the table so that guests may serve themselves. Appetites will be quickened by the eye-appealing arrangement of the table, and the air of informality makes Sunday night supper a sociable affair.

These menus are suited, too, to serving larger numbers — lodge groups, church organizations or clubs. Recipes for the main dish and salad in every menu are easily increased. Unless you have special recipes and equipment, cakes and pastries are likely to be better if the single recipe is used.

Sunday Night Supper Menus

Clam Chowder
Wafers Assorted Relishes
Lettuce and Tomatoes with Roquefort Cheese Dressing
Pineapple Cream Tarts
Beverage

Tuna Casserole
Orange-Cherry Salad
Hot Rolls
Beverage

Thin Slices of Cold Roast Beef
Jellied Chili Sauce
Mixed Vegetable Salad
Toasted Loaf
Cocoa Marshmallow Cake
Coffee

Lettuce and Tomatoes With Roquefort Cheese Dressing.
(Serves 6)

1 head lettuce
2 tomatoes
¼ pound Roquefort cheese (crumbled)
French dressing

Remove coarse outer leaves from head of lettuce. Cut into wedges. Peel tomatoes, remove stem end, and cut into eighths. Place in salad bowl with the lettuce. Add crumbled Roquefort cheese and French dressing. Toss lightly until well mixed.

Cocoa Marshmallow Cake.

2 tablespoons cocoa
½ cup sweet milk
2 cups brown sugar
3 eggs (separated)
½ cup butter
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
2 cups cake flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon soda
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup sour milk

Place cocoa, sweet milk, 1 cup brown sugar, and 1 egg yolk (beaten) in top of double boiler. Cook over hot water, until mixture is well blended. Cool. Cream butter, and add remaining cup of brown sugar while beating constantly. Add the two remaining egg yolks, together with the vanilla extract and mix thoroughly. Then mix and sift all dry ingredients and add alternately with the sour milk. Beat egg whites stiff but not dry, and fold into the cake mixture.

Place in 2 well greased layer cake pans and bake in a moderately hot oven (375 degrees) approximately 30 minutes. Ice with boiled icing to which 8 marshmallows (cut in quarters) have been added.

Jellied Chili Sauce.

1 tablespoon gelatin
2 tablespoons cold water
1 cup chili sauce (or catsup)

Soak gelatin in cold water for 5 minutes. Add to chili sauce, which has been heated to the boiling point, and stir until dissolved. Pour into tiny paper cups, individual molds, or small pan from which the chili sauce may be sliced or cut in attractive shapes when firm. Chill thoroughly before serving.

Tuna Casserole.

1 7-ounce can tuna
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 cup cooked peas
1 can button mushrooms
2 cups cooked noodles (medium width)
Salt, pepper and butter
1 cup milk

Butter individual baking dishes Sprinkle tuna with lemon juice. (This brings out the tuna flavor) Arrange alternate layers of tuna peas, mushrooms and noodles, putting noodles on top. Season each layer with salt and pepper. Dot top generously with butter Pour milk into dish and top with buttered bread crumbs. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees) 30 minutes. (Serves 4-6.)

Toasted Loaf.

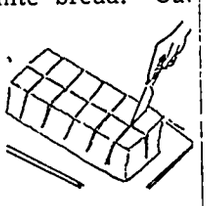
Trim top and side crusts from a loaf of unsliced white bread. Cut through the center of the loaf, lengthwise, cutting just to the lower crust, but not through it. Then cut crosswise, spacing the cuts about 2 inches apart. Brush top and sides generously with melted butter. Toast in a moderately hot oven (400 degrees) until the loaf is golden brown. Serve hot.



There are so many points to be considered in planning meals. One which is all too likely to be overlooked is this—that the dessert is more than something to satisfy the family's "sweet tooth"; it really plays an important part in the menu.

Next week in this column Eleanor Howe will tell you why—and will give you, too—some of her favorite recipes for "Desserts That Are Different."

Clam Chowder.
(Serves 6.)

½ cup carrot (chopped)
2 tablespoons onion (chopped)
1¼ cups potato (chopped)
¾ cup celery (chopped fine)
1 pint clams
2 cups water and clam liquor
Salt and pepper to taste
1 pint milk
3 tablespoons flour
3 tablespoons butter
1½ tablespoons parsley
½ teaspoon paprika

Chop the vegetables in small pieces and place in large kettle. Chop the clams and add together with the clam liquor, water, salt, and pepper. Cover and cook about ½ hour, or until vegetables are tender. Scald milk. Make a smooth paste of the flour and water. Add half of this flour paste to the clam mixture and half to the scalded milk. Cook each, stirring constantly, until the mixture thickens. Combine and add butter, parsley and paprika. Serve very hot.

BASEBALL HAS-BEENS WILL PLAY HIGH SCHOOL THURS.

As an innaugural for the new baseball diamond and a practice game for the high school, a team of ex-stars and has-beens will tangle with the high school team Thursday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

Coach Bowles has been working hard with one of the largest squads Klemme has seen in recent years, and Thursday's encounter will give him and the fans a chance to see how his boys will act under fire.

We wouldn't know for sure, but we imagine that baseballs will look like peas to some of the has-beens who been playing softball all summer.

2-Coat Painting System

CUT HOUSE PAINT BILLS IN HALF!

The introduction of the new Devoe System has revolutionized exterior painting Now two coats do a better job than three coats have ever done before . . and the new system outlasts conventional paints 2 to 1.

This new practice is based on the scientific fact that two special coats of house paint are needed for perfect results. One is the undercoat which comes in contact with the wood or old paint, and through controlled penetration seals the surface. The second is the topcoat, formulated to combat the destructive rays of the sun

Devoe Chemists developed the principle of Controlled Penetration By doubling the life of exterior paint these men have enabled you to cut your painting bills in half.

SQIRREL AND RABBIT SEASON

Since the opening of the squirrel and rabbit hunting seasons on August 1, Iowa Conservation officers and the Commission offices in Des Moines, Iowa, have been receiving hundreds of complaints protesting the early opening. The squirrel season, in particular, has been criticized freely.

R. E. Stewart, chairman of the Iowa Conservation Commission, has issued some information regarding these seasons for the benefit of the public

Much of the criticism, though not all of it, has been directed at the Commission Therefore, it is hoped that the following information may clarify the matter somewhat.

"Open hunting dates, bag limits. and possession limits, etc. are fixed by legislative act with the exception of migratory birds whose hunting is under regulation of the federal government. They can be changed by the Commission only by Administrative Order when the biological balance is such that the maintenance of an adequate supply is endangered, if the provisions of the laws are adhered to.

"The opening date for hunting squirrels was previously September 15th The Commission did not recommend any change in the date to the last legislature However, it was changed to August 1st by the 48th General Assembly

"The opening date for hunting rabbits was, and is now by law, August 1st. The Commission recommended to the last legislature a hunting season for rabbits from September 15th to January 15th.

"If conditions remain as they now are the Commission will undoubtedly recommend to the next legislature later opening hunting season dates for both sqirrels and rabbits."

INCREASE HYBRID SEED CORN ACRES

With 18,407 acres this year devoted to the production of certified hybrid seed corn, as compared with 17,116 acres in 1938, Joe. L. Robinson of the Iowa Agricultural Experiment Association predicts that there will be more than 700,000 bushels of Iowa grown certified hybrid seed available for the 1940 planting.

Approximately 77 per cent of Iowa's total corn acreage was in hybrids this year, but what the acreage next year wil be is difficult to estimate beyond that the available certified seed will plant approximately 5,000,000 acres.

Robinson states that it is not known how many acres this year may be producing hybrid seed this not listed for certification or how much will be sent in from surrounding states.

Growers Listed

A list of 314 growers who so far have met certification requirements will be available about the middle of October and may be obtained by writing Joe L. Robinson, Agricultural Hall, Iowa State College. These 314 seed growers range from farmers who produce as little as 1 acre to commercial growers having several thousand acres. In all, 871 fields are involved.

Discussing the advisability of buying certified seed, Robinson said that the grower has reasonabe assurance of obtaining a high-yielding combination that has been carefully tested and found to be outstanding in yield and strength of stalk. Commercial growers who produce this type of seed and have it certified must meet the rigid requirements of the Iowa Agricultural Experiment Association.

Certified hybrid seed can be identified by the blue tags which are supplied to each grower These tags also indicate the section of the state wherein the requirements for certification have been met.

GOP REMOVES SEVEN MORE LIQUOR HEADS

Managerial Changes Increase To Thirty-One Since GOP Control

DES MOINES—The Iowa liquor commission Wednesday removed 7 more liquor store managers, increasing to 31 the number of managerial changes since the republicans assumed control July 1st

Two clerks and four extras also were replaced.

Chairman M. L. Curtis said the changes "as usual" were accasioned by the commission's desire to "promote store efficiency" and by way of continuing the "adjustment" of the political division of commission jobs.

Curtis, a republican, has said that a 60-40 split in the patronage is the commission's goal. "It was about 90 to 10" when the republicans came into power, he said.

U. S. Already Discusses Peace Allies Will Impose on Germany In Event Hitler Is Vanquished

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

THE WAR:
Good Start

"I regret that after 2,000 years of mankind, Sunday morning should find the prime minister in the position of announcing that men are on the eve of living like beasts."

Such were the sentiments of John McGovern, leader of parliament's independent labor party. His was the lone dissent that fateful morning when Neville Chamberlain, his peace efforts at a hopeless end, declared war on Germany. A few hours later France followed suit and by nightfall most of the British empire was also in line. By that time the rest of the world clamored to declare its neutrality.

Too busy was Neville Chamberlain to notice that Barbara Hutton Reventlow fled the romantic isle of Capri, or that American radio sponsors were about to complain over too many program interruptions for CBS and NBC news bulletins. Nor did he notice that thousands of London's pet dogs and cats were painlessly exterminated lest they prove a burden during evacuation. Said one weeping pet owner: "It's a damn shame. It ought to be Hitler on the end of this leash."

THE PRIME MINISTER

Such was the man-on-the-street's background for war. Since 1936 he had accepted its inevitability, yet the awful reality of legalized brute force somehow left him benumbed. He watched without passion as Britain's popular Winston Churchill and Anthony Eden—both foes of appeasement — were given cabinet posts to solidify public sentiment. He slowly built a halo around the head of Prime Minister Chamberlain, whose frantic umbrella waving of the past two years had at least postponed the war. He may have wept over the news that French troops marched to the front "almost tenderly," hating war yet fervent in their ambition to "smash Hitler and all that he represents."

But as such things happen, British and French men-on-the-street were whipped into war frenzy the next morning. Steaming to Montreal, the liner Athenia was torpedoed off Ireland with 1,450 refugee passengers aboard, providing enough provocation to make even the "tender" French soldiers hate Germans in general as well as Der Fuehrer. Paris and London heard Polish civilians were suffering "frightfully" as Adolf Hitler headed for the eastern front and the first major battle, just getting underway in Upper Silesia.

After two days of "fighting," the World war of 1939 had developed into a decidedly unorthodox conflict. British warplanes flew over Nuremberg but dropped nothing heavier than propaganda leaflets urging the German people to discard Der Fuehrer. Nazi anti-aircraft guns failed to bark back. The same day French soldiers on the Maginot line were reported to have set placards atop their pillboxes, carrying this message to German soldiers in the West wall: "We won't shoot if you don't."

But there was good evidence that this evident lack of hostilities appeared only on paper. The lid of censorship clamped down over both France and Britain, screening what the French war office called "contacts" on the western front. All three major powers were evidently reluctant to invite revenge by bombing London, Paris and Berlin, yet the Germans admitted British bombers had attacked their fleet at Wilhelmshaven.

Where and How?

If France and Britain had any cut and dried plan for rushing aid to their beleaguered ally, Poland, they took their time executing it. Best guesses held both democracies were stymied, not only by Hitler but by the silence of other key nations. Germany's West wall and France's Maginot line apparently made the western front a bulwark of staticism. Both other routes of getting to Poland were perilous:

Via the Baltic. Though British battleships blockaded that sea, a Baltic expedition would be no pushover. Troop and supply ships must fight the Reich's famous and pestiferous submarines, must hold their breath against cunningly placed mines, and must land at Gdynia (Poland's only port) which might be in German hands by that time. Landing against an enemy has always been a major military problem, and already the Polish corridor has been nipped by German troops. Not only that, but Russia has naval strength in the Baltic and might decide to join the Reich's cause.

Via the Mediterranean. Strangely silent as war opened were both of Hitler's erstwhile continental friends, Spain and Italy. The allies hoped Hitler's sell-out to Russian Communism would keep Spain's Francisco Franco and Italy's Benito Mussolini out of the conflict, but no one could tell despite Spain's neutrality proclamation and Italy's resumption of sea traffic. With Mediterranean neutrality, French-British aid to Poland might go through the Mediterranean and Black seas, land at Rumania's port of Constanta and thence reach Warsaw. But Rumania, like all Balkan countries, was intent on neutrality.

At Home

In the U. S., which has watched Europe's wars for almost 200 years, observers were far enough from the forest to see the trees. Though President Roosevelt pointed out no American has the "moral right" to capitalize on the conflict, every economist knew it would probably start a boom. "Cash-and-carry" neutrality would make the U. S. support Britain and France, which dominate the seas, opening new markets for farm products and steel. But such a neutrality would also accentuate the already marked

ANTHONY EDEN
Winston Churchill also came.

U. S. sentiment against Hitler, confounding isolationists by making the nation a virtual silent ally of the allies. Should enough American non-combatants be killed via torpedoes, the flame of 1916 and 1917 might again blot out reason. Hence the President urged the U. S. to weigh its facts with care.

The End?

Next to neutrality, the most moot question among Americans concerns the eventual end of hostilities. No longer does anyone but a fanatical anti-German see justice in the Versailles treaty of 20 years ago, which wrung lifeblood from the Reich and placed it in such dire straits that a Hitler was welcomed with open arms. But will Versailles be repeated?

Unless Russia jumps to Germany's aid, unless Mussolini and Franco junk their apparent neutrality, a war to the end would probably find Germany collapsing under economic stress. Hitler No. 1 would be vanquished, but can anything short of another "peace without honor" (such as Woodrow Wilson suggested) keep a Hitler No. 2 from rising out of the ruins?

Chronology

These were the events and dates that led to war in 1939:

AUGUST 21 — German-Soviet non-aggression pact announced, day after trade pact is signed.

AUGUST 23 — Hitler expands demands on Poland, which are refused.

AUGUST 27 — Hitler outlines policy to French Premier Daladier.

AUGUST 28 — Britain stands firm on negotiation for all points.

AUGUST 29-30 — Notes exchanged, but peace dwindles.

AUGUST 31 — Hitler invades Poland without declaring war.

SEPTEMBER 1—France, Britain send ultimatums, demanding Germany withdraw troops from Poland.

SEPTEMBER 3—Receiving no answer, Britain declares war at 11 a. m., France following at 5 p. m.

POLITICS:
Neutrality

Well remembered in Washington is the hot July night Franklin Roosevelt called the senate foreign relations committee into his White House Oval room, discovered he had insufficient votes to force a change in the present neutrality law, and sent the senators away with acknowledgement that full responsibility for the "failure" rested on their shoulders.

Even better remembered is the August day at Hyde Park when Franklin Roosevelt tiraded against an adjourned congress, pointing out it had made two enormous "bets": (1) that his lend-spend bill was needless because private enterprise could do the job alone; (2) that no neutrality revision was needed, because there would be no war in Europe before next January when congress meets again.

By September 1, four months before the next normal session, the President might have boasted that congress had already lost one bet. There was war in Europe (See Column One), which gave Mr. Roosevelt and Secretary of State Cordell

KEY PITTMAN
But does the public agree?

Hull a severe headache. Under the present neutrality law, they had no alternative but to declare an embargo on "implements of war" for belligerents. Just as good a neutrality, in the eyes of Messrs. Roosevelt, Hull and Sen. Key Pittman, chairman of the senate committee, is the "cash-and-carry" variety under which any belligerent able to reach a U. S. port could buy and carry off all the "implements of war" he wanted.

Not at all impossible as war broke out was the special congressional session Mr. Roosevelt has long threatened in such an eventuality. But if he thought congress would give him a free hand, indeed, if he thought this free hand might help him keep the U. S. out of war and thus pave the way for a third term in 1940, he was badly mistaken. Gallup polls of public sentiment found such an assumption wrong on two counts:

(1) Last April a Gallup poll showed 57 per cent favoring a change in neutrality. By early September it had dropped to 50 per cent, indicating the nation was less and less sure that the administration is right.

(2) Also in early September, another poll showed 71 per cent favored a special congressional session in case of war, comments revealing that the public would feel "safer" that way. Whether this sentiment discredited the President's ability, constituted a vote of confidence in his rebellious congress, neither, or both, was anybody's guess.

Emphatically minus political import, however, were the steps Mr. Roosevelt took. Clamped down immediately was the arms embargo. Confiscated were the passports of all Americans returning from Europe, while the state department terminated all U. S. tourist travel to the continent. Belatedly came the official proclamation of American neutrality. Next day the navy department pondered the advisability of assigning naval convoys to merchantmen transporting U. S. citizens from war zones. At the same time Attorney General Frank Murphy began seeking ways to tighten statutes regulating profiteering during war time. Still to come were new farm policies to deal with the new situation, though an advisory council was being formed.

ASIA:
About Face

Most embarrassed by Russia's non-aggression treaty with Adolf Hitler were Communists in other lands, who talked themselves silly trying to justify their new bedfellow, socialism. Second greatest embarrassment fell to Japan, which only a few weeks ago was busy insulting U. S., British and French interests in the Orient. Confident of her anti-Commitern pact with Italy and Germany, still more confident after she signed a trade treaty with Germany, Tokyo suddenly found herself friendless when the Reich adopted Comrade Stalin.

Highly nervous was the Japanese press as European hostilities got underway. While war planes continued to bomb Chungking in an effort to close the Chinese war promptly, the Tokyo cabinet sat in extraordinary session.

"Splendid isolation" was the advice of Tokyo newspapers, but there was good evidence Japan was willing to turn about and woo for democracies' friendship.

(Recipes Below.)

Desserts That Are Different

Build up your menu to an interesting climax with a new and delicious dessert!

Desserts really play an important part in the menu, and in nutrition, too.

Sweets, provided in proper amounts and in the proper place in the diet, are just as necessary to good nutrition as milk, meat, fruits, vegetables and cereals.

Plan the dessert to fit the menu—a light sweet for the close of a hearty dinner, and a richer, heavier dessert to wind up the meal that is fairly simple. Consider the weather, too, and when it's hot and humid, serve sweets that are temptingly dainty. When the temperature drops and appetites perk up accordingly, desserts may be sweeter, richer and more substantial.

You'll find in this collection of tested recipes from my own kitchen a dessert for almost any occasion.

Queen of Puddings.

2 cups milk
1 cup soft bread crumbs
1 tablespoon butter (melted)
2 egg yolks (well beaten)
3 tablespoons sugar

Scald milk and pour over the soft bread crumbs. Add melted butter, and allow the mixture to stand 10 minutes. Then beat egg yolks and add to the mixture, together with 3 tablespoons sugar, the vanilla extract and the salt. Pour this mixture into a buttered baking dish, place in a pan of hot water, and bake in a slow oven (275 degrees Fahrenheit) for 45-50 minutes or until custard is firm.

Cool and spread with a layer of currant jelly or strawberry jam. Cover with meringue made by beating egg whites and adding sugar slowly. Brown meringue in a slow oven (300 degrees Fahrenheit) for 18 minutes. Serve hot, warm or cold.

Lemon Meringue Pie.

Maple Cake.

½ cup shortening
1½ cups brown sugar
3 eggs (separated)
2 teaspoons maple flavoring
2 cups cake flour

Sift dry ingredients together, and add to the creamed mixture alternately with the milk. Beat egg whites until stiff but not dry. Fold gently into the batter. Pour into two well-greased cake pans, 9 inches in diameter and 2 inches deep. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for about 40 minutes. Note: This cake is especially good with a fig filling and maple-flavored frosting.

Steamed Chocolate Pudding.
(Serves 5)

1⅓ cups pastry flour
¼ teaspoon salt
1½ teaspoons baking powder
1½ squares bitter chocolate
3 tablespoons butter
½ cup sugar
1 egg
⅓ cup milk
½ teaspoon vanilla extract
Vanilla or peppermint candy ice cream

Sift flour, salt and baking powder. Melt chocolate and butter in top of double boiler and pour in bowl. Cool slightly; then add sugar, unbeaten egg, milk and vanilla extract. Beat well. Add sifted dry ingredients and stir until smooth. Pour into top of a well-greased double boiler and steam for 1½ hours. Serve with ice cream.

Graham Cracker Ice Cream.

1 cup graham cracker crumbs
¾ cup sugar

Combine the cracker crumbs and the sugar; add cream, milk, and vanilla. Pour the mixture into the freezing container of a modern ice cream freezer; assemble the freezer, and cover. Pack with a mixture of 3 parts of crushed ice to 1 part of rock salt. Turn the crank slowly and steadily, for about 5 minutes, or until turning becomes difficult. Then carefully remove the cover, lift out the dasher, and pack down the ice cream with a spoon. Replace the cover, draw off the water, and replenish with ice and salt. Cover, and allow to harden for at least an hour before serving.

Combine molasses and spices. Arrange pared and sliced apples in a baking dish, sprinkle with sugar, and dot with butter. Pour molasses mixture over this, and cover with a rich pastry, rolled rather thick. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for about 45 minutes. Then cut the baked pastry top in 2-inch squares and push them down in the molasses and apple mixture. Let cool slightly. Serve with thick cream.

...ou'll have one hell of a job ...g spruce out of northwest- ... timber, because of govern- ... red tape and other ob- ...es,'" the mayor of Portland told Disque bluntly. The "other obstacles," it developed, were numerous enough and difficult enough to have daunted anyone except an army officer who was accustomed to obeying his orders to "get the job done."

Members of the Spruce Production Division loading logs in an Oregon camp.

For several years the spruce industry of the Northwest had been almost paralyzed. The low wages, long working hours and disgraceful living conditions of the logging camps had made them fertile ground for the I. W. W. to sow its seeds of discontent. The result was a succession of strikes and a campaign of sabotage carried on by the "wobblies." As though this were not enough trouble, the operators added to it by their practice of stealing men from each other.

This, in brief, was the situation which confronted Colonel Disque when he arrived on the scene, charged with the responsibility of getting out great quantities of spruce and getting it out in a hurry. His first step was to call a conference of operators and workmen, who heretofore had been hopelessly deadlocked over the question of reducing the 10-hour day to an eight-hour day.

Installs 8-Hour Day.

To this conference the colonel announced that eight, instead of 10 hours would be the basic working day and that there would be no cut in wages because of it; that living conditions in the camps would be raised to the standards of the United States army; that employers must stop stealing men; and, finally, that under his administration there would be a square deal for both operators and workmen. To bring that about he submitted to them, for their voluntary adoption, a constitution and by-laws of an organization which he called the Loyal Legion of Loggers and Lumbermen.

Without going into detail into the way in which this organization operated, it may be noted that, perhaps for the first time in American history, capital and labor recognized the mutuality of their interests, co-operated thoroughly and reduced disputes to a minimum.

The nucleus of the force which carried on these vast operations was soldiers from the National army and volunteers who had been transferred for this special work from other arms of the service. Many of them came from the timber districts of Michigan, Wisconsin and Pennsylvania. Eventually the total strength of the Spruce Production Division was 30,000 men and 1,200 officers. Added to that force were more than 75,000 civilians engaged in the task of getting out the vitally needed spruce so that the total membership of the Loyal Legion was nearly 110,000.

Their first problem was finding the spruce. The heaviest stands of this kind of timber were discovered on a strip of territory about 50 miles wide on the western slope of the Coast range in Oregon and Washington which was then the wildest and most inaccessible section of the West. Since fir timber, heretofore the chief source of lumber supply, grew on the eastern slope of this range of mountains, no railroads, roads or any other highways for transportation of timber had ever been built on the western slope. So the first step was to construct them.

Thirteen separate railroads were decided upon and construction of 167 miles of main line track and 149 miles of branch line was begun. This railroad building would take time, of course, and in the meantime spruce was urgently needed for new Allied airplanes. So Colonel Disque made contracts with the operators for the delivery of all the "clear" spruce they could get. Besides that he sent his own crews of soldier-lumberjacks into the forests to augment their efforts.

Over the protests of the operators he inaugurated a system of "selective" logging, that is, cutting down only those trees which had been picked by expert timber cruisers as best fitted for airplane stock. Where the stand of timber was too sparse to justify building roads over which to bring out these logs, or where the country was too rough to get the huge logs out "in the round," they were "rived" where they fell, that is, the logs were split, the knotty heartwood was removed and the remaining lumber was split into "flitches" of convenient size.

But selective logging was not the only innovation which Disque introduced. He maintained that logs could be sawed to get a much higher percentage of clear, straight lumber than was obtainable by methods heretofore used. Some of the lumbermen said it couldn't be done. He produced his own expert who designed a huge government sawmill to be built at Vancouver, Wash., across the river from Portland. The lumbermen said that such a mill couldn't be built in less than a year and then it might not be a success. As a matter of fact it was built in 45 days and instead of the 25 per cent of airplane stock produced by ordinary methods from clear "flitches" it began turning out 65 per cent.

2,700% Production Increase.

It would require a book to tell the full story of the achievement of Colonel Disque and his Spruce Production Division—how they increased the output 2,700 per cent over that which had been possible before the organization of the Loyal League, how they met the Allies' demand for a million feet of selected spruce daily, and how it was rushed across the continent by fast express for shipment across the Atlantic. Included in that story, too, is how the attempts of the "wobblies" to create dissatisfaction and sabotage the spruce production was thwarted, how the effort of labor union organizers to "muscle in" was defeated, and how the Loyal League survived after the war to the benefit of capital and labor relations in the industry.

It would tell also how Colonel Disque, by this time a brigadier-general, resigned his "benevolent dictatorship" at the close of the war, liquidated the $10,000,000 United States Spruce corporation of which he was president; returned more than 96 per cent of the government's $10,000,000 investment, said good-by to the thousands of men who were under his command and retired to private life.

These are some of the things which the members of the Spruce Production Division will talk over when they hold their reunion in Chicago this month. There will be tales, too, of their buddies who were killed "in line of duty"—impaled by flying splinters in the woods and mowed down by a blast of steel fragments when the huge circular saw bit into the spike imbedded in a log by a sabotaging "wobbly"—stories of feverish activity in building roads through the wilderness and constructing high pole bridges over streams and across canyons, of never-ending vigilance against the fire hazard around the sawmills with their huge piles of precious spruce timber. All these and a thousand other incidents of those hectic days when they were doing their bit to help win the war will be the theme of the men of "Disque's Own" at this, their first, reunion of the Spruce Production Division of the Aviation Section of the Signal Corps of the United States Army.

Although the achievements of the men of the Spruce Division (or, to use the more appropriate title, the Loyal Legion of Loggers and Lumbermen) is now almost forgotten—if indeed it was ever generally known to their fellow-Americans—the magnitude of that achievement has not gone entirely unrecognized. In the December 5, 1918, issue of the Engineering News-Record, one of the leading journals devoted to civil engineering and contracting, appeared an editorial, headed "The Spruce Victory," which said:

"A great purpose and a great leader backed up by organized talent, team work and enthusiasm—that was the Spruce Production Division of the army . . . Radically different methods of logging, and entirely new methods in the sawmill, were worked out by leaders unafraid to disregard precedent. Out of their fresh and broader view came enormous increases in total production of spruce and—what is still more important—an almost unbelievable improvement in the quality of the product. The thick spruce stands of the inaccessible regions have been tapped by railroads—thirteen of them—located, built and operating in less than a year, and a new goal of practically doubling the present output was recently announced. Popular attention during the year has been elsewhere, and the men in the Spruce Production Division have been too busy to tell of their work, if they would. Therefore, little is generally known of problems and successes that under other conditions would have had world-wide publicity. This would have been particularly true in engineering circles, because of the engineering pioneering involved. The policy of putting engineering problems in the hands of engineers has been followed by General Disque from the outset, and too much praise can not be given him for his methods of management. Now, that the work is closing down it is a pleasure to record the achievement and to give to General Disque and his colleagues the credit they so richly deserve."

Six years later the social significance of General Disque's policies were recognized in an article which appeared in the Forum and Century magazine. Written by Earl Chapin May under the title of "A Model for the New Deal," this article, which appeared in the March, 1934, issue of that magazine, said in part:

"If, as and when the Supreme Court of the United States decides that the National Industrial Recovery act belongs in the discard it will not be necessary for President Franklin D. Roosevelt and his Administration to relegate the celebrated and promising New Deal to history.

"To all important intents and purposes the Roosevelt New Deal has successfully functioned for 15 years in the lumber regions of Oregon, Washington and Idaho. For fifteen years capital and labor have dwelt in harmony; wages and profits have been controlled; production has kept approximate pace with consumer demand; peace has reigned where industrial war once flourished; and a large part of one of our major industries has been run on an even keel, by self-government.

"Officially this co-operative is known as the Loyal Legion of Loggers and Lumbermen. Popularly, it is known as the "4L." It began under a military dictatorship as a patriotic movement to meet a wartime emergency. It has survived without any material change in organization machinery since 1921 and without a dictatorship, except that vested in mutually agreeing employers and employees.

"If anything goes wrong with the machinery set up by the National Industrial Recovery Act—if the Supreme court or any other court or influence throws a monkey-wrench into the federal government's industrial recovery program—President Roosevelt and his "brain trust" can turn gracefully to the 4L and ride to recovery on its bandwagon. The National Industrial Recovery Act might become permanent by adopting some of the methods of the Pacific Northwest 4L."

ISAIAH: FORETELLING THE BIRTH OF THE MESSIANIC KING

LESSON TEXT—Isaiah 7:14; 9:1-7; 11:1-5.
GOLDEN TEXT—His name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace.—Isaiah 9:6.

Christ is coming! Christ has come! Christ is coming again! All three of these great truths are declared by Holy Scripture. In our lesson for today we study the prophecy of His birth which was given by Isaiah about 750 years before the event took place, and with it we find many beautiful details concerning His blessed character and accomplishments. It is entirely appropriate that the lesson for today should be taken from the Old Testament and relate to the prophecy of the coming of the Messianic King, thus binding together the Old and the New Testaments. Isaiah's prophecy prepares us to study His life in the Gospel of Matthew, beginning next week.

I. The Coming of the King (7:14; 9:1-6).

To us it is entirely understandable that the Son of God was to become flesh and dwell among us and that all the grace and power of God should be upon Him, for we know that He did come in perfect fulfillment of the Scriptures. But let us not fail to note the marvel of this revelation made centuries in advance through God's prophet.

1. Born of a Virgin (7:14; 9:6).

He was to be born. Christ did not come as a fully matured divine being after the fashion of the so-called gods of mythology, but He entered our needy world as the Babe of Bethlehem's manger. What infinite condescension!

He was to be born of a virgin, and so He was. There are those who would minimize the importance of this, or try to explain it away by interpreting the word "virgin" to mean a young married woman. The late Robert Dick Wilson, an outstanding authority, says, "The great and only difficulty lies in disbelief in predictive prophecy and in the almighty power of God, or in the desire to throw discredit on the divine Sonship."

2. God with Us (7:14).

"Immanuel" means "God with us." Isaiah had a foregleam of the incarnation which brought the eternal Son of God into that God-man relationship which was absolutely indispensable if there was to be redemption. Sin had made a barrier between God and man which man could not pass, and only as the God-man, Christ Jesus, came through that barrier to be "God with us" could there be any hope of our salvation.

3. A Great Light (9:2).

The Messiah was to break through the dense darkness of sin and sorrow to bring light and joy. How gloriously that prophecy has been fulfilled!

II. The Character of the King (9:6, 7; 11:1-5).

The prophet foretold not only the meaningful names of the coming Messiah, but pictured in glowing beauty the mighty things which He was to accomplish.

1. Revealed by His Names (9:6).

"Wonderful"—that word has been so misused that it means comparatively little to us. It really fulfills its true meaning in Christ. He is unique, remarkable, yes, truly wonderful. "Counsellor"—in every detail of life, great or small, an infallible guide. "Mighty God"—not just like God, or representing God; Christ is God. "Everlasting Father"—the tender and loving, unfailing One to whom time does not bring any change, for He is the "Father of eternity." "Prince of Peace"—He is not yet the ruler of the nations of the world, hence we hear not only of wars but of rumors of wars. Mark it well that there will be no enduring peace until He comes to reign whose right it is to reign, the divine Prince of Peace.

2. Revealed by His Deeds (9:7; 11:1-5).

Eternal justice and righteousness, peace, wisdom, understanding, counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge and the fear of God, unfailing equity—all these glorious accomplishments are to characterize the Messiah according to Isaiah's prophecy.

Has the prophecy been fulfilled? We know that all of these qualities were in Christ when He came to earth the first time, but the complete fulfillment of this prophecy awaits that day toward which the child of God looks with joy and hope when Christ shall come again. As we study this portion of our lesson, our hearts should cry out with John, "Even so, come, Lord Jesus" (Rev. 22:20).

To Gain Truth

Truth is never learned in any department of industry by arguing, but by working and observing; and, when you have got hold of one truth for certain, 10 others will grow out of it. The assertion of truth is to be always gentle.—Ruskin.

Filet Squares for 'Modern Heirloom'

Pattern 6373

The palm, since ancient times, has inspired artists. It is no wonder, then, that this lovely square in such simple crochet uses it as a motif. A stunning cloth or spread of mercerized string—smaller articles in finer cotton—will give you handiwork you'll treasure. Pattern 6373 contains instructions and chart for making the square; illustrations of it and of stitches; materials needed.

To obtain this pattern send 15 cents in coins to The Sewing Circle, Household Arts Dept., 259 W. 14th St., New York.

Strange Facts

Air to Float Wood
Easter Lily Is Out
Real Wash Out

Like water, the pressure of air increases with depth. For instance, if a mine shaft were 35 miles deep, the air at the bottom would be about 1,000 times as dense as that at the earth's surface, or heavy enough to float several kinds of wood and even water.

In northern Ireland it is a serious offense, punishable by a fine, to wear or carry an Easter lily on Easter Sunday, as this flower is a symbolic reminder of the unsuccessful Easter rebellion in Dublin in 1916.

In several towns along the Italian Riviera, a balcony is considered to be such an essential decorative feature of a house that those without one usually have a painted substitute, some being made more realistic by the inclusion of the family wash, which is generally hung to dry on such railings.—Collier's.

By H. A. Grantham

IOWA
SPEED LAWS

Analysis of records compiled by the statistical division of the accident record department reveals that excessive speed is the cause of the major portion of highway accidents. It is widely supposed that Iowa has no speed limit upon the open highway. No definite limit is specified in the law yet a highway patrolman views the Iowa statute as even more strict than a definite figure. Driving on Iowa highways one must drive with "due regard for the traffic, surface and width of the highway and of any other condition then existing; and no person shall drive any vehicle upon a highway at a speed greater than will permit him to bring it to a stop within the assured clear distance ahead. . " In other words, the Iowa statute is is not an attempt to blanket every vehicle and driver into a single class but is designed to apply to each individual as indicated by the driver himself, the vehicle, the highway and all other conditions and circumstances surrounding movement of the automobile. Iowa's highway code was in every sense of the word written for you personally.

IOWA COMES OF AGE

The reason so many Iowans drive to adjoining states each year for vacation trips is because they haven't seen the movie "Iowa Comes Of Age." The movie was taken by a professional for the Conservation Commission and should be shown in every school and before every civic club in the state. It is the story of Iowa's many natural resources, its lakes and recreational facilities and reveals in amazing beauty a summer playground far too little known to Hawkeye vacationers. The Conservation Commission has several copies of the film both in theater and home movie size which are loaned without cost upon request.

JOB
RACKET

An old racket in a slightly new form appeared in the state capitol this week and may result in a sweeping investigation of numerous reports of a similar nature. A minor Democratic job holder who was replaced by a Republican, was referred to a former state officer, also a Democrat, for advise as to how he might regain the job. After several days the jobless one received a letter stating that "certain contacts had been made and it appears you will retain your job." No specific persons or dates were mentioned. No Republican official who might conceivably have anything to do with the job had been approached. The letter ended with the request that "you will please forward $50 to me." The letter eventually reached Republican state headquarters. It was signed with the name of a former Democratic assistant attorney general.

EARNED . . . . ."

Nowhere in all state government does the struggle to save money and eliminate every possible item of costs go on more relentlessly than in that division of the Social Welfare Board that adminsters Old Age Assistance. Somebody "guessed" that 12,000 or 13,000 Iowans would apply for old age assistance and funds and machinery were set up to care for that careless approximation. But month in and month out the number of approvals mounts until it has passed the 53,000 mark. Practically nothing can be done to alter federal grants and regulations and the only place savings can be effected are in state administration. On the old theory that a penny saved is a penny earned the board has overlooked not even the slighest chance to cut overhead costs.

LOOKS SMALL,
BUT——

How important every item of expense can become is vividly illustrated by this example: an increase of $1 per old age assistance check would cost the state upwards of $636,000 annually. The grotesque $1 check of the old days has passed out of the picture. This week the first recommendation for the full $30 per month payment was approved. This is, of course, an extreme case where regular medical attention is required. Other approvals include monthly checks of around $28 and $29 and the tendency is upward throughout the department. Due to extreme economy the amount of these monthly checks have crept upward a few pennies at a time and this month reached 20.

TAG
ENDS . . . . .

Governor Wilson will leave the state for the first time since he was inaugurated when he attends a midwest conference of governors in St. Paul September 22 . . . . . and for the same period Lieutenant Governor Hickenlooper acts as governor . . . . . 89,620 Iowans will pay an individual income tax for 1939 . . . . . the largest classifeid group of income tax payers are railroad employees, 8,500 of which paid an average of $14.01 . . . . . road contractors paid the highest classified average of $205 with laborers in manufacturing and mechanics paying the lowest average of $2.71 . . . . . current federal debt total $40,904,784,931.87 . . . reached $20.

Believes In Horses

Lloyd Betts, Coon Rapids farmer, believes in horses and thinks most farmers would be better off without tractors. When Betts bought his present farm in 1929 he had four mares worth about $425 and from them he has sold $1,725 worth of horses and has some $500 worth of horses and colts on hand. Horses are paying his mortgage, he says. Betts recently sold four young Belgians to a New York buyer for $800.

What better thing is there to own than a good Iowa farm bought at a reasonable price? You take care of it and it will take care of you. Anyway, there is a good demand for Iowa land at this time, and it is thought by many that the current war talk will quicken it.

Isn't Mad

It is said that hydrophobia victims must be lashed to their beds, that they foam at the mouth, bite and tear at the bedclothes while they die a violent and far-from-pretty death. Frank Peterson, of Harcourt, bitten by the family cat, recalled that the animal had recently fought with a skunk. Since many skunks have gone mad this summer, Mr. Peterson talked the matter over with the family doctor and decided to play safe by taking the anti-rabies treatment. Examination of the cat at Iowa City revealed the presence of rabies, so Mr. Peterson's hunch proved to be a good one. After 14 days of treatment, he feels no desire to bite his friends or tear the bedclothes and is congratulating himself on escaping a horrible fate.

Although women can fix anything with a hairpin, Mrs. Bert Adams of Belle Plaine did not fare so well with her attempts to get rid of wasps in her garage. A dewasping operation was attempted with some burning rags which were stuffed in the sidewall where the wasps made their home Almost any husband can probably predict what happened next. Yes, she called the fire department, which managed to save the building.

Held His Own.

Skunk, pursued by dogs, took refuge in a coat-closet in the Social Plains schoolhouse near Indianola. Like the Poles of Westplatte, he defended his position against all comers, caused an early adjournment of the school session When the dogs of war had been called off, the skunk departed unmolested and with all the honors.

At Waupeton, Mrs. Peter Pape is postmistress. At Waupeton, Mr. Peter Pape is the rural mail carrier. Said to be the only husband-and-wife combination of this kind in Uncle Sam's mail system, the Pape's enjoy their unusual distinction due to the fact that their appointments were effective before the passage of "Section 408, paragraph five" of the postal laws which prevents such employment in any postoffice.

Henry Hittler of Fayette is short a silo. The structure had just been filled with silage when it began to bulge about the center and finally "split its seams" and collasped in all directions.

Costly Good Deed

When two ducks waddled across road the girl driver of the A. J Hathaway car turned out to avoid them. In so doing, she upset and smashed the $1,700 Hathaway trailer, near Bradford. The ducks, undisturbed, waddled serenely on.

Flowing Well

When Ed Buensow of near Sumner had a well drilled recently, he got more water than he anticipated. The well is flowing with sufficient pressure to send a stream of water 22 feet high from an inch and a half iron pipe, reduced down from a five inch casing. The water has been piped into the house and farm buildings and a local plumber claims the pressure is as great as in the city mains of Sumner. And are the mains embarassed.

30th Birthday

A Ford car owned by Jack Elliot of Ames recently passed its 30th birthday. The car came out in 1909, with engine number 5153, and is still serviceable, being used in about every parade in Ames. The venerable vehicle differs in many respects from today's automobiles. Among other things, the motor must be removed in order to tighten the connecting rods. The wheels are fastened on by pins which are held on by the hub caps.

Lee Worden, of Iowa Falls, is inclined to regret the fact that Mr. Don Adams, of St. Paul, is so fond of Mrs. Don Adams, of St. Paul. When Adams filed suit against Wordin in Hardin county courts recently, as the result of claims growing out of an automobile accident, his petition inclued $1,500 for being deprived of the society of his wife. Convinced Him

When a neighbor dropped in last week to complain about a wandering bull owned by Tom Kissock of Grinnell, Mr. Kissock explained that he had confined the animal with a high fence and that it would not trouble the neighborhood any further. When the two men walked down to inspect the fence, the bull embarrassed Mr. Kissock by jumping over it and starting out on further travels. Convinced, Mr. Kissock has sold the high-jumping bovine.

The Iowa highway patrol is fast gaining a nation-wide reputation for efficency If its work in Wright county is a fair basis for making such a statement, one can easily believe it is true. ### NEW STYLE WARFARE

For years the Nazis have been circulating propaganda around the world, and their aims in doing so have not always been clear.

The British, in this new war have adopted some of the Nazis' methods. British air raids over Germany took the form of scattering propaganda leaflets over the country, endeavoring to tell the German people the truth about their ruthless leaders in the hope of turning their loyalty away from the Nazis cause.

In this method succeeds in its purpose surely this type of warfare can be preferred to bloody battles, ruined cities, shattered homes.—Belmond Independent.

BOXELDER BUG TROUBLES

The boxelder bug is a pest. It does no great harm to boxelder trees or to people, but it is an annoying thing to have around. It shows up in the greatest numbers in the fall, from early September on into November. At this time of year there are a number of inquiries as to what the bug is and what people can do to get rid of them.

There is some evidence that in Iowa it may produce two generations in a year. The adult bugs spend the winter wherever they can find shelter —in barns, outbuildings, or houses. In the spring they leave their shelters and seek the boxelder trees or the maple and ash. They lay their eggs on the bark and leaves of the trees. The eggs hatch about the time the young leaves appear in the spring, then, in feeding, the young bugs puncture the plant tissue with their beaks. They do little or no harm to trees, do not sting or bite and do no injury in the home, but they are wholly lacking in consideration for the comfort of members of the human family. Consequently they become a nuisance when their numbers become considerable.

Sprays containing pyrethrum have proved fairly effective. The nuisance can also be lessened by destroying the adults as they appear in numbers on the trunks of trees or basement steps, with kerosene. Boiling water poured on the hordes will also greatly reduce their numbers.

An Amateur Decorator Uses a Curved Needle

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

"DEAR MRS. SPEARS: Some time ago in an article you suggested using a curved needle, such as upholsterers use, for sewing heavy cord trimming in place. I found that these needles are also used in making candle wicking bedspreads and are on sale in most notion and fancy work departments. Mine has been very useful to me; especially when reupholstering an old chair. This is just one of the many useful hints I have found in your articles and books. Thank you so much for all of them.—G. H."

Here is the picture of the curved needle used to sew bright contrasting cord to an upholstered couch. It is a useful tool when you are sewing to fabric that is stretched tightly. Everyone who finds pleasure in making a home attractive needs to know these little tricks that give work a professional touch.

Original ideas with complete directions for slipcovers; draperies and other furnishings are in the new Sewing Book No. 3. Every homemaker should have a copy; as well as everyone who likes to make gifts, and items for bazaars. The price is only 10 cents postpaid. Send com with name and address to Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

Pull the Trigger on Constipation, and Pepsin-ize Acid Stomach Too

When constipation brings on acid indigestion, bloating, dizzy spells, gas, coated tongue, sour taste, and bad breath, your stomach is probably loaded up with certain undigested food and your bowels don't move. So you need both Pepsin to help break up fast that rich undigested food in your stomach, and Laxative Senna to pull the trigger on those lazy bowels. So be sure your laxative also contains Pepsin. Take Dr. Caldwell's Laxative, because its Syrup Pepsin helps you gain that wonderful stomach-relief, while the Laxative Senna moves your bowels. Tests prove the power of Pepsin to dissolve those lumps of undigested protein food which may linger in your stomach, to cause belching, gastric acidity and nausea. This is how pepsinizing your stomach helps relieve it of such distress. At the same time this medicine wakes up lazy nerves and muscles in your bowels to relieve your constipation. So see how much better you feel by taking the laxative that also puts Pepsin to work on that stomach discomfort, too. Even finicky children love to taste this pleasant family laxative. Buy Dr. Caldwell's Laxative—Senna with Syrup Pepsin at your druggist today!

Britain Transports Its Troops by Plane

Mobilization of the English army was materially hastened by use of planes in the rush to get troops to the continent. Above photograph ows members of the Second Battalion of the Royal Ulster Rifles board- a plane for the front. The Soviet Union, too, has laid great stress on troop carrying planes and its mass parachute leaps from the air. Many army cials, however, declare the mass parachute leaps impractical for war.

By Virginia Vale

CHARLES LAUGHTON proved himself a hero recently, and the cameras weren't grinding either. "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" company was on location, and hundreds of extras were milling about, staging festival scenes in Fifteenth century Paris. Part of the atmosphere was a trained bear in a cage, who was placidly eating ice cream.

Somebody bumped into the cage, as the mob pushed and shoved about, and it was overturned. The bear, ice cream dripping from his jaws, got out—and the panic would have been on, with people convinced that the bear was frothing at the mouth, if Laughton hadn't stepped in.

Over the public address system he reassured the crowd, telling them that it was ice cream on the bear's mouth, and that, if they would stand still, the trainer would tie the bear up.

All in the day's work for Laughton—but can't you see the newspaper headlines if he hadn't kept his head?

It's in John Garfield's contract that he may return to the stage each season. And it was in his own mind a while ago that he wouldn't make any more prison pictures. Consequently people were surprised when, after finishing "Four Daughters," he didn't rush back to Broadway, and he surprised them again, more recently, when he agreed to do "20,000 Years in Sing Sing" (which will be screened as "The City of Lost Men").

In the first case he was persuaded to stay on in Hollywood in order to get his screen career off to a good start. In the second, a nice, fat bonus check was used as persuasion.

In "Golden Boy" you'll meet a new movie hero, William Holden—six feet tall, possessed of brown hair, blue eyes, a pleasant personality, and so much ability as an actor that he was picked from 4,500 candidates for the leading role in the picture. And some of those other candidates were experienced actors.

Holden wasn't. He'd gone to college, and been a member of Paramount's stock company. It was when he took part in a college play in Pasadena that a talent scout spotted him, and he was signed to a seven-year contract. After that he didn't do anything but report at the studio and exercise in the gymnasium, until he made a screen test with a girl who was being considered for a role in "Golden Boy." Director Mamoulian saw the test, spotted Holden, Columbia bought a half-interest in him—and you'll see him in "Golden Boy."

Family notes: Paul Muni's wife took a screen test not long ago. Charles Laughton's wife (known to stage and screen fans as Elsa Lanchester) will appear on the Bing Crosby program September 21. On Thursday nights, when he's part of that same program, Bob Burns always telephones his daughter, Barbara Ann, to say good-night.

TATTOO MARKINGS IDENTIFY CATTLE

Breeding and Registration Records Protected.

By DR. GEORGE E. TAYLOR

It is important that dairy animals be properly marked for identification purposes, otherwise there is certain to be confusion on breeding as well as registration records. Ear tattoos properly put in are most satisfactory identification marks, for they remain legible during the entire lifetime of the animal. These facts have been determined in studies at the New Jersey college of agriculture.

The American Jersey cattle club has required tattoo numbers for registration for a number of years, and beginning January 1, 1940, all unregistered Brown Swiss animals must be tattooed before the application or registration will be accepted. The objection to ear tags and number neck straps is that they are sometimes lost.

In order to insure satisfactory results the following simple rules should be considered:

The inside of the ear should be thoroughly cleaned of all dirt, wax and oil so that the tattoo ink will penetrate the punch marks. Soap and water may be used, provided the ear is wiped dry with a clean cloth. A clean cloth soaked in gasoline or alcohol is very effective.

In getting ready to tattoo, be sure the letters and numbers are placed in the marker right side up and in the correct order. First try the marker on a piece of cardboard to be sure.

Place the mark in the area inside of the ear that is free from hair. Avoid crossing any large veins as a safeguard against excessive hemorrhage that might cause the ink to wash out, resulting in failure.

Be sure that the needle points are sharp and fine so that they will penetrate the ear properly. By placing one or two thicknesses of cardboard between the punch and the outside of the ear you can insure proper penetration. Apply a liberal application of ink inside of the ear and work the ink into the small holes with the forefinger after the punch is made.

There are a number of satisfactory tattoo inks, pastes and oils on the market. The following formula may also be mixed by any druggist, using 20 grams of lamp black (dry); 50 cc grain alcohol; 50 cc glycerin and 50 cc of water.

A system of both letters and numbers are often used that will indicate the owner of the animal and also the date of birth as well as the sire.

First U. S. President Used Diversification

There was a gentleman farmer of certain renown living on the banks of the Potomac who worried because his poorer neighbors always had too much tobacco on hand and not enough good food.

Their Negro hands were often not in the best of health. Records indicate that ofttimes taxes were paid partly in money and partly in tobacco, for lack of other medium.

The gentleman farmer, who tended to his own place carefully, and had definite success growing a variety of crops and only a lesser portion of tobacco, called a meeting of his better-fixed neighbor farmers. They all recognized the problem of one-crop farms and were glad of a leader to change the practice of farmers in that neighborhood.

The gentleman farmer was George Washington and he started Fairfax county, just outside of Washington, on a crop-variation system that has existed to this day. In all Fairfax there is not a commercial patch of tobacco.

Negroes have a few plants in the back yard to twist into "terbacker" for their own use.

Potato Storage Pits

Properly constructed pits provide cheap but satisfactory storage for potatoes throughout the storage season. The spuds should be placed in the pit as soon as harvested but should be given only a light covering at first, says A. E. Hutchins, vegetable specialist. Care must be taken to keep them dry and well ventilated, he cautions, and when the ground freezes the covering should be increased. Pits should be made in well-drained soils. A good size is four feet deep, six feet wide, and as long as needed. Pits of the above width and depth will hold about 100 bushels for each five feet of length.

Plucking Live Geese

The plucking of live geese to save the feathers is quite common practice in many country districts. It consists of the removing of the small feathers just before moulting time. One can tell by plucking at one of the geese whether the feathers are ready to come out. Never pluck feathers from a goose when they are moist on the end. Only the small feathers should be taken off the bird and the down should never be removed.

New Look Is Given to Autumn Styles by Bustle Silhouette

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WHAT'S in a name? Well, plenty, judging from the consternation and furore the mention of "bustle" in connection with the new fashions for fall and winter has caused. Immediately, at the mere suggestion of bustles being revived in modern styling, came visions of the amusing monstrosities we of this day have come to associate with the "has been" fashions of the long ago.

As a matter of fact the bustle motif that has succeeded in giving to contemporary fashions such a decidedly new look is far and away from the antiquated bustle of our ancestresses. A more accurate way of expressing the bustle theme as is today, is to speak of it as back-fullness, to achieve which designers are most ingeniously introducing clever drapes, bows, and peplum effects done in a conservative manner.

The emphasis given to back-fullness in current styling has opened avenues of thought to designers, in consequence of which the dresses and coats and jackets shown in the season's collections have taken on an entirely different and refreshing note of interest. With the new back-fullness the simple black dress that is heralded as a perfect autumn "first" becomes a model of high-style distinction.

The various treatments of the back-fullness theme as demonstrated in the illustration conveys the message that there are back-fullnesses and back-fullnesses being interpreted throughout the mode, with not necessarily any two being alike.

See the afternoon dress of voguish velveteen shown to the left in the picture. It shows clever manipulation via the peplum method. The spectator sports dress centered in the group, of lightweight woolen, modifies its peplum fullness to a conservative degree.

The sheer black afternoon dress to the right has a wide sash technique which arrives at back-fullness in most pleasing fashion. The hat, designed to complement the bustle silhouette of the dress, has its own bustle, which goes to show that milliners are also subscribing to the bustle theme.

In the inset a pretty evening formal again illustrates the prevailing idea of bustle effects. The bustle is detachable, to be worn at will. Stiff, crisp silk taffeta yields beautifully.

This matter of back-fullness is not confined to dress design. The new coats have had to be tuned to the bustle-like fullness of the gowns over which they must be worn. In consequence many of the smartest coats of the season are styled with that thought in mind. Some take on fullness at the waistline; others are made with lines that flare from neckline to hem at the back. Unfurred dressmaker coats of this type, made of fine broadcloth or velvety surfaced woolens, rank at the height of fashion. With them a separate fur piece is inevitable which is met in the revival of long fur boas and stoles that recall quaint fashions such as our revered grandmothers wore.

Reaction to the new bustle vogue is seen in the revival of stiff, handsome silks as they so successfully yield to bouffant drapes and bows.

Amber in Fashion

Featured colors this season include a series that ranges from lightest beige and cinnamon tones to vibrant copper tones, with special emphasis on browns from light to dark. Paris plays up these colors both in fabrics and in furs, and then to carry out the color scheme in perfect harmony adds amber jewelry. The revival of amber will prove welcome news to women who dress with distinction. Note the attractive bracelet, necklace and clip of amber as worn by the fashion-wise young woman pictured.

For Slim Lines

To give slim lines to your dressy fur coat, long-haired and bulky furs are being combined with bands of all types of material

Satin-Top Jacket Dress for Autumn

For a neat practical dress of accredited style, a dress that will serve admirably for immediate wear, and that will start the season off in the right direction, choose one of the very smart daytime jacket dresses, preferably of black, either silk crepe or lightweight wool. These are shown with either the separate black satin blouse or the satin is worked into the dress itself in a blouse top. With this comes a cunning bolero of the identical material that fashions the dress. Sometimes there is an applique of the satin on the bolero. The advantage of the separate satin blouse and skirt is that it gives opportunity for interchangeable blouses.

The combining of satin with other materials is significant fashion news. Topcoats as well as dresses are trimmed with satin this year.

Sweater Collars In Great Variety

Bengaline and faille are fall favorites for neckwear. There is a little satin and there are taffeta ruffled collars and full three-quarter Bishop sleeves with wrist frills that are to put on over a sleeve or with short sleeves to give a new juvenile look to a plain dress.

There are deep cuffs with double rows of box-plaited ruffling, deep Dutch collars with the same finish. Bibs are still shown and sweater collars are imperative both for the school girl and the older woman. This fashion gives a clean, fresh, laundered look to our woolly outer knits that make them seem feminine and less casual.

THE INFANCY OF JESUS

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 2:13-23.

GOLDEN TEXT—And they shall call his name Emmanuel, which being interpreted is, God with us.—Matthew 1 23.

Looking forward to an experience in life which promises to be both interesting and profitable always brings a glow of expectation. Something of that spirit should pervade the Bible schools of our land as they begin a six-months study in the Gospel of Matthew.

Consideration of our Lord's life properly starts with the story of His birth, but we reserve that for our Christmas lesson. Today we stress the manner in which the Child Jesus was received into the world. Men then as now, were either for Him or against Him. God had only one attitude, that of loving protection and preparation of His Son for His ministry.

I. Christ in the World of Men.

The world of today is far different from that of the first century, but the difference is all on the outside. Almost breath taking have been the developments of modern civilization, but these have not changed the heart of man. He still fears and hates and fights and sins. His attitude toward Christ is unchanged. There are still only two classes of people in the world—those who have received Christ and are saved, and those who have rejected Him and are lost.

1. Against Christ.

How do men show their rejection of God's Son? Just as they did at His birth, by: a. Fear. Herod was afraid lest the coming of this one should result in the loss of his ill-gotten gains. His anger and fear made all Jerusalem afraid. b. Indifference. When the Wise Men asked where Christ was to be born, the priests and scribes knew exactly where to find the facts in the Holy Scriptures, but having done so, they relapsed into utter indifference. They had no interest in the fulfillment of the prophecy. c. Hatred. Herod poured out the violence of his heart by killing the first-born. He was the first of many who have raged against the Christ in futile anger. d. Sorrow. The tears of the mothers of Jerusalem but foreshadowed the weeping and wailing which characterizes Christ-rejection both in time and eternity.

2. For Christ.

Thanks be to God, there were those in that day who were for Christ and, like those who follow Him today, they showed: a. Spirituality. Men have marveled that the Magi knew of the birth of Christ. They must have studied the prophecies of the Word and been responsive to the teaching and moving of the Holy Spirit. Can we say as much for ourselves? b. Interest. Not content to know and to marvel, they shamed the priests of Israel by their persistent interest in this great thing which had come to pass. c. Love. They brought themselves in worship and they brought rich gifts from their treasures. You can give without loving, but you cannot love without giving. d. Action. They came. They persisted until they found the Christ. Then they listened to God and protected His Son by not returning to Herod.

II. Christ in God's World.

Men had brought sin and ruin into the world. They had rejected His Son, but God still ruled and we see Him protecting, preparing, and fulfilling prophecy through His Son.

1. Protecting. Men may hate and seek to destroy God's Son. Satan may inspire them with ingenuity and cunning, but see how the Eternal One speaks to Joseph in dreams, how He prepares a place of refuge in Egypt and ultimately in Nazareth, where the boy Jesus may increase in wisdom and stature and favor with God and man.

2. Preparing. God knows of the days of public ministry which are ahead and above all, of that day when on Golgotha's hill Christ was, in His own body, to prepare salvation for you and for me. God is not taken by surprise. He moves forward to the completion of His plan with the stately tread of eternity.

3. Fulfilling. God also sees to it that prophecy is fulfilled. We read in verses 15 and 23, "that it might be fulfilled" and in verse 17, "then was fulfilled." God's Word is always sure, for He makes it so. His infinite and eternal faithfulness guarantees the fulfillment of every prophecy, yes, and of every promise of His Holy Word.

Progress of Mankind

In my youth, looking at this man and that, I marvelled that humanity had made so little progress. Now, looking at man in the multitude, I marvel that they have advanced so far.—George Gissing.

No Love Without Service

It is as impossible for love to thrive without service as for a plant to grow without soil. Love feeds on what we give, not on what we get.

MAYBE FATHER WILL LIKE THESE?
(Recipes Below.)

Household News By Eleanor Howe

Foods Men Like to Eat

What are the foods that Father likes best—the fine, old-fashioned dishes—tasty, full of flavor, and perfectly cooked! He likes a meal to be composed of only a few foods; he wants to know what he is eating, and he does not want foods swathed in a blanket of whipped cream. In a word, fancy cooking is apt to be wasted on Father but he'll appreciate good cooking to the limit.

Left to his own devices, many a man would choose a diet of meat, potatoes, and pie. They're not particularly fond of vegetables—these men of ours—and when it comes to salads, it's a sheer waste of energy to serve them anything fancy. So a little judicious planning is necessary on our part in order to give Father his favorite foods and provide a wholesome, well-balanced meal in the bargain.

Each of these recipes, tested in my own kitchen, I've found to be prime favorites with men. Well prepared and attractively served, they'll go a long way toward establishing your reputation as a good cook.

Vegetable Soup.
(Serves 6)

2 pounds soup bone
2 tablespoons fat
2 quarts cold water
1 tablespoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons barley
1 cup canned tomatoes
1 onion
½ cup carrots (cut in cubes)
½ cup celery (cut in small pieces)
½ cup potatoes (cut in cubes)
½ cup peas

Remove a portion of meat from cracked soup bone and cut into pieces. Brown in hot fat. Place browned meat, soup bone, seasonings, and barley in kettle and add cold water. Cover and cook until boiling point is reached. Then simmer about 2½ hours or until meat is tender. Cool and skim off excess fat. Add vegetables and continue cooking until vegetables are tender.

Dot with butter and sprinkle with cinnamon, nutmeg, sugar and lemon juice. Cover with the top crust, crimp the edges together and score the top to allow the steam to escape. Bake in a hot oven (425 degrees) for about 40 minutes.

Pigs-in-Taters.
(Serves 6)

6 large baking potatoes
6 tablespoons margarine
4 to 5 teaspoons milk
1½ teaspoons salt
Paprika
½ pound small sausages (cooked)

Wash and dry potatoes. Place on rack in hot oven (500 degrees), and bake for about 45 minutes, or until the potatoes are done. Cut a slice from one side of each and scoop out the inside. Mash thoroughly, add margarine, salt and paprika. Refill the potato shells. Make a depression in the center of each, and arrange in it 2 or 3 sausages. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for about 10 minutes, or until brown.

Harvest Moon Doughnuts.

The Bill of Rights, the Chief Bulwark Of Americans' Liberties, Was Adopted By Congress 150 Years Ago This Month

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

IN CERTAIN lands across the sea:

Men and women may be jailed, tortured, exiled or slain because of their form of worship . . .

Families may be shorn of their homes, their livelihood, their liberty, and sometimes their lives, because of political beliefs . . .

Citizens may be seized and executed without knowledge of the charges against them, or opportunity to defend themselves . . .

In such lands no newspaper is free to print the facts if government disapproves, no home is immune from midnight invasion by soldiers or police, no voice permitted to criticize the party or the politician in power.

But all that is across the seas. It doesn't occur here. And this, largely, is due to something which happened just a century and a half ago this fall.

It was the adoption by congress and the submission to the states of the first ten amendments to our federal Constitution — now known collectively as the American Bill of Rights

And this year, on September 25, we celebrate throughout America the 150th anniversary of that notable action by congress which established the rights, the liberties and the dignity of the average man, and forbade the national legislature ever to enact any laws which violate them.

For the Bill of Rights was not part of the original Constitution framed by the founders who met in Independence hall, Philadelphia, back in the summer of 1787. It was an addition, demanded by the states and the people as part of the essential fabric of our basic law. It was urged by Thomas Jefferson, as a set of "fetters against doing evil which no honest government should decline"; it was offered in congress by James Madison, as an "effective provision against encroachment on particular rights"; it was approved swiftly by Congress, and, later, by most of the states then in the Union, as a safeguard against any usurpation of authority by the new federal government.

Its inclusion in the Constitution was a strong contributing factor to the adoption of the most famous charter of free government on earth today.

Model to Other Nations.

Like the Constitution, the Bill of Rights has served as a model to nation after nation escaping from the prison-house of despotism to the free air of liberty.

Like the Constitution, it preserves for posterity a true and graphic picture of the strength, the character and the innate personal dignity of the type of man and citizen that created our nation.

The Constitution portrayed him as a man determined to hold the reins of government firmly in his own work-hardened and capable hands.

The Bill of Rights portrayed him as a man who further insisted upon:

Freedom of religion, freedom of lawful speech, freedom of the press, freedom of peaceable assembly . .

The right to be secure against unreasonable search and seizure, to be immune from despotic governmental inquisition, to trial by jury in all civil as well as criminal cases .

The firm guarantee that he should never be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law, and that he should be protected in all these and other rights, even against government itself.

Time and history have proved the strength of this shield of protection forged by the founders to guard them and their descendants from the sword of tyranny. Again and again, that shield has been raised by citizens, whether great or humble, against attempts to violate their rights. Acting on the authority of the Bill of Rights, the courts have frustrated efforts to gag the press; to try prisoners twice for the same offense, or without indictment by a grand jury, or without being confronted with witnesses; to confiscate private papers or property without due process of law, and to ignore other safeguards.

Today it becomes increasingly evident that the early patriots who established our freedom looked into the future, as well as at the past, when they insisted upon the guarantees of personal rights and immunities which constitute the first ten amendments.

Accustomed as we are today to this shield of protection, it is difficult to believe that efforts to include it in our fundamental law should ever have been opposed. Yet for a while such opposition existed, based principally on the idea that the body of the Constitution as originally drafted provided or implied the necessary safeguards. But so determined were the majority of the states and the people that essential human rights should be protected specifically and in detail that the amendments were among the earliest measures brought before the First United States congress.

Both natural and inevitable was this wide-spread demand. In the veins of the American people still ran the blood of men who had forced on Old world despotism the Magna Charta, the English Bill of Rights, the Habeas Corpus act, and other guarantees of personal liberty. Their own colonial history had contributed new chapters to the age-old struggle for freedom. The early New York Charter of Liberties, the Stamp Act congress, the First Continental congress, the Virginia Bill of Rights and the famous Declaration of Independence—all had voiced stirring protests against curtailment of individual liberties.

In every community were men who had fought for those rights against the trained troops of Britain; families that mourned the death of fathers, brothers and sons fallen on the ramparts of Freedom. A strong abhorrence of tyranny in any form, a deep passion for personal independence, burned fiercely in the national breast.

All this was apparent long before the first Federal congress met in 1789 and adopted the Bill of Rights. Many of its safeguards had been written into the early state constitutions. America's greatest orators and legislative leaders urged its inclusion in the national charter by voice and pen. James Madison pledged himself to fight for its passage. State convention after state convention, meeting to consider adoption of the new Federal Constitution, proposed its provisions as an accompaniment to ratification.

States Submit Amendments.

A number of the larger states had indeed written out the specific amendments they wished to see enacted. From New York came 32; from Maryland, 28; from Virginia, 20; from Pennsylvania, 14; from New Hampshire, 12; from South Carolina, 4. These were apart from separate and complete Bills of Rights proposed by Virginia and New York. The actual total of proposals was, of course, smaller than such a compilation suggests, since many had been duplicated in proposals from the different states.

As could be expected, the most eloquent pleas for a Bill of Rights came from Patrick Henry, whose stirring cry, "Give me Liberty, or give me Death," had inspired the colonists in the dark days before the Revolution Only, in fact, after Madison promised to introduce the necessary amendments in the federal legislature could this New world Demosthenes be persuaded to consider ratification of the Constitution.

Patrick Henry's fiery demands were voiced at the Virginia convention assembled to discuss the national charter. Identifying himself as a sentinel of freedom, he warned the people

"You ought to be extremely cautious, watchful, jealous of your liberty; for, instead of securing your rights, you may lose them forever."

"Show me," he cried later in the debate, "that age and country where the rights and liberties of the people were placed on the sole chance of their rulers being good men, without a consequent loss of liberty. I say that the loss of that dearest privilege has ever followed with absolute certainty, every such mad attempt."

But Madison's calm promise had its effect. Finally Patrick Henry agreed:

"If you will, in the language of freemen, stipulate that there are rights which no man under heaven can take from you, you shall have me going along with you, and not otherwise."

Proposed by Madison.

Soon Madison seized the opportunity to make good his pledge. On June 8, 1789, at the first session of the First congress of the United States, he rose in the house of representatives and proposed 21 Constitutional amendments containing "those safeguards which the people have been long accustomed to have interposed between them and the magistrate who exercises the sovereign power."

Again there was some measure of resistance. Certain members opposed all amendments until the Constitution had been longer established and the federal government more fully organized; others felt that even stronger safeguards were essential. But these objections were overcome, and Madison's proposals referred to a committee composed of one member from each state. Here they were reduced to 17 amendments and agreed to by the house. Then they went to the senate which compressed them into 12 separate amendments.

And on that memorable twenty-fifth of September, 1789, the Bill of Rights was passed by congress and submitted to the states and the people, to whose courage, spirit and aspirations it gave such eloquent expression

Within a little more than two years it was ratified in its present form by the required number of states. Again in the process it was shortened—from 12 amendments to 10. Two articles, relating to the compensation and apportionment of congress, failed of approval, but were later enacted in statutory law.

To assure ratification, the assent of 11 states was needed, since Vermont had recently joined the Union. Swiftly this was given. New Jersey, Maryland and North Carolina all approved before the end of 1789. South Carolina, New Hampshire, Delaware, Pennsylvania, New York and Rhode Island ratified in 1790. In 1791, Vermont and Virginia added their assent, and on December 15 of that year the Bill of Rights went formally into effect as a part of our federal Constitution.

Since then every state in the Union has approved this shield of protection. It is interesting to note that within the past year three of the original Thirteen States — Massachusetts, Georgia and Connecticut — which had failed to ratify, have added their belated approval. The growth of dictatorships abroad and a revivified appreciation of what the Bill of Rights means to America undoubtedly prompted their significantly patriotic action.

Today, as in the past, those 10 amendments carry their message of hope to the oppressed of all lands. Still they stand as the scourge and the negation of tyranny. Still they assure the strength, the human dignity and the happiness inherent in free government. Out of the courage and the determination of the early American people they were born. By those same qualities of the American people today they must be preserved. For they constitute not only our Bill of Rights. They constitute the American Spirit.

On March 4 of this year—150 years after congress assembled in New York city to consider the first 12 amendments to the Constitution—Dr. A. S. W. Rosenbach, noted collector of rare books and manuscripts, placed on display in Philadelphia the original manuscript of the Bill of Rights which he had recently acquired from a source which he declined to make public. This manuscript reads as follows:

"CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES
begun and held at the City of New York, on Wednesday, the fourth of March, one thousand seven hundred and eighty-nine.

"THE Conventions of a number of the states having, at the time of their adopting the Constitution, expressed a desire, in order to prevent misconstruction or abuse of its powers, that further declaratory and restrictive clauses should be added; And as extending the ground of public confidence in the Government will best insure the beneficient ends of its institutions,

"RESOLVED, by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, two thirds of both Houses concurring, that the following Articles be proposed to the Legislatures of the several States, as Amendments to the Constitution of the United States; all or any of which articles when ratified by three-fourths of the said Legislatures, to be valid to all intents and purposes, as part of the said Constitution, viz:"

Of the 12 articles which were listed after this statement, the first two concerned the number of members in the House of Representatives and the manner in which their salaries could be altered.

These two articles were rejected so that "Article the third," became the First Amendment, and so on down the list to "Article the twelfth" which became the Tenth Amendment, these 10 constituting what the world had since known as the Bill of Rights. This Bill of Rights now reads as follows:

AMENDMENT I

BICYCLE RIDER HAS NEAR TRAGEDY. . . .

This writer has on several occasions warned boys and girls to use great care when riding their bicycles. Town officials have also warned bicycle riders to stay off side walks, but the youthful riders have ignored the warnings.

Last week one day a near tragedy at an alley exit when a boy riding a bicycle collided with a truck coming out of the alley. The bicycle was wrecked, but luckily the lad escaped without injury.

The boy riding on the sidewalk and failed to see the truck coming out of the alley. Eye witnesses say the truck driver came out of the alley slowly. In this case there would have been no collission if the boy had been riding out in the street, as he would have had a clear view of the approaching truck.

Let this be a lesson. Parents should insist that their boy and girls STAY OFF OF THE SIDEWALKS, keep their eyes open and take no chances on the streets.

POOR JUDGMENT USED IN GAME LAWS. . . . .

Hunters all over the state have been voicing their disgust regarding the open season on ducks, and also on rabbits and squirrels.

The rabbit and squirrel season opened on August 1st this year. . far too early in the opinion of most hunters. At that time of the year there are to many young squirrels and rabbits, unfit to eat. The date was set by the legislature but no doubt will be changed again to a later fall opening date.

Duck hunters are putting up an awful howl about the lateness of the duck season, October 22. Many ducks will be in the sunny south by that date and Iowa hunters will have a chance at only a few stragglers. This date was set by Federal regulation.

The new dates are designed to give animals and birds more protection. The theory sounds alright but it does not work out. Better have satisfactory hunting dates and then cutdown on the bag limit. Most hunters agree that six squirrels, 10 rabbits, and 10 ducks is too many for any one hunter to bag in a day. But that happens to be the present legal limit.

USE CARE IN HANDLING FIREARMS. . . . .

The sad thing about open hunting dates approaching is the fact that many fatal accidents occur because of careless handling of guns.

If you are one in a hunting party insist on safety. . . for your own protection as well as your companians' safety. Look before you shoot; be sure your line of fire does not include buildings, stock or human beings; don't crawl through a fence with a loaded gun; don't carry a loaded gun in a car carry your gun insuch a manner that snow, dirt, or weeds do not get into the muzzle; be sure the safe is working properly and keep your gun on safe until ready to fire.

Above all, be a good sport! Don't take more game than you can use yourself.

A Fable . . .
And It's Lesson

The story goes that a driver and his camel had camped on the desert for the night. The driver put up his tent, moved in his saddle and supplies and had rolled up in his blanket to sleep.. The camel, as usual, was resting outside the tent.

Then came a wind and a sand storm, and the camel asked the driver if he could just put his head inside the tent to keep the sand out of his eyes. The driver was a good natured fellow and allowed the camel to do this, which was a mistake, for the camel little by little kept pushing himself farther into the tent, and there was not room for both. So the driver beat the camel's head with his staff and ordered him out, but the camel kept edging farther into the tent. He thought of shooting the camel, but then remembered that he could not get home without him, so the driver was finally "nosed out" of his tent and spent the night in the storm while the camel slept in the tent.

This same story is being enacted today. The Government is asking the Business People of the U. S. A. to help keep prices down so that there will be no extremely high prices during the War, and all business men and factory people are willing to help the President, as no one wants a boom of this kind.

But it seems that Franklin D. Roosevelt has already made the sad mistake of allowing the Camel (John L. Lewis) to get his head inside of the New Deal Tent. Now comes the "desert storm" in the form of a nasty war in Europe, and the Camel (John L. Lewis) is determined to get completely inside the New Deal Tent by calling one strike after another; he raises prices, and defeats the President, little by little. The President of course, will sputter and complain but he will hardly shoot the Camel, John L. Lewis, because he will need the Camel to put over the 1940 Election. Thus it seems that the Camel will eventually sleep in the New Deal Tent and high prices will prevail.

Now listen folks: You will not find high prices at The Wellemeyer Furniture Store, because we have just unloaded a Car Load of Furniture and Rugs—all bought before the War at low prices. Hence, buy now and save money before prices take a sharp turn upward.

A substantial down payment will hold your order for March 1st delivery.

Well, so are we! But it seems to us now that the sensible kind of building to put up for SHELLED CORN is either a Garage, a Chicken House, a Hog House, a Tool House— or any other building that will be practical in years to come.

Use it this year for Shelled Corn Storage!

Perhaps next year you will not need it for this purpose and then you have a building that is for what you need.

If you will tell us what kind of building will be the most practical for you in the future, we'll be glad to tell you at once what the cost will be.

It is also practical not to delay, as time is getting short. The corn will soon be ready to harvest!

MILK is one of nature's best and most economical foods. It is vital and efficient health protection, too. To get full benefit from milk, you must order enough—every day. Health authorities agree that the SAFE minimum is a quart per child per day, a pint per adult per day.* Check your daily milk order to be sure that you are ordering enough milk every day. The more milk you use, the better are your family's chances for good health. You will notice a saving in your food budget, too.

et and Germany Still Suspect Each Other Despite Shouting Over Non-Aggression Pact; But Does Hitler Hold the Upper Hand?

By RONALD CAPPER

(Released by Western Newspaper Union)

RIS.—While France and Britain cock one eye down a rifle arrel at Germany, the other eye never veers from the most matic question mark facing war-mad Europe—Soviet Rus- Will the Old world's No. 1 diplomat, Josef Stalin, come to many's aid under the trade and non-aggression treaties those ons signed just before the war? Is Comrade Stalin merely ing Germany for all she is worth? Or has Adolf Hitler out- rted his new friend, forcing Stalin to aid the Nazi cause? he implications of a German-Soviet alliance are tremen- . Indeed, this possibility has worried European observers since Adolf Hitler came to er, for together these mili- juggernauts could be fear- e.

ere is no longer any prob- of ideology standing be- n the nations, although erican Nazis and Commu- would have us believe two theories are at swords' s. Ten years ago this was true, hrough the ensuing years Ger- and Russia have approached ilarity.

Watuns Surprisingly Alike

zism thrives on a principle of l superiority which states that dividual race is entitled to rule orld. Bolshevism operates on pposite principle, that all men equal, and without distinction. neither idea is practical in cation, both the Reich and the t can overlook their theories to more realistic problems. at really counts is Naziism's n-year swing from an attempt ve capitalism to a concept of -controlled capitalism that is ar removed from the Russian m. From this parallel purpose t spring almost anything. t a study of Soviet history dur- ost-World war history will show oreign policy has pursued one consistently and with consid- le success. That aim has been ention of a German, Italian, ch and British alliance opposed ussia. So long as this "ganging is averted, the Soviet will be to complete its big task of in- l development. Here's how ve accomplished it thus far:

Didn't Like Hitler.

1922 the Soviet signed a trade y with Germany, then suscep- to any sort of back-slapping its rough treatment at Ver- es. But as a matter of expedi- Russia drifted away from Ger- y when Hitler came to power. didn't like him.

When Hitler left the League of Nations, Russia played another card by entering the good graces of Geneva—but not, mind you, until Germany was safely out of the road. Thus the capitalistic countries were divided again.

In 1936 came the third card, application of sanctions against Italy in the Ethiopian campaign. Thus the Soviet won a sort of friendship with France and Britain, with whom diplomatic relations had already been established.

New Phase Began in 1938

Last autumn things looked dark for the Kremlin. Climaxing the Sudetenland crisis, the "big four" of Europe met at Munich without consulting Stalin That meant a possible capitalistic unity which might end in the long-feared anti-Communist alliance among France, Britain, Germany and Italy.

Russia sat sullenly for many months, leading some observers to the false conclusion that she intended to remain isolated. But Stalin was still playing his cards wisely. He saw a breach growing once more as Hitler gobbled up Czecho-Slovakia and Memel. Then, when appeasement talk started again, he made overtures in the direction of France and Britain. Finding them faithless, yet still keeping the powers divided, he turned about suddenly and signed the treaty with Germany

Two Schemers Work.

This is the supreme test of Soviet diplomatic wisdom, for Josef Stalin, smart though he may be, is dealing with another smart schemer in Adolf Hitler. There is good reason to believe Germany got the upper hand during the tense pre-war days when Russia hesitated over ratifying the non-aggression pact.

Gloating over her spotlighted position, holding the balance of peace or war, the Soviet might have maintained this enviable status if Hitler had not been equally alert. Der Fuehrer knew the British ambassador to Berlin has always favored a policy of Anglo-German friendship against Russia. Furthermore, he knew Russia was aware of Sir Neville's ambitions. That is why the ambassador was kept busy commuting between Berlin and London with diplomatic notes which might have led to an Anglo-German settlement.

So uneasy did Russia become that the supreme Soviet council met hurriedly and ratified the German non-aggression pact within 20 minutes after Premier Vyacheslaff Molotoff introduced it.

Suspect Each Other.

But this hesitancy, this obvious "squeeze" play, does not speak well for future Soviet-German relations. Only a few days before the ratification, Russian deputies applauded a mock battle in Red square where young Soviet fighters routed an "invading force" clad in German field-gray uniforms The big question now is whether Hitler has outsmarted Stalin to such a degree that the Soviet cannot regain its former position.

Russia has things to fear from Germany. Should Poland fall, the convenient "buffer" territory between the Reich and the Soviet would disappear, bringing Hitler closer to his long coveted Ukraine. Should this issue develop into war between the two nations (much to the democracies' glee) no one can tell whether Russia's mammoth but untried army could stop the highly efficient Prussian military machine.

A possible explanation may be the first surge of lava was rap- chilled by contact with the cold perhaps water-filled gravel. This ed glass thenceforward formed al which prevented any side es- e as the remaining bulk of the ma pushed in.

Spectacular too, is the texture of dike itself. Most dikes that are uded into the shallower parts of earth's crust are very fine ned."

Here's New Way to Cut Taxes In Your Town: Grow a Forest

WASHINGTON.—Raise a forest if you want to lower your taxes. That's the advice of F. A. Silcox, chief of the United States forest service, who suggests that American communities might follow the example of European towns in licking the tax ogre.

The idea is already catching hold. Some 1,500 cities, towns, villages, counties, school districts, churches and townships now own about 3,000,000 acres of forests, and new plots are being reported to the forest service almost every day.

By selling fuel, pulpwood, Christmas trees, maple syrup, nuts and other forest products, communities can take a substantial cut from their annual tax levy. What's more, the forests offer new playgrounds, fish and game reserves and recreation facilities, besides protecting city watersheds and providing employment.

Swedish Forest Runs Street Cars.

The community forest idea started in Europe, where such famous preserves as Germany's Black forest and those at Fontainebleu and Versailles have been producing revenue for years. At Orson, Sweden, the forest provides enough to pay all local taxes and supply free street car and telephone service.

America's oldest forest is at Newington, N. H., which was started in 1710. Since 1832 it has provided fuel for the church, the poor people and the school, plus $5,238 in cash which paid community debts, improved the village buildings and helped build a library and school.

Seattle Forest Shows Profit.

Wisconsin has adopted the program scientifically. Each year the state pays 10 cents an acre to the county owning the forest, until the production stage is reached. Then the state gets its money back as timber is cut.

CHRISTMAS TREES — Here's one product from your community forest that helps cut the local tax burden. There's also maple syrup in some localities, fuel, pulpwood, etc.

Seattle has the largest municipal forest, covering 67,000 acres. The city claims to have sold more than $1,000,000 worth of timber, which is more than the initial cost of land and trees.

Mr. Silcox is sold on the idea:

"It doesn't take much money to start a forest," he said. "Most of them can be developed on cheap land, and there are millions of acres of tax-delinquent land that can be put to work. One of the great values of the project is the opportunity it affords for replacing a public dole by worthwhile work."

★ Screen Cinderella
★ Athlete Gets Lead
★ To Have—Not to Hold

By Virginia Vale

WANT a Cinderella story? It concerns Kathryn Adams, who didn't win a "Gateway to Hollywood" contest. She did get first place in the eliminations for her part of the country (Minnesota), however, and got to Hollywood.

But she lost out there, and was all set to go home. The story goes that Gregory La Cava, the ace producer-director, saw her walking across the RKO-Radio lot, and asked her to take a screen test. She did, so sure that nothing would come of it that she even told him that she didn't like the script provided for her, and he let her write her own.

And—she was given the second lead in "Fifth Avenue Girl," the latest Ginger Rogers release, and may go farther than the girl who won out in that contest in which she was an also-ran.

Major Bowes and his staff looked forward to a let-up in the number of amateurs they'd be auditioning during the summer months, but instead of diminishing the number of applicants increased. They lay it to the New York World's fair—it seemed as if most of the people who went to New York for the fair didn't care so much about seeing it as they did about trying to land on the "Original Amateur Hour."

The arrival of cooler weather hasn't lessened the number of applicants—and auditions continue, at the rate of 600 per week.

It's Clayton Moore who's to have the lead in "South of Pago Pago," after all. He's a newcomer to the screen, but has the athletic background which seems to be the main requirement for the role. Moore hails from Chicago, where he was inter-city swimmer, pole vaulter, basketball player, boxer, and practically everything but a ping pong champion, apparently.

Paul Laval, the orchestra leader, collects batons used by celebrated conductors. He has 71, formerly the property of such famous leaders as Toscanini, Bruno Walter and Mascagni. But they're to have, not to hold—when he's conducting an orchestra he doesn't bother with a baton, just uses his hands.

There seems to be something about being on the radio that makes a man want to drive the oldest car he can get his hands on.

Jerry Mason, who is "Sr. Blodgett" in "The Life and Love of Dr. Susan," has one that first saw the light of day in 1930. He arrived at rehearsal the other day all out of breath—his car had broken down and had to be towed to a garage, the first time that had happened, and he'd driven it 85,000 miles. "I knew it wouldn't last," he remarked sadly.

And James Melton drives around Connecticut, where he lives in summer, in a red, four-cylinder car dated 1910. He wears a cap, goggles and a duster.

Gary Cooper has been enjoying himself at Southampton, Long Island, among the debutantes and the sand dunes, visiting his wife's family, and resting up from the exertions of "The Real Glory"—which, incidentally, has the conquest of the Philippines for its background. David Niven worked in that picture too.

ODDS AND ENDS—Joan Crawford is said to be considering a return to the stage as a night club dancer in a play called "Gods of the Night"—it all depends on whether she can get a vacation from picture-making . . . John Trent, former transport pilot, isn't allowed to fly while he's at work on one of his "Tailspin Tommy" pictures . . . Richard Barthelmess will play John Garfield's brother in "Underground" . . . Barthelmess was one of First National's leading stars—now First National has been merged for years with Warner Brothers, and Barthelmess hasn't been on the lot for five years . . . Barbara Stanwyck may find herself back on the stage this fall, and in a musical show at that.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

Patchwork pot holders hanging in a row.

A GREEN and white kitchen is as fresh and crisp as a lettuce leaf. I stepped into one the other day with white walls, green floor and green organdy curtains. Everything was green and white, and over the stove hung a set of patchwork pot holders like a row of bright green and white tiles. All of us love old quilt patterns. For those who do not have time to make quilts, here is a modern use for your favorite designs.

Perhaps you were put to bed as a child under this eight-pointed star? The sketch gives the dimensions for the patterns for the two triangles used in making it for the pot holder. Piece eight small squares of two triangles; then eight oblong blocks of three triangles. A layer of sheet wadding is used for padding. The backing for the holder is white. The three layers are quilted together by sewing just inside the white triangles of the pieced top.

Have you sent for your copy of the new Sewing Book No. 3? Every homemaker will want a copy for it contains useful ideas for home decorating; as well as original ideas for things to use as gifts, and to sell at bazaars. You will be delighted with this new book. The price is only 10 cents postpaid. Send coin with name and address to Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

The second pair likewise tried to avoid the crash and also jackknifed and turned over.

None of the drivers were injured and were able to drive one of the new cars to Montana where they were taking the new cars. The wrecked cars were towed into town and are at the Klemme Auto Co.

Store Apples At 34-36 Degrees

With an apple crop of good size and quality this year and prospects of a rise in prices as the season advances due to the European war, horticulturists at Iowa State College suggests that apples be stored this fall.

Apples should be placed in clean boxes, baskets or crates which may be stacked in the storage room. The containers should never be so full as to cause bruising A temperature of 34 to 36 degrees F. is best for storing the fruit.

Sound Fruit

Only sound fruit free from skin breaks, apple scab, worm holes and other defects is suitable for storage. However, there was little apple scab this year and the crop in general is free from insect and disease injury, according to the horticulturists.

Apples should be handled carefully, picked while hard ripe into padded baskets or fruit picking sacks and should never be dropped into containers. After picking they should be sorted for qualty.

Scald

Most varieties of apples develop scald in storage unless precautions are taken to prevent its development. This is the disease which kills the apple skin and causes it to turn brown and later permits apple rot to start. Scald is best prevented by packing the fruit with shredded oiled paper between the apples or by wrapping each apple in an oiled paper wrapper Shredded oiled paper and oiled paper wrappers suitable for this purpose may be obtained from the Iowa Fruit Growers Association, State House, Des Moines. One half to one pound of shredded oiled paper per bushel of fruit is sufficient.

Early winter varieties including Grimes Golden, Jonathan, Delicious, Northwestern Greening and McIntosh, will usually keep until the middle of December. Later varieties incuding Winesap, Stayman Winesap, Ben Davis, Willow Twig may be stored satisfactorily until February and March. Usually, fall varieties such as Wealthy, should not be stored longer than the middle of November.

The Bredlow reunion was held at the Garner Tourist Park Sunday, a large crowd attended.

'Battle of Lines' Brings First Test Of German-French Defense Strategy

World Debates Question of Hour: Can Either Wall Be Conquered?

By ROBERT THIERS
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

PARIS.— "Underground battleships" along the entire German-French frontier are getting their first test under fire these days as military experts await the answer to 1939's greatest wartime question: Are the West Wall and the Maginot line really impregnable?

When France's early advance brought her armies flush against the great German wall, formerly called the Siegfried or Limes line, the invaders faced a truly stupendous offensive job. Newer than the Maginot line, Germany's fortifications are nevertheless a hopeless maze of underground fortresses, moats, barbed wire entanglements and tank-infantry traps equal to anything the cunning French ever devised.

The West Wall is not simply a wall; ahead of it for several miles are auxiliary fortifications, and behind it are slanting, knoblike tank barriers interspersed with concealed pits in which tanks may be trapped. The whole system ranges from 25 to 50 miles in depth, swarming with anti-aircraft emplacements to drive off enemy bombers.

Reich Rushes Construction.

No French officials know whether the West Wall has been completed. Last year, during the crisis preceding Munich, Adolf Hitler revealed 500,000 men were working on it, night and day. A few days after the current war began Nazi Labor Leader Robert Ley is said to have wired Field Marshal Hermann Goering, promising to rush the project to completion.

By contrast, France's Maginot line has been completed several years. It was from the French that Germany got the inspiration for the West Wall, which was not started until 1934. The Maginot line was conceived in 1925 while Andre Maginot was minister of war. Originally planned to cover only the frontier area between Belgium and the Rhine, it has since been expanded to protect the entire frontier from the Atlantic to Switzerland.

Both lines are really a series of forts, each with their own electric kitchen, washrooms, water reservoirs, electric generators and storage rooms. Miles of underground narrow-gage railroads carry men and ammunition, the latter stored in giant reservoirs hundreds of feet underground.

Seek to Disprove Theory.

It is an axiom among military men that no army can build a fortress so impregnable that no other army can take it, yet each of these nations has built its first line of defense with the idea of disproving the theory. So well are the forts concealed, and so discouraging are the cunning obstacles placed in an invader's path, that the defenders would nominally be expected to enjoy a wholesale slaughter while their enemies were attempting to find a strategic point of attack.

Once the fortresses are reached (they are invisible from a few yards' distance) the enemy must reckon with a bombproof, shellproof opponent. Each part of the Maginot defense system, and probably of the West Wall as well, is arranged so that every other part can be covered, even to the tops of turrets upon which attacking infantrymen might leap to avoid the rifle and machinegun fire from the embrasures.

It took the French army only 10 days from the declaration of war to pierce advance fortifications leading up to the Siegfried line at Saarbruecken, which probably meant a good deal. Evidently the Maginot line was considered safe from flanking counter-attacks, whereas the West Wall was unfinished and therefore vulnerable. But the West Wall itself is no pushover. Many portions of it are protected first by a deep moat and barbed wire, while gun emplacements are concealed immediately behind.

If the Maginot line is truly safe from conquest, France may make appreciable gains through the German wall without fear that its own frontiers will be violated. But at what loss of life either line may be taken is anybody's guess.

Frenchman Had Honor Of First Loop-the-Loop

Adolphe Pegoud, a Frenchman, was the first aviator to loop the loop, on September 21, 1913. The plane used by Pegoud had an engine of small power and wings of large surfaces with a speed of only 45 miles an hour. Lincoln Beachey shortly afterward made a loop the loop at a speed of 75 miles an hour, carrying a greater weight, using a small-surfaced machine. He accomplished this feat on November 19, 1913, in a Curtis machine at Los Angeles, Calif.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—Mahatma Ghandi has indicated that, in his opinion, a world war against Adolf Hitler would be justifiable and possibly necessary. The British, with their imperative job of keeping their great Indian empire in hand, probably aren't worrying about Gandhi. More important is the attitude and activity of his vigorous and popular understudy, the 44-year-old Pandit Jawahharial Nehru. The latter has been boldly resistant to British rule, spent six years in jail, and has acquired popularity and leadership as Gandhi reaches his seventy-second year.

Understudy of Gandhi Calms Toward British

Meager news reports from India indicate that Nehru has been calming down in his agitation against British imperialism, and that, a few weeks ago, he was vehemently denouncing fascism and the new German aggression. London is reassured, but watchful, as Asia may become a balance of power in the clash of world dominions and Nehru has been an active propagandist of pan-Asiatic doctrine, summoning browns and blacks to resist what he believes to be the aggression of the whites.

Born of a noble caste, Nehru was educated at Harrow and Cambridge, taking honors in the classics. His father, the Pandit Motilal Nehru, was a lawyer and the richest man in Allahabad. He gave away his mansion and moved into a shabby little house when he became a convert to Indian nationalism.

His son, reared in splendor, had no such ideas when he came home from England. He was a strong supporter of the British regime until the Amritsar massacre of 1919. Then he burned his 50 British suits, donned native dress, and became an agitator for the Nationalist cause. However, he was no devotee of loin-cloth asceticism. He was all for fighting and it was as the most belligerent of all the Indian leaders that he came to the presidency of the all-Indian congress in 1935.

Nehru was at times sharply opposed to the non-resisting Gandhi, but apparently their differences have been resolved. He is handsome and engaging, a vigorous assailant of the ancient caste system of India.

IT WAS not until a year ago that Romain Rolland returned to France, after more than 20 years' exile in Switzerland. He had opposed war. Several years before he finished "Jean Christophe," Tolstoi had called him "The Conscience of Europe." He is a pallid old man now, with thinning hair and sad, deep-set eyes, but still "above the battle" and still trying to arouse the conscience of mankind.

'Lamplighter' Sees Hope Only In 'Inner Light'

He dispatched to the New York international congress of the American Musicological society a message of good will. It is quoted here in accord with this department's wartime alertness to such men and messages. He says:

"In the field of art, there is not—there should not be—any rivalry among nations. The only combat worthy of us is that which is waged in every country and at every hour, between culture and ignorance, between light and chaos. Let us save all the light that can be saved. There is none more refulgent than music. It is the sun of the inner universe."

It was this sun that illumined "Jean Christophe," one of the greatest books of all times, published here just before the World war, profoundly moving to multitudes of Americans as an avocation of the creative and aspiring spirit of man. Many times in recent years, Romain Rolland has written that the world had little hope of escaping another and possibly last devastating war. But, described as "an old man, broken and despairing," on his return to France last year, he has continued his plea for peace, decrying hatred, pleading for understanding

His has been a lone voice, never identified with "movements," or political groupings, right or left. He opposed Henri Barbusse and his Clarte group, and the various "united fronts," as he did the leaders of violent reaction on the right.

He was educated in music at the Ecole Normale, became a devotee of Wagner and then of Tolstoi and Shakespeare He is the evangel of the humane spirit in a day when it is hard pressed.

BUSINESS RECOVERY VITAL TO FARMERS

Employment Revival Would Aid Agriculture.

By DR. O. B. JESNESS

Solution of a considerable part of the farm problem must be looked for in industry rather than on the farm. Colorado State college is giving serious consideration to the interlocking of these two major American enterprises.

Industrial and employment recovery concern the farmer because increased purchasing power among consumers means improved demand for farm products. Such recovery also will aid agricultural adjustment in that more opportunities for work will be provided for the excess farm population.

Unsatisfactory prices and income for farmers have led to programs seeking to raise prices by holding production or supplies offered on the market in check. There is not an adequate market to absorb at satisfactory prices all of the products farmers produce.

Agriculture is carried on by such a vast number of individuals that adjustment of production to a depressed market does not come readily. It presents a decided contrast to manufacturing in this respect. The fact that agriculture cannot readily adjust production has paved the way for government adjustment programs.

To the extent the troubles of agriculture are the results of surplus output, the remedy must be either market recovery and expansion, or actual curtailment of the industry. Markets have been curtailed by the depression.

For the future, land prices need to be kept in line with prospects for long-time returns.

There are problems of soil conservation and land use calling for public attention. However, soil conservation needs to be treated as a problem of itself rather than to be used as the vehicle for benefit payments to increase the agricultural income. In the future, greater recognition probably will be given to the fact that the individual operator has responsibilities in the matter of caring for the soil and other resources.

In a democracy, public policy is shaped by public opinion. This requires that the average citizens must think seriously about our problems and arrive at sound judgments. That thinking must recognize broader considerations of general welfare rather than to spring only from narrow self-interest.

Music Fan Radioizes Entire Vermont Farm

Music while he works. That's the pet hobby of H. O. Van Vliet, a farmer of East Charlotte, Vt., on whose large farm one may hear philharmonic orchestras and concert ensembles from early morning until late at night.

The magazine Radio News tells the story as follows:

"Van Vliet has installed radio speakers in practically every building on the farm, all of which are controlled from a master speaker set in his house.

"It all started because Van Vliet, a busy and industrious farmer, is ardently fond of classical music. But because he had cows to milk, fields to plow, wood to chop and other barn labors to perform, he missed many of his favorite programs.

"So he set about remedying that situation. He bought several old speakers for a couple of dollars each. Using extension cord, he set up a speaker in the woodshed, another in the cow barn, one in the chicken house and still another in the large horse barn. To these he added three in his house; one in the bedroom, a large cabinet speaker in the living-room and another in his kitchen. The entire layout didn't cost over $12.

"He still has one problem unsolved: he can't find a station broadcasting classical music at five a. m., the hour when he hitches his suspenders and starts out for the barn to milk the cows. The radio minded farmer complains that he has to 'spend an hour or two in the barn the first thing in the morning and all I can get on that consarn radio is jazz music from Boston.'

"Asked if music helps the chickens to lay more eggs and his cows to give more milk, Van Vliet replied, 'I know definitely that animals like music. When I turn on some soft, pleasing music out in the farm buildings, the hens and cows respond to it immediately.

Proper Sire Care

It is important to success in dairying to secure an outstanding bull of the desired breed—one which is capable of improving the herd—and give him care and management so that his services may be utilized to the best advantage, points out N. P. Ralston of the Missouri college of agriculture. Oftentimes the true value of many bulls is not determined because they are sold before production records are obtained from the daughters.

mund Ruffin, Known as Man Who Fired First Shot at Fort Sumter, Should Be Famous as "Father of Soil Chemistry"

George Washington overseeing farming operations at Mount Vernon.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

KEEN-EYED young man worked in an improvised laboratory over samples of soil he had taken from his upland farm. As he tested the reactions from the chemi- he applied to the earth, he jotted down notes in a little and a look of satisfaction lighted his thin face.

he time was the spring of . The place was Cog- s Point in the tidewater a of Virginia. The young n was Edmund Ruffin, erica's first scientific mer, who was to be known later generations as the ther of soil chemistry in United States."

lore than a century after his olutionary experiments, the tributions of Edmund Ruffin present day soil knowledge conservation were recalled Prof. Emil Truog, professor oil in the University of Wisin in his presidential address ently before the American Soy of Agronomy.

Edmund Ruffin, born in 1794," Professor Truog, "was in th, frail of health and rest- of spirit. He read much of atever came to hand and grew in almost complete ignorance he practical agricultural tasks ing him."

Worn-Out Land.

dreary prospect faced the ung planter. The Ruffin land, e that of neighboring farmers, s poor, worn out by two cenies of bad agricultural meth-. Tobacco was king in that neer farm economy, imposing ingle crop type of agriculture which, says Avery Craven's ok, "Edmund Ruffin, Southern," the sole object was immete great yields regardless of ture consequences. Such a stem under frontier scarcity of pital and labor threw the burns of abnormal production arely upon the land in a reon where soil formation was r, rainfall heavy and concented and harmful micro-organnis unusually active.

American farmers had reaped profitable living from furnishg food to Europe torn by the apoleonic wars of the previous cade But this lucrative mart was closed by the Treaty of ent. Worn out farms were be- abandoned by the thousands. e tide of settlement was turnwest to virgin areas where nd was cheap.

Although crop rotation was folwed by a few of Ruffin's neighrs, such practices met with difculties, for clover and legumes iled to grow on poor lands and is cut the supply of live stock d manure. The corn crop on uffin's farm averaged only 10 ushels to the acre. Wheat yielded no better than six.

For the next five years young uffin experimented, seeking a olution to his problem. He rained his swamp land and had ood crops for three years. Then roduction so dwindled that he uit planting this acreage. He ied manure and got practically o beneficial results. He could ot make clover grow. His crude low made shallow furrows on e hilly land which became atercourses washing away the oil in rainy weather.

Disillusioned, but still eager to find a way out of his troubles, Ruffin came on a copy of Sir Humphrey Davy's book, "Agricultural Chemistry." He studied it closely and although he had no knowledge of chemistry, he soon grasped the fundamentals. His attention was drawn particularly to Davy's statement that a sterile soil "containing the salt of iron, or any acid matter may be ameliorated by the application of quick-lime."

The young planter found directions in Davy's book for testing soils for soluble iron, calcium and lime-bearing earth and also for testing limestone and marl for their carbonate content.

The Tests Begin.

He set to work immediately, gathered the necessary equipment and chemicals and began his tests. While he was not able to reveal the presence of free acids in his soil, he was able to prove the absence of lime. Then observing that sorrel and pine were abundant on the poor soil, he came to the conclusion that "vegetable acids" were the cause of sterility in his land.

"Ruffin was probably the first man in the whole world," said Professor Truog, "to conclude that upland mineral soils are often acid due to the presence of free acids, made possibly by the absence of calcareous (lime-bearing) earths. He also held that all fertile soils are either calcareous or hold lime in combination with acids in such form that it is easily extracted with hydrochloric acid."

With the aid of the test for carbonates, Ruffin located deposits of marl on his farm and at other places in the neighborhood. He decided to put his theory to a practical test by supplying lime to his sterile soil.

Ruffin's epochal experiment in putting soil science to work for the first time attracted practically no attention in the neighborhood at the time. Yet it was to revolutionize the agriculture of his home state for the next generation and exert a profound influence on soil conservation as it is practiced today.

"On a February morning in 1818," says Craven, whom Professor Truog quotes extensively in his address, "Ruffin's carts began to haul marl that puzzled Negro hands, dug from pits hastily opened on his lower lands. They spread 200 bushels over a few acres of newly cleared, but poor ridge land and in the spring Ruffin planted this entire field to corn as a testing crop.

"Eagerly he waited. As the season advanced he found reason for joy. From the very start, the plants on marled ground showed marked superiority and at harvest time, they yielded an advantage of fully 40 per cent. The carts went back to the pits. Fields took on fresh life. A new era in the agricultural history of the region dawned.

"In October of that year, he presented to the agricultural society of his own county the first of what was to be a long line of valuable papers offered to the cause of agriculture. Stating his theories as to the 'nature of soils and the action of calcareous manures,' on them, he adduced the slender sum of his experiences to support what was in fact a revolutionary approach to the whole problem that vexed the farmers of the New World."

An Important Book.

Ruffin made further tests and expanded his knowledge, adding new facts and proofs to support his theory. In 1821 his paper, now enlarged and revised, was published in the American Farmer, a new agricultural journal published in Baltimore. Eleven years later, grown into a book of 242 pages, it was published under the title, "An Essay on Calcareous Manures." It ran through five editions and was described in the Year Book of the department of agriculture at the end of the Nineteenth century as "the most thorough piece of work on a special agricultural subject ever published in the English language." (The book by Sir Humphrey Davy which so influenced Ruffin had not yet been published at the time of his death in 1799.)

President John Tyler, himself a Virginia planter, declared that Ruffin's essay "in its valuable consequences would be worth more to the country than all the state papers that have been the most celebrated of our time."

An example of what Ruffin accomplished a century ago by the practical application of his soil tests and by preaching the philosophy of soil improvement may be found in the fact that from 1838 to 1850 the land values of tidewater Virginia increased by over $17,000,000. One estimate, according to Avery Craven, placed the total increase from the application of marl after 1820 at over $30,000,000.

Ruffin had a number of noted predecessors in the study of soil management. Leading among these was George Washington, says Professor Truog, who was thoroughly familiar with the agricultural writings of the foremost English authorities of his time. Yet the Father of His Country, was unable to increase production materially or even maintain the level of soil fertility at Mount Vernon.

"Washington practiced soil erosion control to a certain extent," Professor Truog points out, "took pains to conserve animal manure, went to great labor in fertilizing with mud obtained from creeks and marshes and spent much money in the purchase of special seeds.

Political and economic questions occupied most of Ruffin's time in the last 20 years of his life. He was an uncompromising advocate of slavery and became an ardent secessionist. He fired the first shot at Fort Sumter on April 12, 1861, and took an active part in several battles of the Civil war.

"After Lee's surrender," says Professor Truog, "Ruffin, at the age of 71, feeling that now he was a man without a country and too old and weary to be other than a burden of his children, with stern logic caused a shot to ring out that he might join his comrades who died in battle for a lost cause."

Although a century has passed since Ruffin's achievement and 50 years have elapsed since Wheeler's demonstrations, we are still today applying only a fraction of lime to soil we should, Professor Truog points out.

"Moreover, today we have tests of considerable refinement for determining the lime needs of soils; lime or marl has been located in nearly every section of the country; highly efficient machinery has been developed for grinding limestone and digging marl; facilities for transporting the lime to the farm where needed have been developed beyond the fondest hopes of 25 years ago; we have data almost without end showing that the use of lime is fundamental in the humid regions to the growth of legumes, to nitrogen fixation, to a favorable availability of soil phosphates, and finally to soil conservation itself.

"We ride about the country and pass through sections where the eye meets out crops of limestone in every direction, but alas due principally to an acid condition of the soil, there are no fields of alfalfa, sweet clover or other high-grade legumes which are so necessary for the creation of a land of 'milk and honey.'"

Edmund Ruffin, he says, had the answer to farmers and even agronomists who sometimes say that liming is too expensive

"We never calculate the cost of any old practice," Ruffin once wrote. "We are content to clear woodland that afterwards will not pay for the expense of tillage. —But let any new practice be proposed and then everyone begins to count the cost—and on such erroneous premises that if applied to every kind of farm labor, the estimate would prove that the most fertile land known could scarcely defray the expense of its cultivation."

Pointing out that agronomists in particular, in addition to promoting the use of lime, should encourage also the use of fertilizers generally, the furthering of soil conservation and the adoption of proper land use programs, Professor Truog said:

"Soil and lime testing, crude as it may have been, was what made possible Ruffin's monumental world in the field of soil acidity, liming and soil management. And if soil testing was practicable in Ruffin's day, it should be even more practicable today when so much more is known relative to the many factors involved.

"After 25 years of continuous experience with soil tests, I am convinced that with further study and improvement, they will in time be generally used by all agronomists in diagnosing the lime and fertilizer needs of soils devoted to agriculture. I envisage a time in the near future when conditions and the supply of plant nutrients devoted to intensive culture will be controlled by means of tests much like similar matters are controlled in a chemical factory. Then and only then, can we say that we are putting chemical soil science fully to work in a practical way.

"Some agronomists become greatly disturbed when fertilizer applied on the basis of soil tests does not give sufficient crop increase the first year to pay for the fertilizer. They seem to forget the all-important long-time benefit, namely that of maintenance of soil fertility which is the backbone of soil conservation, for fertile soils soon produce a protective cover of vegetation which for the most part is the best preventive of soil erosion.

"Can farmers be sold on the philosophy of returning as much to the soil as is removed? This philosophy is so simple and so sound that farmers can be induced to accept it more easily than some of the make-shift or stop-gap philosophies.

"Will the cycle of soil depletion and agricultural desolation be repeated over and over, indefinitely? If the answer is to be no, then it will be necessary for the agronomist not only to take soil science from the sequestered cloister of the laboratory and hitch it to the plow, but also to go forth preaching a positive and realistic program of soil management and conservation as Edmund Ruffin did over 100 years ago.

My Favorite Recipes

Lucky, indeed, is the homemaker who has among her treasured recipes Aunt Martha's "receipt" for soft molasses cookies, Mother's rule for old-fashioned apple pan dowdy, or grandmother's instructions for making home-baked beans. Those old, favorite recipes are the mainstay of many a tempting meal.

Each one of us has our own prized collection of just such recipes—some old, some new, but all of them tried and approved by a critical family.

The recipes I'm giving you today are some of my own favorites—family "heirlooms" and contributions from friends and neighbors who are excellent cooks.

When you're a "seasoned" or experienced cook you may take liberties with a recipe or with directions, but if you're a beginner, or if you're trying a new dish for the first time, it's better to stick to a proven recipe and the accurate measurements it calls for.

Accuracy in cooking means level teaspoons and tablespoons and cups in the amounts the recipe specifies; it means sifting flour once before measuring; combining ingredients by the method given, and cooking or baking according to time and temperature recommended.

Oven Fried Chicken.

BRAIN TRUST

"Brain Trust" is not defined in the dictionary. Nor is there any such classification in the Washington telephone directory, although several well known names might be listed under that heading.

The phrase is simply one coined by the Washington correspondents. It is meant to describe a small group of "thinkers" and "planners" who immodestly rate their mental batting average at about 1000 percent plus when it comes to the question of how the U. S. A. should be run.

Their handiwork has been evident in the planned economy of the past several years. but now the correspondents have been told that the Brain Trusters are being shunted aside in this time of "limited emergency." In their stead, the correspondents are told, older heads are being called upon to plan the nation's course under the new conditions.

What puzzles the correspondents however, is this: The Brain Trust is, in fact, still existent and apparently will continue to function as heretofore. The only thing they are being left out of is the administrative planning incidental to national defense and international affairs. How is the Brain Trust planning going to jibe with the planning of the emergency planners? Is there going to be a headon collision between the theories of these two groups?

The correspondents are well aware of the Brain Trust's brand of planning, to wit: plowed under crops, and other methods of "planned scarcity" intended to raise prices And the apparent objective of the other group is to see that the U. S. has abundant materals, both for home consumption and sale to any and all outsiders who want to buy, and to fight down increasing prices.

Even before it happens, the sideliners are calling it an "unavoidable collision at the inersection of Planning boulevard and Preparedness avenue."

The French are using dogs as advance scouts to find the planted mines on the German front. Roosevelt and Wallace missed it when they killed all those little pigs. There should be a big market for old hogs in France and the "little" pigs of three years ago would be about heavy enough now to take the place of Frenchmen in invading the mine plated sections. Too bad Roosevelt killed the little pigs.

As Congress assembled for its special session, the definitions of a "limited emergency" were many. One wag even interpreted the present condition as an improvement He reasoned: "We have had an 'emergency' since 1933, but now we have only a 'limited emergency.' That is an improvement."

---

Landon of Kansas gave the president a poser when he told him that if he would renounce the third term idea, and put it out of his head entirely, he (the president) would have little trouble in having the embargo repealed. His suggestion has met with approval of the country in general.

---

It may be as some one says who is quoted by the Hiawatha World, that to learn the truth about a man a woman must marry him. But unless the world has changed she can hear some interesting stories about him as soon as the neighbors see her running around with him.

---

Life is a grindstone, and whether it grinds a man down or polishes him up, depends on the stuff he's made of.

By H. A. Grantham

Opinions expressed herein are those of the writer and should not be construed as reflecting the policy of the Republican State Central Committee, any individual or group, or the newspaper in which this column appears.

CAMPAIGN PROMISES

During the 1938 rampaign Republican campaigners drew attention to a "hidden city" of what they consldered unnecessary state employees, sprawled out of state offices into the corridors and housed in several downtown Des Moines office buildings. One of the Republican campaign pledges was a reduction of this hidden city to the very limit consistent with necessary public service. At the same time it was promised that consolidation of departments and services would be sought relentlessly in an effort to reduce these annual rentals. Critics of the present administration denied that any such situation existed and laughed off promised reforms as empty campaign promises.

OFFICIAL RESULTS

Although those departments which employ the largest number did not come under Republican control until July 1, unoffical statements that cuts were actually being made have been heard from time to time. These were promptly dismissed as false and misleading by those who did not care to believe them. New legisation which reorganized certain departments created some confusion as employees were transferred from one department to another. Many of these transfers and consolidations were under way as the fiscal year closed on July 31. With a new fiscal year now three months under way, many basic Republican reorganization plans are only now beginning to influence operation of state business. While the accompishments of an economy minded legislature and an economy minded administration will be much more in evidence at the close of the fiscal year on July 31, 1940, a fair picture of progress to date is possible at this time from an official report compiled by state comptroller, C. Fred Porter.

ANNUAL CUT $431,796

The comptroller's report as analyzed by the Des Moines Register indicates payroll adjustments generally downward in all principal state departments with an estimated annual reduction of $431,796 96. Small increases totaling 51 employees are listed in ten departments while the balance of thirty-nine departments show a decrease in personnel of 426; or a net decrease of 375 between November 30, 1938 and July 31, 1939. The most noticeable consolidation of services and an important decrease in operating costs occurs in in the State Tax Commission, formerly the Board of Assessment and Review. In spite of the fact that this division has taken over the beer tax, cigarette tax and inheritance tax departments from the state treasurer's office, it now operates with eighty five less employees than were of record on last November 30.

ACTUAL CUT PROBABLY ABOVE 800

Under the headng "Highway Commission" Mr. Porter's report announces a reduction from fifty-one to forty-seven employees. This is taken to mean only employees at the commission's administrative offices at Ames and does not take into account a veritable army of maintenance crews in each of the ninety-nine counties of the state. Maintenance engineers in a recent report to Randall Melson, commission chairman, reported a total of 1,472 men in the maintenance crews as of August 1, 1939, as against "nearly 1,900 at the same time in 1938." This reduction would add an additional 438 to Mr. Porter's 375; a total of 813. Assuming a conservative estimate of $85 per month for these highway employees it would appear another $446,000 has been lopped off the payroll in addition to the $431,000 estimated saved on payroll of state house employees.

OTHER DEPARTMENTS

On last November 30 the board of social welfare had 405 employees and a monthy payroll of appoximately $43,534. The July 31 payroll of this department lists 249 employees and a monthly payroll of $29,107. The public safety department shows a decrease from 210 to 102 employees, unemployment compensation show decreases ranging from one to fifteen. Increases indicated in the board of control to twelve in the department of health and seventeen in the commerce commission.

PLENTY OF SQUEALS

Although reorganization and consolidation with a view to effecting important savings of taxpayer's money was a major plank in the Republican campaign platform, even it's early stages have not been accomplished without plenty of squealing from within the party itself and stiff resistance from those who disagreed for one reason or another. There were those who thought the idea was only a campaign scheme to be forgotten after election. There was and still is a greater group who believed all Democrats should be replaced man for man by deserving Republicans; and that consolidation and its resultant saving should be postponed until all job seekers have been satisfied. But an old fashioned economy has been installed in the state house and it will remain there as long as Iowa voters believe in it.

WIERD LEASES NEXT

Reduction of unnecessary employees is well under way and while there has been but little public notice given of the administration's expedition into the field of wierd leases, these inheritances from the preceding state government have been getting a full share of official scrutiny. As an example; just before the Kraschel regime retired form office at the request of the taxpayer, it concluded a ten year lease calling for an annual rental of $10.000 for a downtown Des Moines office building. It was blandly announced at the time that the lease could be cancelled by the state on due notice The present administration worked out a consolidation of this department which would have permitted cancellation of the lease and vacation of the building but it was discovered the lease could be cancelled only in event the state built a new office building. No rent has been paid for several months on the so-called Herring building for years occupied by the Liquor Cnotrol Commission and for which the state has paid $30,000 per year rent. The lease has expired and the state refuses to renew at what the administration considers a ridiculously high figure.

TAG ENDS

Requests for copies of the 1939 40 Iowa Official Register (The Red Book) from libraries and schools are unusually heavy. . . . due to closer supervision state tax collections for the first six months of 1939 reached an all time high without any new levies . . . . . current federal debt total $40,864,985,135.75. . . . . your share $314.35. . . . . .

LIKE SIX MAN FOOTBALL

Small schools with a limited amount of athletic material will probably develop more interest in six-man football as a major fall sport. The experience of Malvern last season and the start of this is that the game is a good one for spectators, fast, exciting and competitive. For the athlete it demands a high degree of skill and top physical condition. The school needs only about half as much material as would be needed for the orthodox 11-man sport so nearly every high school couid sponsor it.

Farmer's Elevator Broken Into Saturday Night

The Farmer's Elevator office was broken into Saturday night, the prowlers breaking a rear door and entering the office where they jimmied a candy dispenser and obtained a number of five cent pieces. Nothing else was taken. The robbery was investigated.

Tiresome

Fifteen years ago, a barn on the Fred Barrett farm near Nevada was destroyed by fire. A new barn was built. Nine years ago, the second barn was destroyed by the cyclone. Another new barn was built out of the lumber from the old one. Last week, the third barn was destroyed by fire when 40 tons of bean hay committed spontaneous combustion. Mr. Barrett says this sort of thing is getting monotonous.

It Gets Cold

Stanton Marquardt, whale-shooting Iowan of Des Moines, reports that it really gets cold at Churchill, Canada, 2,000 miles north of Des Moines. Churchill is just at the edge of the real "artic country." A four inch water pipe there is packed with moss to keep the water from freezing. Diameter of pipe: without moss, 4 inches: with moss, 18 feet. One night during Marquardt's stay in Churchill, a polar bear came swimming in from across the bay and was killed by the natives who make up most of Churchill's 250 population.

Lost His Tractor

Joe McCord, Page county highway workman, of Coin lost his tractor, and almost his life, when his grader hit a natural gas pipe line, breaking the line and setting fire to the gas. The explosion blew Mr. Mc Cord from his seat. Helplessly, he watched while the tractor was consumed in the huge natural "blw torch" formed by the broken gas main After shutting off the valves, workmen welded in a new section of pipe.

Lost Some Weight

Three weeks ago Chris Hansen of Harlan turned some steers into a pasture. A few days ago he visited the pasture and heard one of the steers bawling. It had fallen into an abandoned cistern, which is enough to make anyone bawl. Thin and emciated when removed, the steer alone knows just how long it was imprisoned.

Some 30 years ago, a farmer came into the Store with a long list of weights and asked us to figure them and see if he had been paid enough money for his hogs he explained "I did not get much schooling." This fellow did not need a desk!

The young farmer of today writes his own letters, figures his own accounts, draws his own farm maps and his feeding plans. He must know the facts about this business of farming to succeed. He of course, must have a desk.

llege Classics in Sports, Classroom, Dress-Up Clothes

ls intensely interesting to note he comradeship, the spirit of ual endeavor and co-operation exists these days between mer- ntman, designer and the college as to the planning of a program clothes that must be practical of all, at the same time they st date smartly for the varied es of activities that crowd the of Miss Modern.

was a happy inspiration that ved merchandiser and style cre- to call into consultation groups ypical college girls, to take these ng people into partnership, so to ak, in their efforts to assemble rdrobes of smart apparel that uld meet the demands of every asion in a thoroughly practical se as well as a highly fashion- rect way.

n the illustration we are showing ee apparel choices of a typical ege girl who considers these thes classics as indispensable for alma mater. To be sure they ply represent the initial numbers t lay the foundation of a well anized wardrobe.

Centered in the picture Miss Col- iate is properly attired in a twin eater set topping a circular plaid rt plus the inevitable common- se oxfords. And here's some- ng about plaids to keep in mind, u can't wear 'em too bright this son, the more red in their color eme the better.

To the right in the picture this r co-ed is wearing a skirt and eater combination topped by a classic water-proofed clan plaid coat with gabardine lining. Her sports hat of felt is a perfect college-girl type. She wears the typical saddle oxfords and wool ankle sox. Have your sox initialed is fashion's latest message. You can know that the coat here pictured will attend football games this fall, which was in the mind of the designer who styled it with an idea for warmth and comfort as well as good "looks." This coat is likewise the type that will go to town often, will stand the test of motoring and prove a friend indeed throughout wind, rain, sunshine and the vagaries of weather that mark autumn and winter days.

Miss College Girl's choice to wear on a date with her best beau is a trim, very smart, very practical outfit in black as illustrated to the left in the group. Her crepe frock has the pinched-in waistline such as fashion demands this season; also the new back fullness. In her trunk she has tucked away one of the new detachable bustle bows which she wears now and then to add an extra note of chic to her frock. Her felt beret (small, it won't slip out of pose in dancing) has the new forward tilt and she brightens the whole with a flamboyant necklace and matching bracelet set in eye-thrilling colored stones.

Not that choice must be restricted to a black dress with massive gold and colorful stone-set jewelry for keeping dress-up dates. To be sure the big idea is black for your autumn "first," but the gorgeous colors on the way are simply breath-taking. The new wool dresses and the very chic and fetching velveteen dresses make striking color their theme.

Jeweled Buttons

Elegance is the keynote to fash- ns this fall and winter. Feminine lums and fancies add infinite arm to the mode. Seeing that e have gone back to the gay nine- es for much of our inspiration it as inevitable that the vogue for g glittering jeweled buttons should revived. And here they are orifying the bolero suit of char- euse wool crepe as here pictured. e jeweled buttons of amethyst d gold are matched with a lapel rnament.

Mesh Evening Scarf

You can feel yourself a dashing enorita this summer if you wear e of the new white mesh scarfs rapped Spanish style about you ith your cotton evening dresses.

Glacier White Is Latest Lace Tint

Glacier white, which has a pale bluish cast, was one of Patou's favorite colors for evening gowns in the most recent Paris showings, while Molyneux showed a vivid bright shade of blue. Molyneux not only did the new pencil-slim silhouette in lace, but made quite a sensation with his double-swing skirts for dance frocks, which were often ankle length. One of these in black lace had three flounces at the hem, with a deep square decolletage at the back edged with three ruffles. Another gown in the full-skirted group was in black net with a lace top.

In a gown by Patou with long, slim lines, fullness in the back was achieved by means of godets, and the effect was quite sophisticated in lace over a silver princess slip.

Elegance Is Word For New Handbags

Handsome is the word for the new handbags. Even the bags carried with practical daytime costumes will sound a note of elegance in their general finish and fine mountings. Emphasis is on suede bags in interesting shapes and expert workmanship.

The more formal types announce revival of ornate frames, and many trimming touches in way of braiding and embroidery.

Evening bags are all aglitter with sequin handcraft, bead embroidery and other "whimsies" that tune to a song of elegance that will be heard throughout the winter social season.

New Colors

Artichoke green is new on the fall color card. Blackberry tones as shown this season are really beautiful as are also the rich dahlia shades.

HOLLYWOOD does not know yet what the European war is going to do to its major industry. The very profitable foreign market for pictures is out now, of course (it's said that Metro might have made two million dollars on "Gone With the Wind" alone). So the picture-makers are going to economize.

Then there are the foreign-born stars to consider. Samuel Goldwyn decided not to go ahead with "Raffles" because David Niven might be called back to England.

Victor McLaglen, Ray Milland and George Brent have all become American citizens; McLaglen got his final papers years ago.

Herbert Wilcox and Anna Neagle departed for England, Mr Wilcox announcing that, because of the war, he would postpone making his proposed picture about Bonnie Prince Charlie Robert Montgomery had to cancel making plans for working in "Busman's Holiday" in England and started for home Maureen O'Sullivan also had to turn right around and start back to America again, instead of making the picture for which she'd gone abroad.

If Carole Lombard had to have appendicitis she certainly picked a convenient time for it. Of course, production on "Vigil in the Night" was held up. But it gave Brian Aherne time to marry Joan Fontaine—incidentally, they had one of

CAROLE LOMBARD

Hollywood's few church weddings —and afforded Miss Lombard an opportunity to study nurses and hospital procedure at first hand. Of course, in "Vigil of the Night" she plays an English nurse, but the experience was a help anyway.

The government requested that release dates on two pictures be advanced. They are "Thunder Afloat," a tale based on the defense of the American coast against submarines during the last war, with Wallace Beery and Chester Morris, and "Twenty Thousand Men," an aviation picture full of thrills which it cost a small fortune to stage.

Phil Baker had miniature reproductions of his accordion made for the charm bracelets of some of his friends. A manufacturer is responsible for launching on a defenseless public one of the most unattractive dolls that it has ever been our fate to see; it's a "Baby Snooks" doll, but we'd say that Fannie Brice had material for a libel suit, if it's supposed to look like her.

Benay Venuta, the radio singer, still corresponds with Myrna Loy, though it's years since they met. At that time they danced side by side in the chorus at Grauman's Chinese theater, we're told.

Two dramatic serials will take over the Thursday evening hour that has belonged to Rudy Vallee for so long. The first half hour will feature "One Man's Family," that ace among radio serials; the second will be taken by "Those We Love."

Madeleine Carroll, who returned recently from Europe, has turned over her 200-year-old chateau near Paris to the Sisters of the Poor, for the shelter of orphans evacuated from the city.

Brenda Joyce comes into her own in "The Rains Came," and is likely to become the movies' next glamor girl without the usual buildup given by the publicity department. She's blonde and beautiful, and what's more, she can act.

ODDS AND ENDS—News commentators, warned to be neutral when they discuss the war, walk a verbal tight rope every time they face the microphone . . . "The Women" promises to be one of the biggest hits of the current movie season . . . And "The Old Maid" is another . . . Irene Dunne finally convinced everybody that she wouldn't play the heroine of the re-made "Front Page," and Jean Arthur steps into the role . . . "Arizona" won't be made at present despite the large sum spent on preparation . . . Norma Shearer, arriving from Europe, said she thought Charles Boyer had been mobilized: she slept on an army cot, because the boat she returned on was so crowded.

THE FORERUNNER OF THE KING

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 3:1-17.
GOLDEN TEXT—Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight.—Matthew 3 3.

When an earthly king visits his dominions or makes a journey to another land, great preparations are made for his coming. Everything is done to expedite his journey and to assure him of safety and comfort The United States and Canada have recently had that interesting experience. The King of kings and Lord of Lords who in loving kindness and gracious condescension had come to earth to be our Redeemer had now grown to manhood and was prepared to enter on His public ministry. God sent John to be His forerunner to prepare the way and to herald His coming.

I. A Herald Prophetically Foretold (vv. 1, 3, 4).

The coming of John (usually called the Baptist) was of such vital concern to God that He had revealed it to His prophets hundreds of years before (see Isa. 40:3).

We should study and believe the message of the prophets. The same prophecies that pointed to John the Baptist and Christ's first coming also point to the second coming (Mal. 3:1-6; 4.1-6). We know the former took place, why should we doubt the fulfillment of the latter? We do well to take heed to the word of prophecy (II Pet. 1:19).

Let us also prepare the way of the Lord, not as John did, for his was a special ministry, but by making ways for the gospel to reach the hearts of men. We can remove hindrances and obstructions, preparing their hearts to receive Him as Saviour and Lord.

II. An Unusual Man with a Burning Message (vv 2, 6-12).

What an arresting appearance John must have made as he emerged to the edge of the wilderness to present his startling message! God had kept him (like Moses and others) in the quiet of the desert where He could talk with him, away from the distractions of so-called civilization. This simple living had made John a striking personality, quite unusual and unconventional. The man who strives for such an appearance to attract attention is but a fool, but on the other hand unconventionality will not destroy one's usefulness if he has a message from God.

The preaching of John was a burning message of repentance. There had been no prophetic message since the time of Malachi, and in the intervening 400 years the religious life of the Jews had settled down into a barren legalistic formality. John came with a simple, practical, and plain-spoken indictment of sin, which led to repentance and which made religion vital and real again.

We know that the gospel of the grace of God in Christ goes far beyond the preaching of John. But we also know that the Church needs to get back to the proclamation of a vital heart-searching message, and some genuine old-fashioned repentance. Then we like John will bring men to Christ for salvation, for sanctification, for service.

III. A Humble but Privileged Servant of Christ (vv. 13-17).

The crowning event in the ministry of John was the recognition of Jesus as He came to be baptized. He was deeply conscious of his own unworthiness for this great work and pointed to the coming Saviour as the One in whom they should put their trust (vv. 11 and 14. See also John 1:29). John was not jealous of his own position, nor seeking his own advancement (see v. 3 and John 3:30).

To this faithful and humble servant came the inestimable privilege of baptizing the Saviour. The baptism of Jesus presents a mystery which we cannot fully solve. It is certain that He did not come to be baptized for the remission of sin, for He knew no sin. The best explanation seems to be that in His obedience to His Father He was willing to subject Himself to every ordinance of God—a spirit which is not too common, by the way, among His professed followers. He was not a sinner, but He took the sinner's place, and thus He both entered upon His ministry and pointed forward to that day when God made Him "who knew no sin" to be "made sin for us" so that "we might be made the righteousness of God in him" (II Cor. 5:21).

Gracious Amid Gloom

Yet for all my Lord's gloom, I find Him sweet, gracious, loving, kind; and I want both pen and words to set forth the fairness, beauty and sweetness of Christ's love, and the honor of this cross of Christ, which is glorious to me, though the world thinketh shame thereof. —Samuel Rutherford.

HOW TO SEW

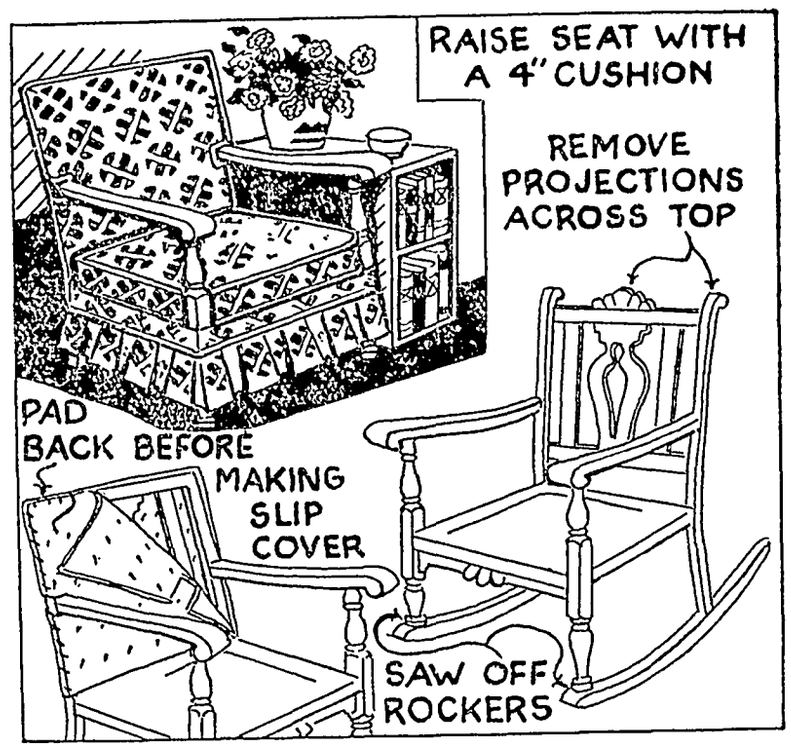
by Ruth Wyeth Spears



New life for an old rocker

THERE were rocking chairs hanging from the ceiling of a certain second-hand furniture store. "Nobody wants them any more," mourned the dealer. "I'd sell any one you see for 50 cents" The little bride with me promptly chose one. Perhaps she would paint it for the porch.

What she actually did is shown here in the sketch. The result was the small but comfortable, modern looking chair at the upper left. The bride raided mother's attic for two things that went into the making of this chair. One was an old quilt that she used to pad the back. The other was feathers from an old bolster which were used to stuff a seat cushion tightly so that it would raise the seat which had been lowered by removing the rockers. Cotton basted to muslin could have been used for the back padding and a cotton substitute for the cushion filling.

The new sewing book by Mrs. Spears contains 32 other useful homemaking ideas, with all directions clearly illustrated. You will be delighted with it. The price is only 10 cents postpaid. Enclose coin, with name and address, to Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill., and book will come to you by return mail.

Peaceful War

Ever hear of a peaceful war? There's one in West Virginia now. For "War" is the name of a community of 1,500 people in the state. Until quite recently War also had the distinction of being the largest town in the country without telephone service. But that distinction exists no more. Now you can "go to War" by telephone from any of the other 70,000 communities in the United States which have phones.

Help Prevent Fire!

4-point Prevention Program Is Given by Iowa State Ag. Engineer

Iowa farmers can greatly reduce their share of the nation's rural fire losses—which totaled $95,000 000 and took 3,500 lives last year —by concentrating on a 4-point prevention program, Henry Giese, Iowa State College agricultural engineer, declared this week.

"And since this is National Fire Prevention Week," he said, "it's a good time to check on our own fire losses."

"Last year rural fires in Iowa- including towns under 2,500— resulted in a reported loss of nearly $2,500,000, a slight increase over the damage suffered in 1937"

Causes

The four big causes of farm fires, Giese said, are·

1. Defective flues and heating systems in dwellings.
2. Sparks or combustible roofs of dwellings.
3. Spontaneous ignition of hay or feed in barns.
4. Lightning striking non-roded barns.

"Dwelling and barn fires comprise 93 percent of the fire damage on Iowa farms." Giese emphasized "Defective flues and heating systems and sparks on combustible roofs account for 76 percent of the known farm dwelling fires, while spontaneous ignition and lightning are responsible for 67 percent of the fire damage to barns."

The first two causes of farm fires—those affecting dwellings—are most, important in summer Giese pointed out.

For that reason a fire prevention program need not "pile up" on a farmer at one time; it can be handled on a seasonal basis.

Control

To control the four principal causes of Iowa farm fires. Giese suggests:

Plugging up all holes and cracks in the chimney and flues and thoroughly checking the heating system before the fall heating season begins.

Fastening an effective spark arrester to the chimney to prevent roof fires. (Good arresters can be obtained for around $1 50; non-clogging type is preferable)

Checking on the moisture content of hay before putting it into the mow. In hot, dry summers. the leaves may dry quickly—even rattle or drop off—while the stems still contain a lot of moisure

Placing lightning rods on the barn and other important exposed buildings, unless they have steel roofs that are well grounded.

Six Year Old Farm Boy's Leg Broken When Caught In Elevator

LITTLE SON OF HR. AND MRS. FRED SCHMIDT SUFFERS SERIOUS INJURIES

Little Boy's Leg Broken In Two Places By Elevator Tumbling Rod

Marvin, the six year old son of Mr and Mrs. Fred Schmidt, was the victim of a farm accident last Friday in which his right leg was fractured in two places, one break above the ankle and the other several inches above the knee, as the result of the lad's overall's becoming entangled in the tumbling bar of an elevator being used to elevate corn

The boy was with his father in the farm yard where the corn was being elevated into the crib Mr Schmidt was gathering up ears that had spilled around the elevator and the little boy was helping him pick up the ears. when unnoticed the boy went around to the opposite side of the elevator and evidently went too close to the machine when the tumbling rod caught the lower part of his overall leg, winding the cloth around the rod drawing the boy's right leg against the whirling rod Mr Schmidt stopped the machine at once and had to summon help to lift the machine and get the boy out

Marvin was given medical attention in Klemme and then was taken to the hospital at Hampton to have the fractures reduced Latest reports are that he is making a good recovery from his injuries.

KINDERGARTEN CLASS WILL BE ORGANIZED TO BEGIN MONDAY

Children Who Will Be Five Years Old In January May Attend

Kindergarten classes will begin in the primary room of the Klemme Public Schools next Monday, October 16 Classes will run from 1:00 o'clock to 3:00 o'clock and will include a rest period each day for the little folks.

At a special meeting of the school board Saturday evening, it was decided that in order to be old enough for entrance, a child must be five years old by January 1. This will be the rule to be followed this year and in years to come.

A year of kindergarten work gives the child a big start on his primary training. The purpose of kindergarten is to give the child the experiences and the preliminary training to fit him for reading and other work of the first grade. Without kindergarten, much of the first year has to be taken up with these activities.

All parents who have children who will be five years old by January 1 are urged to bring them to the primary room next Monday at 1:00 o'clock. Any questions regarding the program will gladly be answered by the superintendent or Miss Potter.

Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Klemme, of Belmond, were pleasant callers at the Times office Monday afternoon.

Funeral Services Held Monday For George Platt, Retired Farmer

Funeral services for Mr. George Platt, sixty-eight year old retired farmer, who died at Grinnell, Iowa, following an auto accident, were held at the Klemme Reformed Church on Monday afternoon, October 9 at 2·00 o'clock, with the Rev. Calvin Grosshuesch preaching the sermon The Wellemeyer Funeral Service was in charge of arrangements.

Pall bearers were former neighbors of Mr. Platt when he farmed near Klemme and were Herman Priebe, Henry Busman, Emil Lau, Edwin Josten, Frank Sandry and W F Greiman. Interment was in the Ell Township Cemetery near Klemme.

OBITUARY

George Platt was born February 2, 1871, at New Castle, West Virginia. His parents were poor people and it was necessary for the children to find work as soon as they could earn their keep. Thus Mr Platt left home at a very early age and lived among strangers. As he grew older he found work as a farm hand, and because wages were higher in the west, he gradually came westward.

In 1901, at the age of 30 years, his wanderings brought him to Hancock County. A few years later he married Elizabeth Sophie Etchen and settled down on a farm in Twin Lake Twp. After 14 years Mr and Mrs. Platt retired and moved to Klemme Here in their comfortable home they lived in contentment for 19 years. Ten months ago Mrs. Platt was called to the Great Beyond. And Mr Platt on October 5th received injuries in an auto wreck which caused his passing the next day.

Mr. Platt was a good husband and well liked by the children of the household. The following survive him and mourn his passing:

Louis Etchen of Kansas City, Mo.; Albert, Fred, and John Etchen all of Klemme, Iowa; Mrs. Lillian Brooks of Mason City, Iowa; Mrs. Henry Lewis of Klemme, Iowa; eleven grandchildren, one great grand-child, and a host of friends in and around Klemme.

Card Of Thanks

We wish to take this means of expressing our appreciation and thanks to friends and neighbors for their kindness and assistance given us in our time of sorrow, and for the floral contributions and words of sympathy extended to us. —The Etchen Children and families.

Dedication Date Set For Klemme's Modern School

DOLLAR SPENT FOR LIME RETURNS SEVERAL IN PROFITS

With 75 percent of the state's soil in an "acid condition," more Iowa farmers should take advantage of the Iowa County Limestone Law, which makes possible purchases of lime through county boards of supervisors, believes Paul Burson, Iowa State College extension agronomist.

"It has been shown," he says, "that a dollar spent in applying lime will return 2 or 3 dollars profit to the farmer."

Provisions

Under provisions of the lime act, county boards are empowered to act as "bargaining agencies" and 'financing agencies for farmers needing quantities of limestone for soil improvement, Burson explains. Farmers may deposit cash for consignments or pay for them in five yearly installments. If they buy on credit, they can virtually make the lime "pay for itself" out of the increase yields it will bring.

Any group of farmer owners needing a total of 5,000 tons of lime, or 50 farmers who need any amount, may petition their county board to sell lime to them under the Iowa County Limestone Law, Burson says.

Two Methods

If the board acts favorably and passes a resolution to start a liming program, it may do one of two things: Act as a bargaining agent and contract for lime from a commercial quarry for resale to farmers; or cooperate its own lime quarry, selling to farmers at cost of production.

Where farmers buy lime on the "installment plan," unpaid installments bear 6 percent interest and constitute a prior lein on the property. Payments are made along with the regular property taxes.

Where the county must finance the liming program, it may issue anticipatory warrants with which to purchase limestone, liquidating its obligation as rapidly as farmers pay their installments.

Counties operating their own quarries may use WPA labor, according to an opinion sent to Burson by Attorney General Fred D. Everett.

In counties where a lime program has been estabished, it has made possible uniform transportation charges, lower delivered cost of limestone, more efficient distribution and guaranteed high qualty, Burson says.

In addition, quarry operators who are awarded county contracts are paid cash by the county board for all limestone sold, thus eliminating their problems of collections.

MISS AGNES SAMUELSON WILL BE ON DEDICATION PROGRAM HERE

Former Teachers, Superintendents And Alumnae Invited To Attend

The date Friday, Nov. 10, has been set for the formal dedication of Klemme's new school building The ceremony will consist of an evening program with special music and special speakers. The main speaker of evening will be Miss Agnes Samuelson, executive secretary of the state teachers association. Miss Samuelson is a past president of the National Education Association and was state superintendent of public instruction at the time the Klemme school was started.

There wil also be a speaker from the regional office of the Public Works Administration in Omaha. Word has not yet been received as to whether the regional director, R. A Radford, or one of his assistants will be here.

Other plans for the dedication include the inviting of former students and faculty members. The school office will welcome any information on the whereabouts of former superintendents and teachers, and alumni members living in Klemme are urged to contact their old classmates to tell them the date of this important occasion

The date of the dedication comes at the close of American Education Week and the ceremony will be fitting to the program of that week. More information will appear in the paper during the next month regarding both American Education Week and the dedication.

KLEMME REVERSES DEFEAT

Wins From Goodell

The "Shamrocks" reversed an early season defeat Friday by dropping Goodell to the tune of 4-1. The game was fast and well played.

Klemme allowed it's opponents 1 run, on 2 hits and one hobble, while they collected 4 runs off 7 base-knocks and two miscues by Goodell's team The local team showed several signs of the needed "spark" to build a strong nine for the coming spring season. Schoenwetter on the mound for Klemme struck out 10 men in the 7 innings.

Meservey furnishes the opposition for Klemme in it's final test of the fall season Thursday afternoon.

Tall Corn

The tall corn contests are over, and the new fad is producing the longest ear of corn. Ears a foot long don't count, according to John Englehover, who farms a place 10 miles west of Oskaloosa on the Des Moines river. The best ear he has found to date is sixteen and one half inches long.

Folger Shakespeare Library

The Folger Shakespeare library in Washington houses the finest collection of Shakespeare material outside of England Eighty-five thousand volumes, ranging from first folios to the most modern product of Shakespearean research are on its shelves Of a world supply of 200 first folios, the Folger library possesses 79 The next largest collection is in the British museum which contains but five first folios The oldest document on display is one written at Rouen, France in 1435 and signed by the king's treasurer, John, Bastard of Orleans which mentions Sir John Fastolf who, in name though not in character, became Shakespeare's Falstaff The library building includes a theater which seats 262.

Engineer Graduates Have Best Luck Finding Jobs This Year, Colleges Say

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

NEW YORK. — Some folks don't hang much with book-learnin,' but figures don't lie, either, and a survey of employment in industry indicates that the fellow with a diploma has the right ammunition for keeping the wolf from the door.

Parents who have scrimped these last four years to pay Junior's tuition at college will be heartened by one characteristic of the business upturn noted for the first six months of the year: The 150,000 young Americans graduated this June from the nation's colleges have found chances of landing jobs definitely better than last year's crop.

Rosiest of all the reports, with a few months gone by to let this year's hopefuls find out just how it feels to go knocking on doors, comes from Columbia university, whose Secretary of Appointments Robert F. Moore estimates that the 1939 class boasts a batting average twice as high in the Employment League as last year's class. More than 55 per cent of the graduates are already employed, he says.

Only 14 Schools Show Drop.

Hardly less optimistic are the findings of the family economics bureau of the Northwestern National Life Insurance company, of Minneapolis, Minn., which conducted an extensive survey of placement opportunities for 1939 graduates. Of 100 universities and colleges reporting, 63 indicated substantial increases in positions available for graduates this year as compared with 1938. Twenty-three said things looked just about the same as last year, while only 14 reported a drop in the number of jobs available.

The greatest demand, according to Mr. Moore of Columbia, "has come from employers in various businesses who wish to recruit material for executive positions."

This seems to agree with the thinking of Dr. Karl T. Compton, president of Massachusetts Institute of Technology in Boston. Writing the foreword of a new book, he describes a survey of 54,000 officials of 500 companies which indicates that a college-trained man is 18 times as likely to be president of an industrial corporation as a non-college man, 12½ times as likely to be treasurer, twice as likely to be in charge of production, 18 times as likely to be an engineer, and 12 times as likely to be a sales official.

Weapon for Job Hunters.

The book in which Dr. Compton's foreword appears is "Engineering Opportunities," edited by R. W. Clyne and published by D. Appleton-Century; it describes the chances of the young graduate engineer in each of 26 fields, with each field described by an engineer who has already attained success in it. The espoused purpose of the book is to afford young engineers an opportunity to learn something of the practical problems, as well as the opportunities, in the field they wish to enter, before they seek an interview with the employment manager. Chapters cover industries as widely divergent as aluminum and photography.

ENGINEERS LEAD—Among this year's 150,000 college graduates, engineers get first call. This young man is testing a casting under X-ray in one of the great industrial laboratories.

Almost without exception, the schools which offer engineering courses report the demand to be higher for engineers than for men of other training. Industrial, chemical, electrical and mechanical engineers lead, with the most active demand found in the chemical, automotive, oil, steel and electrical industries.

From the University of Pittsburgh, in the heart of the "engineering belt," comes one of the most glowing reports. Pitt says that in eight months its placement bureau had found full-time jobs for 20 per cent more graduates than during the entire year from June, 1937, to June, 1938. Most requests were for various types of engineers with business training, particularly salesmanship.

Questionnaire Substantiates Trend.

According to the Engineers' Council for Professional Development, approximately 9,000 engineering students were slated for graduation during the calendar year 1939. Expressions of opinion that there are jobs to be snared by the industrious are corroborated by the Journal of Engineering Education, which reports a survey on employment conducted among 300 leading industries. The 122 industries which replied to the publication's questionnaire reported the annual employment of more than 2,500 engineering graduates.

For graduates in all fields, all institutions report starting salaries at about the same level as last year. Most optimistic reports come from the east, central and middlewestern states, with a greater proportion of the schools in the West and Southwest reporting no change.

Wasn't it Horace Greeley who said, "Go west, young man, go west!"?

Spying's Nice Work Until You Get Shot

SPY — Johanna Hoffman, hairdresser on the German liner, "Bremen," after being sentenced to four years in prison for espionage in New York federal court.

INNOCENT—Natasha, wife of Mikhail Gorin, Pacific coast representative of a Russian tourist bureau, who was acquitted of espionage charges in San Francisco.

LOYAL—Kate Moog, German-born nurse, who refused Nazi offer to open a "villa" in Washington where U. S. officials might be induced to divulge secrets.

"MATA HARI"—Miss Yoshimko Kawashima, "Mata Hari of Japan," who was murdered while vacationing in Tientsin after leading a spy ring at Hong Kong.

LONDON.—M. I. 5 is at work again.

As in 1914, Great Britain's secret agents are matching wits with those of Germany, and most nations are increasing their espionage and counter-espionage work. Even the United States has added to its secret service under President Roosevelt's "limited emergency" declaration.

But only in England, France and Germany are today's spies getting real thrills. Many a modern Mata Hari in all three nations is using her wiles to wrest a military secret from any gullible official who can be made to talk. But that's only part of spying.

In Germany lives an M. I 5 agent whose sole job is to warn the British government when Germany is planning an air raid over London or Paris. If lucky, he'll die in bed. But probably they'll catch him. Meanwhile his superior officer in London knows him only by a number.

Britain, proud of her spies, says Germany's espionage is still crude as it was during the World war. Lody, whom the Germans still revere as their greatest spy, was considered a hopeless bungler by the British. He was under observation for months before arrested, court martialed and shot in the Tower of London.

M. I. 5 is obliging enough to let a few German agents work unmolested in wartime, even speeding their reports through the mails. Once in the last war, when a German agent in England died, M. I. 5 was so sorry it continued forwarding faked reports for several months.

Joachim von Ribbentrop, German foreign minister, is credited with organizing the present Nazi espionage in Britain and France. In Spain last year a stupid Gestapo agent boasted Germany had 5,000 spies in Britain, many of whom were systematically rounded up as the war started. Ribbentrop favors women spies; after all, Mata Hari made a name for herself.

M. I. 5, the French and American secret services have pooled all their information about Nazi activity abroad into an organization called the Deuxieme bureau.

No one can audit expenditures of M. I. 5. Its funds are voted by parliament and no report of expenditure is ever made. No member of the opposition in the house of commons ever questions ministers about it. The story is told how, in Napoleon's day, a Kent farmer found a box containing 50,000 pounds along the post road near his cottage. He turned it over to the Bank of England, which advertised it, but after six months the money was returned to him. To this day most Englishmen are convinced it was secret service money for use on the continent. Yet no one was held accountable.

Perfection in Pies

There's something about a piece of really good pie, with its flaky, golden-brown crust and a filling simply oozing flavor and goodness, that makes it the crowning glory of a meal. Just a whiff of the fragrance of a juicy apple pie, or the sight of a quivery custard in a crust that crumbles at the first touch whets the appetite; and one glance at a slice of dainty chiffon pie, with its feather-light filling, is enough to make even a strong-willed calorie-counter forget his diet!

Making pies that achieve perfection isn't as difficult as it sounds. Standardized equipment (such as measuring cups and spoons) and oven thermometers and heat control have taken the uncertainty out of measuring and baking. With a proven recipe, good ingredients, standard equipment and some easily acquired technique, any woman can make good pie and make it every time!

Pointers on Making Pastry.

1. Unless you are making hot water pastry, have the ingredients for making pie crust cold.

2. Cut shortening into the flour, using a pastry blender or fork; or, if you're an experienced cook, and work quickly, blending in the shortening with fingers is permissible.

3. Add water sparingly, using only enough to hold the ingredients together. Handle dough as little and as lightly as possible after adding water.

4. Roll out the dough on a lightly floured board or on a heavy canvas. Cover the rolling pin with a child's white cotton stocking (with the foot cut off) and flouring it lightly simplifies handling the dough.

5. Place the dough loosely in the pan to help prevent shrinking.

Grandmother's Sour Cream Pie.

1 cup raisins (coarsely cut)
½ cup water
¾ cup sugar
1 cup sour cream
2 eggs (beaten)
1 teaspoon vanilla
⅛ teaspoon salt
Pastry

Combine raisins, water, and sugar, and simmer for 5 minutes. Mix the sour cream and the eggs, add the stewed raisins, vanilla and salt. Bake in a double crust at 400 degrees for the first 10 minutes, reducing the temperature to 350 degrees for 40 minutes longer.

Lemon Meringue Pie.

1 cup sugar
¼ cup cornstarch
¼ teaspoon salt
⅔ cup cold water
¾ cup boiling water
3 egg yolks
1 tablespoon butter
¼ cup lemon juice
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind

Combine sugar, cornstarch, and salt. Add cold water and stir until smooth. Then add boiling water and cook, stirring constantly, until mixture is clear and thick. Cook 3 minutes longer. Beat egg yolks and stir cooked mixture into them. Add all remaining ingredients, return to flame and cook 1 minute. Pour immediately into baked pie shell. Top with meringue.

Meringue.

3 egg whites
6 tablespoons sugar
⅛ teaspoon salt

Beat egg whites partially; then add sugar slowly, beating until mixture is stiff. Bake in slow oven (300 degrees) for 18 minutes.

Flaky Pie Crust.

(Makes 2 pie shells)
1½ cups flour
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup shortening
3 to 4 tablespoons ice water

Sift flour and salt into mixing bowl. Add shortening. Chill 20 to 30 minutes, then cut in the shortening until it is about the size of peas. Add ice water gradually, mixing only until the dough can be gathered up into a ball. Chill at least ½ hour. Roll out on a piece of canvas cloth which has been stretched taut over dampened table-top or bread board. Slip child's white stocking (without foot) over rolling pin, flour canvas and rolling pin, and roll out dough to ⅛-inch thickness. Fit lower crust in pie tin. If baking a one-crust pie, prick with fork, and bake in hot oven (450 degrees) 12 to 15 minutes.

Pumpkin Chiffon Pie.

(Makes one 10-inch pie)
2 tablespoons gelatin
¼ cup cold water
3 eggs
1 cup sugar
1½ cups pumpkin (strained)
½ cup milk
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon ginger
½ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
¼ teaspoon clove

Soak gelatin in cold water for 5 minutes. Separate yolks and whites of eggs. Beat yolks until light, and combine with half of the sugar, the strained pumpkin, milk, salt, and spices. Cook over hot water until the mixture thickens, stirring constantly. Remove from fire, add gelatin, and stir until dissolved. Cool. When the mixture thickens, beat the egg whites until stiff but not dry, and gradually beat in the remaining sugar. Fold into the pumpkin. Pour into baked pie shell and chill thoroughly before serving. May be served with whipped cream generously sprinkled with ginger-snap crumbs.

Magic Mocha Nut Tarts.

2 squares unsweetened chocolate
1⅓ cups (1 can) sweetened condensed milk
½ cup strong coffee
1 cup walnut meats (cut fine)
Baked tart shells

Melt chocolate in top of double boiler. Add sweetened condensed milk, and stir over boiling water for 5 minutes or until mixture thickens. Add coffee, stir until thoroughly blended. Add chopped walnut meats. Pour into baked tart shells. Garnish with remaining chopped nuts. Chill before serving.

Custard Pie.

(Makes 1 pie)
2 cups milk (scalded)
3 eggs
5 tablespoons sugar
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
Dash nutmeg
1 pastry shell (baked)

Scald milk. Beat eggs slightly and to them add the sugar, salt, milk, and vanilla extract. Mix thoroughly and pour custard mixture into a well oiled pie plate. Bake in a slow oven (300 degrees) until custard is set—about 40 minutes. In a second pie plate, exactly the same size as that used for the custard pie, bake a one-crust pastry shell. Cool. Then when the custard is thoroughly cooled and just before serving, gently slip the custard right into the pastry shell. Serve at once.

If there's any one thing in the world that people like in the way of good things to eat, it's nothing more or less than hot breads. Hot breads get a man's vote every time!

set forth on his first voyage. The next objective will be San Lucar de Barrameda, where Columbus' third voyage started. The Mary Otis will sail up the Guadalquivir river, the route of the Spanish treasure galleons to Seville. The historians in the party will study Columbus' marginal comments in his books on the Columbian library at Seville, look up certain points in the Archives of the Indies, and visit Cordova, where Columbus first met Ferdinand and Isabella, and where his son Ferdinand was born.

The next objective will be Porto Santo, the island near Madeira where Columbus married the daughter of a Portuguese gentleman, and lived for some time. After a call at Fuchal, the expedition will proceed to the Canaries, the jumping-off place for three out of four of Columbus' voyages.

From San Sebastian, Gomera, Canary islands, the two vessels will follow approximately the

From Lisbon the party was to ...il to Huelva, opposite the Con...ent of La Rabida and the sea...t of Palos whence Columbus route of Columbus' third voyage to Trinidad, and identify the landfall of the three hills which gave him the idea of naming the island after the Holy Trinity.

After calls at Port of Spain, Curacoa and Cartagena, they will pick up the route of his fourth voyage and follow it along the Central American coast, as far as Honduras. This was the second most important of Columbus' voyages, for he discovered a large section of the mainland, began the first European settlement on terra firma (Santa Maria de Belem), and paved the way for the discovery of the Pacific. Yet it is the least known; and a number of the places such as his refuge harbor in or near the Gulf of San Blas, the Rio de Veragua, and the site of Belem itself, have never been certainly identified. The vessels will probably spend Christmas at Puerto Limon, Costa Rica.

Voyage Ends in 1940.

From Central America the expedition will stretch across the Caribbean to the northern coast of Jamaica, where Columbus spent over a year; and if time permits will clear up some doubtful points about his course around Hispaniola. The voyage will end in Haiti about February 1, 1940. This is not intended to visit the Bahamas because Columbus' landfall at San Salvador has been identified and his course through the Bahamas accurately traced by the late Admiral Murdock, Rudolf Cronau, Glenn Stewart, and George B Massey.

As the expedition includes at least eight experienced navigators there will be constant analysis of Columbus' work as a seaman and navigator in connection with the existing accounts of his voyages Some historians have hailed Columbus as the greatest navigator of all time, while others claim that he was a mere landlubber with a big idea; yet none of these authorities ever took the trouble to follow his courses themselves, and few knew anything about navigation. This revaluation of Columbus as a seaman and navigator will be the most important part of the expedition's work. A second part of the work will be to identify the American places touched at in his four voyages; and a third will be to obtain photographs of the coasts that he followed.

The party does not expect to find anything new or startling about Columbus. It will supplement the excellent research on portions of his life by scholars such as Von Humboldt, De Lollis, Charcot, Harrisse, Vignaud, Magnaghi, and Windsor by investigations in the ocean field. A select library of about 300 volumes of Columbiana will be aboard to aid the navigators in their work. The expedition does hope to achieve a better understanding of the most momentous voyages of modern times, and accurately to rewrite the opening chapters of American history. It will attempt to do for Columbus what Francis Parkman did for the history of France in the New World.

The Capitana, Commodore Morison's "flagship" has had an interesting history. She began life 10 years ago as a three-masted, gaff-headed British schooner yacht. Her mizzen was subsequently shortened and she became a ketch. In preparation for this voyage, Captain Hammond completely rerigged her with sails and gear from other large yachts. The foremast has a staysail rig and two or three of the Aloha's old yards will be crossed for the tradewinds. By that time she can probably be called a barkentine.

Unlike Columbus' Capitana which, of course, had to depend entirely upon the winds to propel her across the Atlantic, Morison's Capitana has a 250-horsepower Diesel engine to keep her going should she become becalmed. The ketch, Mary Otis, built in South Bristol, Maine, in 1936, is only 45 feet long but she has already made two ocean crossings under Captain Stevens.

Both vessels are manned by a distinguished crew of scholars and practical seamen, all of whom will take part in the work of operating their respective ships and all of whom, except those in the steward's department, will take turns "standing watch."

The expedition has been largely financed by those who are accompanying Professor Morison on the voyage, with the aid of grants from the Mellon Educational foundation of Pittsburgh, the Carnegie corporation of New York, the Milton fund of Harvard and several other companies and individuals who contributed such supplies as sails and gear, a direction finder, a two-way radio set, a surgical kit, heraldic designs and flags.

Most Americans are familiar with the story of Christopher Columbus but how many of us have a clear picture of what took place on that historic October day 447 years ago in a little island in the West Indies? Modern scholarship has found but little to correct in the record as it is set down by Washington Irving in his "Life and Voyages of Columbus." He wrote, in part, as follows:

"It was on Friday morning the twelfth of October, that Columbus first beheld the New world. As the day dawned he saw before him a level island, several leagues in extent, and covered with trees like a continual orchard. Though apparently uncultivated, it was populous, for the inhabitants were seen issuing from all parts of the woods and running to the shore. They were perfectly naked, and, as they stood gazing at the ships, appeared by their attitudes and gestures to be lost in astonishment. Columbus made signal for the ships to cast anchor, and the boats to be manned and armed. He entered his own boat, richly attired in scarlet, and hiding the royal standard; while Martin Alonzo Pinzon, and Vicente Yanez, his brother, put off in company in their boats.

"As he approached the shore, Columbus, who was disposed for all kinds of agreeable impressions, was delighted with the purity and suavity of the atmosphere, the crystal transparency of the sea, and the beauty of the vegetation. On landing he threw himself on his knees, kissed the earth, and returned thanks to God with tears of joy. His example was followed by the rest, whose hearts indeed overflowed with the same feelings of gratitude. Columbus, then rising, drew his sword, displayed the royal standard, and assembling round him the two captains, with Rodrigo de Escobedo, notary of the armament, Rodrigo Sanchez, and the rest who had landed, he took possession in the name of the Castilian sovereigns, giving the island the name of San Salvador.

"The feelings of the crew now burst forth in the most extravagant transports. They had recently considered themselves devoted men, hurrying forward to destruction; they now looked upon themselves as favorites of fortune, and gave themselves up to the most unbounded joy. They thronged around the admiral with overflowing zeal, some embracing him, others kissing his hands. Those who had been most mutinous and turbulent during the voyage were now most devoted and enthusiastic. Some begged favors of him, as if he already had wealth and honors in his gift.

"The natives of the island, when, at the dawn of day, they had beheld the ships hovering on their coast, had supposed them monsters which had issued from the deep during the night. They had crowded to the beach and watched their movements with anxiety. When they beheld their boats approach the shore, and a number of strange beings clad in glittering steel, landing upon the beach, they fled in affright to the woods. Finding, however, that there was no attempt to pursue or molest them, they gradually recovered from their terror, and approached the Spaniards with great awe. During the ceremonies of taking possession, they remained gazing in timid admiration at the complexion, the beards, the shining armor, and splendid dress of the Spaniards. The admiral particularly attracted their attention, from his commanding height, his air of authority, his dress of scarlet, and the deference which was paid him by his companions; all which pointed him out to be the commander. When they had still further recovered from their fears, they approached the Spaniards, touched their beards, and examined their hands and faces, admiring their whiteness. Columbus was pleased with their gentleness and confiding simplicity, and suffered their scrutiny with perfect acquiescence, winning them by his benignity.

"As Columbus supposed himself to have landed on an island and at the extremity of India, he called the natives by the general appellation of Indians, which was universally adopted before the true nature of his discovery was known, and has since been extended to all the aboriginals of the New world."

A Question Only Smith Has the Right to Ask

Jones was strolling down the street when he saw ahead of him what he thought was the familiar figure of a friend. He quickened his steps, and, catching him up, hit him a hearty thump on the back.

The other turned round, and, to Jones' horror, presented the face of a complete stranger. "I beg your pardon!" he exclaimed. "I thought you were a friend of mine, Smith by name."

The stranger recovered his breath, and answered with considerable heat: "And suppose I was Smith, do you have to hit me so hard?"

But Jones was ready for this. "And what business of yours is it," he cried, "how hard I hit Smith?"

BOOTLEGGERS

Rumors that Iowa citizens are objecting to application of the "bootleg cigarette" law, and to the campaign against bootleggers of home made or not of state liquor, are not viewed very seriously by officialdom. Cigarette dealers who maintain business establishments representing sizable investments pay stiff license fees for the right to sell cigarettes. They are entitled to protection against the chiseler who pays nothing and who avoids the tax. Close supervision of the new cigarette law has brought the state many thousands of dollars in extra revenue and is preferable to new taxes in some other form. There is no point in any legitimate liquor consumer purchasing any other than Iowa liquor because Iowa prices are as low as any. Liquor profits help materially in paying the state's overhead expenses, making funds available for homestead exemption credits, etc. Curtailment of bootleggers, a recent commission report reveals, is responsible for increases in state liquor profits rather than any increase in consumption.

ROAD CONTRACTS

Twenty Iowa farm to market road construction contracts in eight counties are the latest additions to the program authorized early this year by the legislature. These contracts plus $450,625 worth of work previously let will bring the amount of work placed under contract this year to $762,248. Another $250,000 worth of similar work is expected to be submitted to bids at the October 3 meeting of the commission. This will bring the total amount under contract to about $1,000,000. The commission has plans under consideration to let an additional million dollars worth of contracts before January 1 in order to place under consideration half of the work authorized by the farm to market law for the next two years.

HALF IOWA COUNTIES

Projects now let to contract and those which will be under contract within the next ten days are located in twenty-seven counties. Similar projects in twenty-two other counties are expected to be written into definite plans which will bring the total to half the counties in the state. The farm to market road fund for 1939 and 1940 amounts to $4,561,000 of which $2,061,000 comes from federal secondary road aid and $2,500,000 from the state's primary road fund. The commission plans to have all the work possible under contract and much of it completed by the time the legislature convenes again in 1941.

SCHOOL

We come to school to get a better knowledge of that which will be useful in whatever walk of life we may take, and to prepare us to encounter all obstacles with greater ease

Some of the subjects may seem vague and hard to digest, but we are really confronted with only a minor difficulty if we endeavor to get as much out of school as we can Some perhaps, do not take school seriously as others, but almost everyone realizes the significance of school.

School is not all work. There are outside activities such as music, dramatics, and athletics which provide for a variety and do away with some of the monotony of studing

Although many have a pessimistic view of school, I don't believe anyone dislikes the coming of the last day of school.

HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

In American literature the juniors and seniors are each reading a novel by American authors.

In sociology the junior class listens to a vocational program every Monday, on the radio. So far we have heard discussions on "Homemaking" and "Agriculture" as a career.

This week the freshman home economics girls have been studying about quick breads. Monday we cooked cream of wheat. We cooked some in milk, some in water, and some of the girls put dates and raisens in theirs. Tuesday we made muffins. We made various kinds of muffins. We made jelly, peanut butter, breakfast, date, raisens, cornmeal and just plain muffins. Friday we made gingerbread. We made two different kinds.

One day last week we had our first fire drill From now on we will have them every month.

MUSIC HIGHLIGHTS

Mixed Chorus is getting along fine with 24 members. This year we have high hopes of entering this group in the contest. Irene Becker is our pianist.

The 14 band members who attended the concert, Saturday, given by the United States Marine Band, at Hampton, all reported it was very good as well as educational.

Mr Batchelder will try several of the band members, next week, at conducting. Perhaps Klemme has an unknown Sousa.

SHAKESPEARE'S THEATER

Want to see a good play, do you? Well, "Cross My Heart" is one you will certainly enjoy. The books of this comedy should arrive the first part of the week and rehearsals will begin as soon as possible Miss Michalek, third and fourth grade teacher, will direct the production Watch this column for further information.

SPORTS

The baseball boys are somewhat pleased over that "snazzy" hat of coach's, but they are beginning to think it's causing all the bad luck at the games. He has worn it to every game except Woden, and WE WON.

Along with the glad news of winning a game, comes a report that the team came home with a few bruises including an enlarged mouth. One thing coach likes is a lot of chatter, but things were fairly quiet at Widen. One poor guy misjudged a high fly, and it hit him in the mouth, so when coach asks for a little chatter in the outfield, things are extra loud.

We are hoping coach burns that hat before basketball season starts, because things are going to be different then There are rumors of starting our first basketball practice within the next two weeks. So every freshman boy who knows how to toss corn into a wagon box, come out for practice, because it's just as easy

GRADES 1 and 2

We have been coloring on our easel Mr Montgomery is making us a new one. Our old one is too small

We have brought elm, cottonwood and maple leaves to school.

Dorance brought a jack-o-lantern to school. We sang a Halloween song.

Nancy, Peter, Richard T. and Roger brought orange crates to school. We shall make some furniture for our play corner.

GRADES 3 and 4

We were very happy to get some new library books for our room. They are very interesting.

We have finished our imaginary trip across the United States. Next six weeks we shall take a geography trip to the Amazon River and explore the jungles there.

In art we made finger-paint designs of the fall trees. We also drew trees in black and white design.

The following had a 100 percent in spelling this week: Wm. Montgomery, Rose Schaefer, Edward Grosshuesch, Esther Hartbeck, Velma Tiggerman, Helen Suckow, Irene Netland, Iris Rosendahl, Isabelle Gibbs and Marjorie Lau.

...ay for fall is the talk o' town ... showing in the coat sections are ...y smartly styled models in gray ... that are attractively trimmed with gray kidskin or squirrel or with chinchilla, also sheared beaver. The revival of chinchilla as a fashionable fur is a notable outstanding event this season. The enthusiasm for red which is so apparent throughout style centers this fall leads to coats and costumes of this gay hue that are trimmed with contrasting fur. Striking are the new ripped-in-at-the-waist coats recently shown.

A newcomer to the fur fashion picture is burgundy-dyed silver fox, processed by bleaching the skins and dipping them to a beguiling reddish red tone. See it in unique and lavish treatment on the jacket suit pictured to the left. A velvet pill box in matching burgundy is worn with coque feather trim in like color.

Slate blue and soft gray was selected for the eye-arresting ensemble shown to the right in the group. Gray caracul is deftly manipulated to fashion the close-fitting collar, full length sleeves and combination muff handbag. The coat zips from the neck to its belted waist where the skirt hangs in unpressed pleats. The turban is in slate blue to match the smartly detailed coat. The dress is gray.

Ideal for early autumn is the costume centered in the group. This dressy ensemble includes a crepe frock with a bolero that has fox fur sleeves. The color is beige, to match with a wrapped turban of the crepe is added plus suede bag and gloves.

The arrangement of fur as portrayed in the inset reflects unerring chic. Here black crepe and silver fox combine to achieve a stunning costume. The dress is simply made with a circular skirt. The placement of fur on the brief jacket is intricate and artful. A draped turban with black aigrettes posed at the front tunes to the call for "stylish black."

Mode Brightened By Plaid Woolens

Strikingly handsome and gay plaid woolens are enlivening the present mode in more ways than one. Young girls are wearing plaid wool skirts topped with cunning snug velvet jackets crowning the costume with a jaunty Scotch plaid little hat. Plaid is also fashionable for jacket suits and the topcoats of plaid showing this season are gorgeous to behold. Some are made in soft dressmaker style; others are strictly tailored. The monotone coat lined with plaid is also a style winner.

One of the newest notes sounded is the use of plaid in an accessory way. Milliners are making hat and bag sets of bright wool plaids that set off the new black coats and dresses to perfection. When the plaids trim monotone forest greens or browns or the new wine colored wools they carry the costume color in their own weaves highlighted with multi-colored plaided patternings.

Flared Skirt Is Still a Favorite

Despite the fact that the big news of the Paris season is the straight skirt, and practically every designer shows it in one version or another, there is plenty of evidence that the popular flared skirt is far from finished. Sponsored by such important names as Lelong, Molyneux and Mainbocher, it has a firm place in the mode and is being shown with a new sophistication.

The flare doesn't start at the belt in schoolgirl fullness but is controlled and fitted to well over the hip. Individuality and newness are achieved by Lelong not only through the lower and more intricate flare but by blouse and belt details as well.

By Virginia Vale

WAR pictures of all varieties are on their way to your neighborhood theater or one near it. Some are new, some are old. Those of us who were going to movies during the last war will recognize in some everything but the actors as products of the past. However, with sound, and new people going through the motions, no doubt they'll seem new enough.

"The Road Back" is to be reissued by Universal, with the scenes that were deleted when the picture was made in 1937 because of an official request that they be omitted, in a desire not to annoy Germany.

It looks as if Gary Cooper might as well reconcile himself to wearing a uniform whenever he steps in front of a camera. His current picture, "The Real Glory," presents him as an American lieutenant in the medical corps, way back in 1906. He'll begin work shortly in "Blackout Over Europe," which deals with air raids in the present war.

Andrea Leeds has announced her engagement, and not to an actor. It's to be hoped that marriage won't mean her giving up her career; she has come so fast in so short a time.

ANDREA LEEDS

Rising to fame with a scream in "Stage Door," she's gone right along; in "The Real Glory" she gives an excellent performance.

The March of Time is stepping into the full-length feature field with "The Ramparts We Watch," based on the book by Major George Fielding Eliot. According to the announcement, it "brings to the screen a new production idea in feature pictures with a realistic plot that carries a terrific impact in view of the events in Europe today." Work started about the middle of September in New London, Conn., and the picture will have no connection with the regular March of Time issues.

Many a girl would like to know Joan Fontaine's formula for getting what she wants. She does it every time. She married Brian Ahearne, causing several young actresses in New York and points west to gnaw the woodwork in rage. Now she's slated for the lead in "Rebecca," for which many tests were made and many wires were pulled. Olivia de Haviland's younger sister seems to be doing all right for herself, while Olivia goes right along, looking perfectly beautiful in costume pictures and confining romance to the screen.

Maybe those spectacular musical pictures will return to the screen, if you show that you like them. "On your toes," with Zorina, will act as a thermometer; if audience approval shows that the temperature is right, there'll be more like it.

Grace Moore may do one called "Say It With Music," incorporating incidents from her own life and a lot of Irving Berlin's music. Incidentally, Miss Moore once again proved herself the darling of the ship news reporters, when she returned from Europe recently; she always makes a statement that makes the headlines, whether she's sailing away or sailing home. This time she was going to rush back to France and join an ambulance corps —after she finished engagements to sing in concert and opera, etc.

Johnny Green, who used to wave the baton for Columbia pictures, and does now for the Johnny Presents programs on the air, has proved that he is a serious composer. "Elizabeth" happens to be Mrs. Johnny Green as well as Betty Furness of the films.

THE TEMPTATION OF JESUS

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 4 1-11

GOLDEN TEXT—For we have not an high priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities, but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin.—Hebrews 4 15

Temptation is the common lot of all mankind (I Cor. 10.13). The strongest and most noble of men are subject to it; angels were tempted, and our scripture reveals that even Jesus was tempted. We recognize that Jesus was tempted as the Messiah (vv 3, 6) and as one without sin (Heb. 4:15), but it is also true that He was tempted in all points as we are, apart from sin, and that we may learn from His temptation how we may meet and be the victors over temptation.

I. What Is Temptation?

"Temptation is seduction to evil, solicitation to wrong It stands distinguished from trial thus: trial tests, seeks to discover the man's moral qualities or character, but temptation persuades to evil, deludes, that it may ruin. God tries, Satan tempts" (A. M. Fairbairn)

Temptation is not sin, but yielding to temptation is sin. Luther said, "We cannot keep the birds from flying over our heads, but we can keep them from building nests in our hair." Temptation comes from within, that is, from our own lusts (James 1.13, 14). Satan also tempts us (Eph. 6 11) God may permit temptation as a means of proving our faith (James 1 2, 3).

II. How Temptation Works.

It is significant that the temptations of Jesus were along the threefold line of the temptations of Adam and Eve (Gen. 3:6) and the general threefold temptation of all men, namely, the lust of the flesh, the pride of life, and the lust of the eyes (I John 2:16). These three temptations really exhaust Satan's bag of tricks, but he can dress up these three fundamental temptations with almost endless variety. He works

1. By appealing to the flesh (vv. 2, 3). He observes the normal appetites and desires of a man's body, excites them to a high degree, and then suggests an improper method of satisfying them. Hunger is normal and a sign of good health. Jesus had fasted forty days and Satan took advantage of that fact to suggest the use of His divine power to satisfy His hunger. This would involve a denial of His entire mission on earth, namely, the redemption of man by a divine person who had become a real man.

2. By appealing to pride (vv. 5, 6). Satan misapplied Scripture to tempt Jesus to presumption on the assumption that He was exercising faith. God had promised to keep Him "in all his ways" (Ps. 91:11). To cast himself down from the temple was not one of the ways in which Christ was called to walk. Satan comes to us with the same kind of temptation. If He cannot get us to forsake faith, he tempts us to become fanatic and to proudly substitute presumption for faith.

3. By appealing to the eyes (vv. 8, 9). By showing Christ the kingdoms of the world and offering them to Him by the short-cut of a brief act of worship rather than by the way of the cross, Satan tempted Him again Here the devil showed his true desire that man should worship him rather than God.

III. How to Meet Temptation (vv. 4, 7, 10).

1. By the right use of Scripture. If Jesus needed that weapon, how can we do without it? How can we use Scripture if we do not study it and hide it in our hearts?

2. By dependence on God. Every Scripture used by Jesus honored God. We cannot fight Satan in our own strength. To attempt to do so is to fail utterly. The real victory for the Christian is to bring Satan back to the cross where Christ won a decisive victory over him.

3. By denouncing Satan. Jesus sent him on his way. We may do the same in Jesus' name. It is always a serious error to try to argue with Satan or to engage in any discussion with him. Let us meet him with Scripture and with a "Get thee hence."

IV. The Result.

Satan left and angels came to minister to Christ. The overcoming of temptation results in peace, victory, and blessing. This is ever so in the life of the believer. Temptation overcome makes us stronger to meet the next temptation, and also enables us to help our weaker brethren.

Framing Our Lives

Religion does not consist in the performance of certain ceremonial acts at specified times, outside which acts and times it has no place: but consists in framing our whole life, and all our acts, upon a distinct view of our position as created beings, charged by the fact of our creation, with duties both to our fellow creatures and to our Creator —Edward Denison.

IOWA SCHOOL SYSTEM IS CENTURY OLD

Fully half a million children attend the public schools of Iowa They may trace this privilege back to January 1, 1839, when Governor Robert Lucas approved an act of the First Legislative Assembly authorizing the establishment of common schools which should be "open and free for every class of white citizens between the ages of four and twenty one years." The county board was directed to form districts when petitioned to do so by a majority of the voters residing within a proposed district. Three trustees, a clerk, a treasurer, an assessor, and a collector were to be elected at the annual meeting which was also responible for building a schoolhouse and levying a school tax

The trustees were required to examine and hire the teachers, lease the land belonging to the distric, report the number of children in the district and the number sent to school, and keep a record of the "actual time" the school was in session and the "probable expense of the same" Tht school tax was not to exceed five mills on the assessed value of the property in the district, or more than ten dollars a year for any one person, payable "either in cash, or good merchantable produce at cash price"

The law of 1839 seemed adequate to develop a system of free public schools Indeed, Governor Lucas expressed the opinion that the law "might appear to be in advance of the times" Dubuque organized a school district in 1839 but no record of the establishment of similar public schools in other towns has been found Two rural areas in Lee County were organized as school districts in February 1840 In 1938 Iowa contained 4,873 school districts, 21,156 members of boards of education, and 26,215 teachers. The story of public school beginnings in Iowa is told by Dr. J A Swisher in the September issue of "The Palimpsets"

OUTLOOK FOR LAND VALUES UNCERTAIN

Land values in Iowa have been "remarkably steady" for the last 4 years, but the outlook for the immediate future is uncertain. If war continues, higher farm prices will bring higher land values, Iowa State College extension agricultural economists declared this week

Last Year

"Except for a 1-point rise last year the United States Department of Agriculture's index for Iowa land values has not changed since 1936," the economists pointed out. "For the last 2 years, Iowa farm land has been worth an average of $88 per acre, or 74 percent of it's 1912-14 value. For the United States as a whole land values have declined slightly during the last year"

The economists declared that although the average value of Iowa's farm land has shown little change since 1936, some shifts in value have taken place within the state.

"In general," they said, "there has been a tendency for values to hold steady or rise slightly on better quality land and to decline slightly on the poorer land. In sections where the 1934 and 1936 dreuths were the most serious, land values are still suffering from reduced farm income".

Iowa Sportsmen Will Get 3-Day Pheasant Season

Iowa This Year Is Raising Nearly 2 Million Turkeys; Fourth In U. S.

Standing at fourth place in a $70 million industry, Iowa turkey producers this year are raising 30 percent more birds than they did in 1938, according to A D. Oderkirk, poultry marketing specialist in the Extension Service of Iowa State College

Using figures from the Agricultural Marketing Service, Oderkirk reports that this year producers are raising 1,802,000 birds, and that the state is surpassed only by Minnesota, California and Texas.

Iowa's present production represents a 16-fold increase over the number raised in 1929 when the state raised 112,000 birds and was thirty-first among turkey producing states.

22 Percent Increase

For the country as a whole an increase of about 22 percent in the size of the turkey crop this year over 1938 is indicated by September 1 reports.

Producers apparently are marketing an unusally large proportion of their turkeys earlier this year. Oderkirk said In Iowa the proportion to be marketed in October or earlier is indicated at 30 percent and the proportion to be marketed in November at 31 percent.

Demand Improving

Consumer demand is improving and probably will average higher than a year earlier during the entire 1939 turkey marketing season But with marketing expected to be the largest on record, the outlook is for turkey prices to continue below 1938 levels.

Turkey prices for young hens in Iowa on Oct. 7 of this year were 24 and a half cents per pound as compared with 26 cents on the same date last year Young toms had a top of 22 cents per pound on Oct. 7, compared with a spread of 27 to 34 cents for different weights at the same time last year

Storage To Be Large

Probably a large part of the 1939 crop will go into storage, Oderkirk said. But this year the storage will be planned in advance rather than a storage of what cannot be sold at Thanksgiving and Christmas.

Since exports and imports of poultry and eggs have never represented more than a very small proportion of domestic production it is not expected that the war will have much direct effect on the poultry and egg industry The general stimulus to domestic activity and consumer incomes will however, add to the domestic demand for poultry and eggs.

RAISING STRATOSPHERE PUMPKINS IS POST MASTER DAY'S SPECIALTY

When the frost killed the leaves on one of Post Master Day's plum trees thus baring it to view, he saw two well formed pie pumpkins suspended in the top most branches of the tree! The pumpkins must be sort of "stratosphere" variety that like to get up in the world where it is nice and dry.

John claims the pumpkins will make "high" class pie, and after all the idea conserves space by growing plums and pumpkins on the same tree. It's a good idea for any Democrat!

HERE'S ONE FOR MR. RIPLEY,S FAMOUS BOOK OF QUEER FACTS

Belive it or not, but at the bridge party held at the home of Mrs C G Waterman last Thursday, three ladies ended up the games by each having a bridge score of exactly 4,070 points! This three-way tie score was held by Mrs. W H Galbreth, Mrs R R. Reece and Mrs. C G Waterman!

It is a rare thing to have two persons turn in the same score after playing a number of games of bridge, but to have three persons have the same score is most unusual, and to top the thing off that was also high score for the afternoon, believe it or not!

American Legion Auxiliary Notes

The regular meeting of the unit was held Oct. 12th at the home of Mrs P W Johnson Seventeen members were present

The unit voted to place an order for 600 poppies. This is 100 more than last year and will be paid for at the time of ordering.

It was also voted to assume responsibility of an assigned child this year This is a new project for the Klemme Unit Although it has been very popular for several years. The state organization assigns an under priviledged child to each unit who, on request of the welfare worker, furnishes clothing, special birthday and Christmas gifts-money for school books for their protege.

The children's identity is never revealed to the units, although it is known that they are from veterans home Children who are under priviledged and need a helping hand for a few years are thus given aid without being taken from their homes.

Europe's a Great Place If You Want to Reduce; War Brings Ration Diets

By MARIE BENNETSON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

LONDON.—Tanks, machine guns and airplanes to the contrary, an army still travels on its stomach.

And in wartime, it's still the folks back home who must tighten their belts and make the most of a weekly food ration that lets them up from the dinner table minus that "satisfied feeling." America's World war food restriction, which featured "meatless," "wheatless" and "sweetless" days, were child's play compared to restrictions now imposed on civilians in Germany. Here's the rations for one week:

Meat, including the precious sausage, 17½ ounces, including the bone. Butchers are reported trying to sell pig heads because bones will then be reckoned as only 10 per cent of the weight.

Fats, 80 grams, or less than three ounces of butter; four ounces of margarine or oil, two ounces of lard, bacon or tallow, and two ounces of cheese.

Sugar, about nine ounces; syrup or jam, 3½ ounces.

Bread, five German pounds, reduced if the rationee buys flour.

Coffee's a Fake.

Groceries, 25 grams (or less than an ounce) of barley, yellow corn, flour, rice, oats, spaghetti or similar foods; 25 grams of starch products; four ounces of coffee substitute.

Skimmed milk, all you want. Regular milk, a pint and a half daily for children up to six years old; half pint daily for older children, and a pint daily for pregnant women and young mothers.

Flour, less than a pound a week. Soap, one piece of utility soap and 2½ ounces of toilet soap. Shaving soap, one stick a year. Potatoes and onions are not rationed, and Germans can buy all the fish they want—except that none are available. This winter there'll be one egg a week for every German.

But food prices, both in Germany and Britain, are kept low. Germans who are able try to supplement fundamental foods with high grade vegetables.

Britain Has Full Larder.

By contrast, France has no food problem, being principally an agricultural nation. And Britain, although she has distributed ration cards, has vast amounts of foods stored in her larder. Moreover she is still able to import while Germany is hemmed in by a blockade. Probably the Reich can count on Russia for some raw materials, but not unless she can supply the Soviet with manufactured items in return. And German factories are kept busy turning out war supplies.

The importance of food in winning a war is not overlooked by military experts, who agree that victory always goes to the nation with the greatest physical resistance. This is a psychological factor, too, for a well-fed soldier at the front goes weak when he learns that his family back home is hungry. That is one reason Germany has cut off all communications between civil and military groups during the present war.

Reich in Bad Spot.

It was food that won the World war, and Germany is making a bad start in the new conflict. For in 1918, at the very end of the last war, Great Britain was eating better than the Germans are today. Then Britain's weekly domestic consumption of meat per person was 1.54 pounds. There was one-half pound of sugar, .45 of a pound of fat and 6.57 pounds of white bread and flour. Contrast this with Germany's current rations.

On the other hand, the Reich is accustomed to thin diets. Ever since National Socialism came into power it's been a choice between butter and guns, and guns have usually won. Several weeks before the current hostilities began, German housewives were ordered to limit their weekly purchases. Hence the people are psychologically and physically prepared for food rationing, having learned from experience how to get the most nourishment from the least amount of food. Americans would probably starve on the same diet.

CANNED BREAD—Strange foods arise in time of war. This English lady is packing bread in hermetically sealed tins. It tastes like toasted bread and keeps perfectly.

Mechanized Warfare Rolls on Wheels But You Can't Beat Horses in a Pinch

Europe Again Clamors for U. S. Cavalry Mounts, Mules, Work Horses.

By LELAND PRENTICE
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

WASHINGTON.—European war demands are already keeping American horse traders up nights. The army mule and cavalry horse have come into their own again despite a lot of talk about mechanized armies, and the United States may once more become the source of supply for France, Britain and other nations, just as it was during early days of the World war.

But while foreign buyers are scouring farms and ranches of the West for war horses and pack mules, there are at least two elements working against them.

First, there are only about half as many horses to choose from as in 1914-18.

Second, the American Humane society hopes to shut off even that supply. A few weeks ago it asked President Roosevelt "in the name of humanity . . . to include animals in the list of supplies that may not be supplied to belligerents."

Recall World War Rush.

Old timers on the western ranges recall how European buyers swarmed through the mountains 25 years ago, paying high prices for horses and mules to replace those which had been shot, gassed or worn out on the battlefield and on shell-pocked roads.

Today's buyers would find only 10,800,000 horses and 4,382,000 mules in the United States, against 21,431,000 horses in 1915 and 4,239,000 mules in 1910. This 50 per cent decline is attributed to mechanization of the farm, a movement in which tractors and trucks are cultivating, hauling and plowing where horses and mules formerly supplied the motive power.

Riding Horses in Poor Shape.

More important, the type of animal has changed. There are plenty of heavy draft horses nowadays, but these are too slow and eat too much for army use. The buyers would find a fairly good supply of medium-sized draft horses, suitable for pulling guns and wagons, but there are only 4,500,000 animals in the entire nation suitable for the most important wartime use—cavalry. And most of these riding horses are too old or too young, too light or too unsound for the heavy tasks of waging war.

OH, FOR A MULE'S LIFE!—These aged army mules are retired to green pastures after their service days are over. They used to be shot, in keeping with a law providing such a fate for senescent mules unless they have a distinguished service record.

Horse cavalry regiments are still an important unit of the average army, despite mechanization. France has 42 such regiments against only five regiments of mechanized cavalry. Germany has 17 horse cavalry regiments and England has only five, principally because she fears she would be unable to obtain a continuous supply of animals.

Canada, oddly enough, has only two such regiments, while Italy maintains 12. Japan, which has no mechanized cavalry, maintains 25 mounted regiments. The late Polish cavalry, counted on to raid German troops in the recent eastern war had the autumn rains arrived on time, was the world's finest. Russia, big in everything, has no less than 90 horse cavalry regiments ready to take the field.

Exports Up in 1914.

During the World war American horse exports jumped from 22,776 in the year ending June 30, 1914, to 189,340 in the following year. Of this latter number, France took 130,000 head; England bought 83,839; Canada, 53,036; Italy, 20,634; Scotland, 6,908.

As war continued, the demand became greater. Private ranch stock and riding horses went under the hammer and in the year ending June 30, 1916, exports reached the peak of 357,553 head. The following year the United States shipped 136,698 head of mules, but after that our own army took all surpluses.

The recent Polish war, in which the vanquished army depended so much on its cavalry, did not disprove the value of animals in combat against mechanized forces, for had the conflict lasted longer inclement weather would undoubtedly have placed heavy tanks and troop trucks at a disadvantage.

U. S. FARMERS JOIN FEW ORGANIZATIONS

Church Ranks First Among Rural Groups.

By PROF. W. A. ANDERSON

The belief that most farmers belong to a large number of organizations is discounted by studies of the department of rural social organization at Cornell university.

In a study of nearly 3,000 farmers in a typical United States rural neighborhood, it was found that they belong to only one or two organizations, on the average, but are loyal to them. Twenty per cent of the farmers belong to no organizations, and 30 per cent belong to only one. Membership in three organizations appears to be the upper limit for most farm operators.

Organizations in which memberships are held in order of their numerical importance, he says, are: the church, grange, dairymen's league, farm bureau, lodge, other co-operatives, and a social-civic group. Membership in the church leads among farmers who belong to only one or two organizations.

The "joiners," those who belong to several organizations, appear to have these characteristics: they own rather than rent their farm; they operate a large farm rather than a small one; their farms have a higher assessment value than others; they are more stable as to residence and do not shift frequently; and they have had, in general, better schooling.

Another point is that "organization-mindedness" is more noted in men past 30 years of age than in those younger. Fewer of the younger group belonged to organizations. Two causes explain this. First, the younger men are just getting established and need time to enter organizations; and second, they are somewhat overlooked by the older men in organizations. More might join if they were invited.

U. S. Farm Women Use Healthful Family Diets

Better living for the family through better health continued to be a principal aim of thousands of homemakers on American farms last year, according to reports from extension workers in home economics in all parts of the country.

Better health through more adequate diets was an important part of the home demonstration program in more than 37,000 communities. Demonstrations conducted by extension agents representing the United States department of agriculture and the state agricultural college helped homemakers learn what constitutes a generously adequate diet. How to provide that diet the year around with available home-produced and purchased foods was the subject of other meetings.

As a part of this program farm women and 4-H club girls reported that they canned 70,000,000 quarts of fruits, vegetables, and meats. A total of 407,000 families served better-balanced meals as a result of recommendations of home demonstration agents, while 169,000 families followed food-buying recommendations discussed in extension meetings.

Boys and girls in 16,138 schools had better lunches because home demonstration groups and similar organizations provided hot dishes to supplement the noon lunch brought from home.

Home demonstration agents in some states, assisted by public health agencies and local physicians, held child-health clinics in hundreds of communities.

Telephone Service

There is only one service given to farmers by the smaller telephone companies in the United States which farmers in other countries probably do not receive. This is the handling of fire alarms reported over the telephone. Most telephone companies in this country spread fire alarms to fire departments and to neighboring farmers free of charge without, of course, assuming any liability. This service has contributed much to rural fire protection and reduction in losses. Telephone companies include in their directories instructions to both employees and subscribers for the handling of fire alarms. Telephone operators have an enviable reputation for the service they render in such emergencies, and all of it is done without any added income to the telephone companies. Such service makes the telephone a real aid in the protection of life and property on the farm.

Animal Hair Valuable

Everything that comes from the farm, it seems, has a definite use in adding to the well being of humanity—even the hair from farm animals. Although the value of the hair from one animal may amount to only a fraction of a cent, the total worth of the hair processed and sold in the United States last year was more than $2,000,000, according to the men who curl it and make it ready for use. Main use is for cushioning furniture seats.

Crusty, piping hot bran muffins are family favorites.
See Recipe Below.

For a Special Treat Serve Hot Breads

Was there ever a family that didn't adore hot breads? Biscuits that melt in your mouth, muffins that are feather-light and crusty and full of flavor, or a golden corn bread with the tantalizing taste of bacon to make it even more delicious—all these are special treats for a hungry family.

Serve hot muffins or flaky biscuits at the next church supper or the first fall dinner meeting of the guild, and watch them disappear like snowflakes on a warm spring day.

It's easy to achieve success with hot breads if you'll follow just a few basic rules. A tested recipe, good ingredients, accurate measurements, deft handling, and the proper temperature for baking are the factors of success.

If you've had difficulty with quick breads that are coarse textured and full of the long holes called "tunnels" in all probability you've been over-conscientious in mixing. Unless otherwise specified, mix lightly and only enough to blend the ingredients.

When you're making baking powder biscuits, remember that a little kneading goes a long way toward making biscuits flaky and light.

A simple recipe for baking powder biscuit is the starting point for a variety of tempting breads. Make "Pinwheels" by rolling out biscuit dough to ¼-inch thickness, brushing with melted butter, and spreading generously with grated cheese, deviled ham, or thick jam. Roll up the dough as for jelly-roll, cut in slices, and bake in a hot oven (425 degrees).

Picture by an Obscure Newspaper Artist Inspired Thomas Buchanan Read to Write An American Classic—'Sheridan's Ride'

SHERIDAN'S RIDE TO THE FRONT—From a drawing by Sol Eytinge Jr., which appeared first in Harper's Weekly in 1864 and was reprinted in 1867 with a statement by Thomas Buchanan Read saying that it inspired him to write his famous poem "Sheridan's Ride."

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

TWENTY-FIVE years ago this month occurred an event which is familiar to every American—"Sheridan's Ride." For it was on the morning of October 19, 1864, Gen. Phil Sheridan, famous cavalry leader in the n army, was aroused from sleep in a house in Win-ter, Va., by a staff officer who reported heavy artillery g from the direction of Cedar Creek, where his army stationed.

ereupon "Fighting Phil" nted his coal-black ger, Rienzi, and "rode rd the sound of the " to find that his army being routed by a sur- attack by Gen. Jubal arly of the Confederate lry. How he checked the of his disorganized s, gathered up the glers, formed a new of battle and transformed seemed to be a disas- defeat into a Union vic- is too familiar a story to retelling here.

was one of the most dra- incidents of the War Be- the States but it is not im- ble that the memory of dan's exploit might have be- dimmed through the pass- the years had it not been poet. For, just as Henry worth Longfellow helped talize Paul Revere by writ- poem about his famous ride opening of the Revolution, Thomas Buchanan Read m a similar service for Sheridan.

there is another man who d be mentioned along with in connection with this fa- poem. You probably have heard of him, for he was a ial artist" for an illustrat- eekly newspaper and, al- h he helped make a pic- record of the greatest civil the world had ever known, me is all but forgotten now. if you will leaf through the of Harper's Weekly until you to the September 14, 1867, you will find reproduced the picture shown above with it this statement:

e reproduce on this page the sting engraving of "Heri- Ride to the Front," pub- three years ago; and in ction with it we give the ed verses of T. Buchanan now well known and ad- throughout the country. It e seen by the following note the distinguished author the poem was inspired by picture of Mr. Eytinge:

New York, Aug. 29, 1867.
arper's Weekly:
Sir: In reply to your question, me pleasure to acknowledge that ed picture which you published eridan's Ride" inspired me with impulse to write the poem.
Very respectfully,
T. BUCHANAN READ.

m this it is evident that Eytinge, Jr., who was one arper's Weekly's "special " during the Civil war deserves some of the credit for the poem. And it is quite likely that he portrayed that historic scene more accurately than did Read, who was an artist as well as a poet. You will notice in Read's painting of "Sheridan's Ride," which is reproduced with this article, that he shows "Little Phil" impeccably dressed in his general's uniform, with his black hat set firmly on his head as he waves his sword in his right hand while his charger, Rienzi, seems to be suspenced in mid-air, with all four feet off the ground.

According to the testimony of men who saw Sheridan as he dashed toward Cedar Creek on October 19, 1864, the reality was quite different from Read's pictured version of it. Instead of being a veritable fashion-plate officer, Sheridan and his mount were dust-covered and grimy. Most of the time during his ride he was carrying his cap in his hand because he always had difficulty in keeping a hat on his "round, bullet-like head"! In another respect Eytinge's picture is undoubtedly more accurate historically than Read's. It shows Sheridan with a full beard, instead of a moustache, and photographs taken during the Civil war confirm Eytinge's accuracy in this detail, as well as the detail of his wearing a cap instead of a hat for his headgear.

If Read was inaccurate as a painter, he was equally careless of facts as a writer—unless, of course, "poetic license" is sufficient justification for error. In the first place, Sheridan wasn't "twenty miles away" as the poem has it. It was only 13 or 14 miles from Winchester to Cedar Creek and Sheridan had his first view of his disorganized army at Mill Creek, less than a mile from Winchester. From there to the actual "front"—if there was such a thing on that day of near-panic and near-disaster—it wasn't much more than nine or ten miles.

SHERIDAN'S RIDE—From the painting by Thomas Buchanan Read, author of the famous poem by that name.

SHERIDAN'S RIDE

Up from the South at break of day,
Bringing to Winchester fresh dismay,
The affrighted air with a shudder bore,
Like a herald in haste, to the chieftain's door,
The terrible grumble, and rumble, and roar,
Telling the battle was on once more,
And Sheridan twenty miles away.

And wider still those billows of war
Thundered along the horizon's bar;
And louder yet into Winchester rolled
The roar of that red sea uncontrolled,
Making the blood of the listener cold,
As he thought of the stake in that fiery fray,
And Sheridan twenty miles away.

But there is a road from Winchester town,
A good broad highway leading down;
And there, through the flush of the morning light,
A steed as black as the steeds of night,
Was seen to pass, as with eagle flight,
As if he knew the terrible need;
He stretched away with his utmost speed;
Hills rose and fell; but his heart was gay,
With Sheridan fifteen miles away.

Still sprung from those swift hoofs, thundering South,
The dust, like smoke from a cannon's mouth;
Or the trail of a comet, sweeping faster and faster,
Foreboding to traitors the doom of disaster.
The heart of the steed, and the heart of the master
Were beating like prisoners assaulting their walls,
Impatient to be where the battlefield calls;
Every nerve of the charger was strained to full play,
With Sheridan only ten miles away.

T. Buchanan Read

Under his spurning feet the road
Like an arrowy Alpine river flowed,
And the landscape sped away behind
Like an ocean flying before the wind,
And the steed, like a bark fed with furnace ire,
Swept on, with his wild eye full of fire.
But lo! he is nearing his heart's desire;
He is snuffing the smoke of the roaring fray,
With Sheridan only five miles away.

The first that the General saw were the groups
Of stragglers, and then the retreating troops,
What was done? what to do? a glance told him both,
Then striking his spurs, with a terrible oath,
He dashed down the line, 'mid a storm of huzzas,
And the wave of retreat checked its course there, because
The sight of the master compelled it to pause.
With foam and with dust the black charger was gray;
By the flash of his eye, and the red nostril's play,
He seemed to the whole great army to say,
"I have brought you Sheridan all the way
From Winchester, down to save the day!"

Hurrah! hurrah for Sheridan!
Hurrah! hurrah for horse and man!
And when their statues are placed on high,
Under the dome of the Union sky,
The American soldiers' Temple of Fame;
There with the glorious General's name,
Be it said, in letters both bold and bright,
"Here is the steed that saved the day,
By carrying Sheridan into the fight,
From Winchester, twenty miles away!"

IF THE public likes Lon Chaney Jr. in "Of Mice and Men" he's going to be one of the happiest young men in Hollywood. For he's severely handicapped in trying to carve a career for himself. As the son of a famous father he is expected to be better than average; what would be success for somebody else is just a passing grade for him.

He tried out for the lead in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," and didn't realize how lucky he was not to get it until he saw a revival of the film recently. "It made me realize more sharply than ever how good my father was," he remarked. "And what a tough time anybody will have trying to live up to the part. Anything I might have done would have been a pale carbon copy." Yet he had the courage to

Hollywood was all interest when Lillian Gish began making tests for "Triumph Over Pain"—the prospect of her being co-starred in it with Ronald Colman made the town's older inhabitants look way back to the days when Lillian went to Italy to screen "The White Sister," with a young English actor who'd appeared only on the stage booked to be her leading man.

That engagement put Ronald Colman into the movies to stay, but Lillian abandoned the screen for the stage a few years later, and now a whole new generation of movie goers will have to get acquainted with her if she returns to it.

It looks as if Marlene Dietrich has decided to be herself; she stays around when she's not in front of the cameras, in "Destry Rides Again," instead of retiring to her dressing room, and the rest of the cast has decided that she's really regular.

In the course of the picture she has a battle with one of the other girls, which makes one wonder if that fight between Paulette Goddard and Rosalind Russell in "The Women" has started a cycle. Remember what happened when Jimmy Cagney squashed a grapefruit in a girl's face!

It's All Wrong

A lunatic was trying to knock a nail into a wall. But he had the head of the nail against the wood and was hammering the point.

At length he threw down the nail in disgust and said: "Bah! Idiots! They gave me a nail with the head at the wrong end."

Another inmate of the asylum who had been watching, began to laugh.

"It's you that's the idiot," he said.

"Why?"

The other jerked his thumb at the opposite wall. "Nail was made for the other side of the room," he said.

The Greater Deed

To pity distress is but human; to relieve it is Godlike.—Horace Mann.

Watch Your Kidneys!
Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste
Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.
Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.
Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder may be burning, scanty or too frequent urination.
There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

MEAT DUMPLINGS

The addition of dumplings to a stew or chicken or veal is a good way to extend a small amount of meat to serve a large family. Cook the meat with carrots, onions and other vegetables, if you wish. When the meat is tender, drop the dumpling batter, by the spoonful, on top of the stew; cover tightly and steam for fifteen minutes without removing the lid. The batter for the dumplings is made by blending two cups flour, two teaspoons baking powder and one teaspoon salt Mix in one tablespoon fat and add a cup if milk, stirring only enough to combine the ingredients.

MRS. HERB BAILEY WAS HOSTESS TO MEETING W. F. M. SOCIETY

Syble Webner, Kenneth Schlawin Wed, Wednesday, Oct. 4

Miss Syble Webner, daughter of Mr and Mrs. Daniel Webner, of Klemme, became the bride of Kenneth Schlawin, son of Mr and Mrs. R A. Schlawin of Garner, at the Peace Reform Parsonage, on Wednesday, Oct. 4. 1939 at 4 o'clock The Rev Wm Huenemann performed the single ring ceremony

The bride wore a plum colored gown with matching accessories. The bridesmaid, Miss Hilda Peterson, wore a grape colored gown, with matching accessories. Each wore a mixed bouquet of ,roses, carnations and sweet peas.

The bridegroom was attired in a navy blue suit. His attendant, the bride's brother, Ted Webner, wore a dark green suit. Their boutonniers were of white carnations.

A wedding supper was served at the home of the bride's parents, after which a reception was given at the Garner Opera House in honor of the bridal couple.

The bride grew to womanhood in the vicinty of Klemme, and the bridegroom is employed at the Garner Auto Sales Co.

Mr. and Mrs. Schlawin will make their home in Garner.

Just as though we didn't already have enough to worry us, a friend stopped us on the street the other day and told us the story of the two barber shops.

The first barber shop made the following charges:

|---|---|
| Hair cut | 40c |
| Shave | 20c |
| TOTAL | 60c |

The second shop made the following charges:

|---|---|
| Hair cut | 35c |
| Shave | 25c |
| TOTAL | 60c |

A Scotchman studied the prices carefully. He discovered that by getting a shave in the first barber shop and a hair cut in the second shop, he could affect a saving

He went to the first shop and paid 20 cents for his shave, so he saved a nickel there. He went to the second shop and 35 cents for a hair cut, so he saved another nickel there. "Fine," he said to himself, "I've saved 10 cents."

But 20 cents plus 35 cents makes 55 cents, despite the fact that he had saved a nickel on each item. How come?

OUT FISHING

Ah, luxury Beyond the heat
And dust of town, with dangling feet
Astride the rock below the dam,
In the cool shadows where the calm
Rests on the stream again and all
Is silent save the waterfall—
I bait my hook and cast my line,
And feel the best of life is mine

No high ambition may I claim—
I angle not for lordly game
Of trout, or bass, or wary bream-
A black perch reaches the extreme
Of my desires, and "goggle-eyes"
Are not a thing that I despise,
A sunfish, or a "chub", or "cat"—
A "silver-side"—yet, even that·

In eloquent tranquility
The waters lisp and talk to me
Sometimes, far out, the surface breaks,
As some proud bass an instant shakes
His glittering armor in the sun,
And romping ripples, one by one
Come dallying across the space
Where undulates my smiling face

The river's story flowing by,
Forever sweet to ear and eye,
Forever tenderly begun—
Forever new and never done
Thus lulled and sheltered in a shade
Where never feverish cares invade,
I bait my hook and cast my line,
And feel the best of life is mine

HANDY PRESCRIPTION

The report that the judges were unable to read the signature of the successful architect for the new Dundee art college recalls the classic story relating to a medical man's prescription:

After receiving the medicine, the patient used the prescription for years as a railway pass, twice as an invitation to a dance, once as an invitation to a society wedding, and later as a letter from his employer instructing the cashier to raise his salary. And in the evenings his daughter played it over on the piano!—Edinburgh Dispatch.

Constipation Relief That Also Pepsin-izes Stomach

When constipation brings on acid indigestion, bloating, dizzy spells, gas, coated tongue, sour taste, and bad breath, your stomach is probably loaded up with certain undigested food and your bowels don't move. Tests prove the power of Pepsin to dissolve those lumps of undigested protein food which may linger in your stomach, to cause belching, gastric acidity and nausea. This is how pepsinizing your stomach helps relieve it of such distress. At the same time this medicine wakes up lazy nerves and muscles in your bowels to relieve your constipation. # re Gay Plaids and Stripes This Season Than Ever Seen

ALL the enthusiams taking he world of fashion by storm eason, there is none that ex- the mad rush that is now on orgeously gay plaids and s.

showings in plaids and stripes es types for every occasion, nal or formal. When you want nality the biggest daytime hit season is the richly colorful clan plaids and if you are a isseur on plaids you can get patternings and colorings that uthentic. Robin Hood reds, for- reens, golden yellows, radiant s and heather tones mingle in rand splurge of gay color that s merry throughout the whole am of fashion this season and ean just that for everything hats to bags, gloves to wear cloth coats and suits and en- costume ensembles is being of plaid (or stripes if you e) this season.

to formal evening occasion, you seen the gorgeous metal- ded silk and wool stripes that eing made into jackets, blouses kirts for dine and dance wear? t, the joy of anticipation is . The newest dinner dresses ast fabrics and colors after manner shown to the right in picture. In this instance the is of yellow jersey, topped with ket-blouse of yellow metal cloth ontally striped in exotic greens range, and stripes of glittering weave.

trikingly beautiful dinner gown ctured below to the left. The waist top is of lustrous black t. The long flared skirt of wool is plaided in brilliant of gold, green, cyclamen and wine. Two large buttons con- spicuously enhance at the waistline. Which reminds us that designers are very enthusiastic in regard to ornamental buttons, either large and colorful like these, or veritable jewel pieces in their settings of colored stones.

If there is a school-faring maiden who has not turned plaid-minded this season during this epidemic of plaids now sweeping through fashion realms be it known that she is certainly an exception to the rule. When you see such eye-compelling outfits as that shown above to the right in the illustration one readily understands the reason why such a fuss and furor is being made over handsome wool plaids this fall. This most attractive daytime frock fashioned of fine Scottish clan wool plaid was selected for illustration from among a flock of gorgeous plaids displayed at a prevue showing of autumn and winter fashions presented by the Style Creators of Chicago. It is typical of schoolgirl choices this season.

Had you thought of a Roman striped wool jacket to wear with different skirts, of dark monotone wool? The biggest argument we can make in favor of such a selection is the stunning style pictured above to the left in the group. Here is an example of the effective way in which designers are working out color alliances. Under this Roman striped wool jacket this lady of high fashion wears a chartreuse blouse of silk crepe draped from a demure neckline and rendered uneven at the waistline by a black serpentine belt. The plain skirt is of black wool.

Metal Cloth

gain metal cloth for the cocktail dinner gown becomes first page s. The picture shows a flatter- mode carried out in gold lame. naivete of the smocking on sleeves is offset by the luxuri- clips of topaz and diamonds at top of the midriff girdle. Not does fashion spotlight gowns e entirely of metal cloth as in instance but equally in favor jacket blouses worn with velvet ts.

Porcelain Chains Scoring Success

With pottery and china jewelry scoring such success, it has been only a short step to the use of porcelain for their chains. Thin plastic links rather than metal for necklaces and bracelets are sometimes opaque and sometimes transparent and will not tarnish as some metals do. They are, of course, much lighter than metal, and add the finishing touch to the whole scheme of lightweight jewelry.

Three in One New Design in Coats

Something startlingly different in fur coats for next season is the three-in-one design. It is made as a jacket, skirt and sash. When the jacket and skirt are worn together, they make a full length coat, with the sash for a belt. The jacket can be worn separately, as can the skirt, which, combined with the sash, forms a cape that will do for evening wear.

Winter Blues

Last fall, and many preceding falls, saw you tucking away until spring all of your blue clothes. This year that will not be necessary, for navy blue is to be worn while the snow falls; and winter blue, a new shade, will be worn as an accessory color with black.

Three Golden Feathers

One of the most beautiful pieces of jewelry seen at the Paris openings was designed by Maggy Rouff. Three golden feathers, veined with tiny diamonds, are held together by a diamond-studded bowknot.

THE CITIZENS OF THE KINGDOM

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 5:1-16.
GOLDEN TEXT—Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven.—Matthew 5:16.

Great and historic discourses are preserved with care and are read by succeeding generations with profit and interest even though they are recognized to be the utterances of weak and fallible men. The lesson before us presents what is "undoubtedly the greatest single discourse ever uttered by any teacher or statesman or philosopher in the whole history of the human race" (Smith). Take up your Bible and read the words of the text.

These verses are addressed to believers, to those who have actually taken Christ as king of their lives. These beatitudes are not a substitute for the gospel. They are not laws that the unbeliever can keep and thus be saved, for this would be utterly impossible for anyone to do, except the one who has been born again. Only he who knows and has called upon the power and grace of God in Christ can qualify to walk as a citizen of His kingdom.

I. The Christian's King (vv. 1, 2).

The words which fell from the blessed lips of the Lord Jesus on that day as He sat on the mountainside were not the powerless declarations of an earthly philosopher or statesman, but of the Son of God who had humbled Himself and become the Son of Man who was still the King of kings and the Lord of lords. If you have not given glad and free allegiance to Him, do it now and you will then be ready to go on and learn of the Christian's character and influence which may be your possession in Christ.

II. The Christian's Character (vv. 3-12).

The eight characteristics of the Christian here presented are worthy of extended individual attention, but we can offer only brief suggestions.

"Blessed are the poor in spirit" speaks of humility as a commendable quality. How contradictory the present-day philosophy which calls for self-assertion and self-reliance. But Jesus is not mistaken. The way into the kingdom of heaven is not that of assertive self-sufficiency.

"Blessed are they that mourn." The world does not believe that statement. It shuns the house of mourning. It tries without avail to philosophize away the fact of sorrow. The Christian, on the other hand, feels with his fellow man and thus receives a blessing.

"I walked a mile with Pleasure,
She chattered all the way;
But left me none the wiser
For all she had to say.

"I walked a mile with Sorrow,
And ne'er a word said she;
But, oh, the things I learned from her
When Sorrow walked with me."

"Blessed are the meek." Ah, yes, poverty of spirit comes when a man rightly sees himself, and has a sympathetic touch with sorrow. Then he "inherits the earth," because he truly comes to enjoy it as a place of service and Christian growth, and not because he has a deed to a single foot of its soil.

"Note that it is the hunger and thirst for righteousness, and not the possession of it, that is blessed" (Plummer). Self-satisfied people know nothing of the glory of having such a hunger and thirst filled by God.

Time fails us to speak of the Christian's spirit of mercy which invites divine mercy; that purity of heart and absolute cleanness of mind and sincerity of purpose which enable a man really to see God even in this impure world; that Christlike spirit which makes him a peacemaker in a fighting world—yes, that spirit which makes him like the Master in sweetly bearing unjustified persecution. These indeed are the marks of the man who follows Christ as King.

III. The Christian's Influence (vv. 13-16).

"Salt" and "light"! What pungent and powerful folk are the real followers of Christ!

Salt fights against rottenness, keeps things sweet and fresh. Dr. J. H. Jowett says, Christians "are to confront rottenness in politics; they are to meet it in the realm of business; they are to make for it in the field of sport; they are to be its enemies in the crowded streets of common intercourse; they are to defeat it in the quiet and sequestered ways of art and literature; everywhere they are to provide the antidote to corruption, and they are to overcome and destroy it."

Light has one function, namely, to illuminate. Wickedness and sin always love darkness, because their deeds are evil (read John 3:19-21). If Christ really dwells in us we cannot help but shed light about us wherever we go—a divine light which drives out the darkness of sin, of ignorance, of superstition, and replaces it with the sunlight of God.

Strange Facts

Adam's Day
Slow in Anger
Spotted Aristocrats

The world's 250,000,000 Moslems observe Friday as their Sabbath because, according to Mohammed, this was the day Adam was created, the day he entered and was also expelled from Paradise, the day of his repentance, the day of his death and the day he will be resurrected.

Chameleons are "slow-motion" fighters. When two enemies start a battle, many minutes, even hours, pass between each thrust and parry. Sometimes the only way that one can tell a fight is in progress is by the color of their skins, which have turned black with rage.

Increasing age diminishes attendance at the movies to an astonishing degree. Surveys indicate that the number who no longer attend increases from 50 per cent at the age of forty to 75 per cent at sixty to 98 per cent at eighty.

Although about nine thousand members of Britain's aristocracy and sporting world are admitted to the Royal Enclosure at Ascot, England, at each meeting, thousands are excluded because they are in bankruptcy, involved in a divorce, owe too much money to a bookmaker or have not been presented at a royal court.—Collier's.

Flowered Hat Came To Do Double Duty

A young matron found herself somewhat hustled by the number and variety of her engagements.

One day in particular she found troublesome, for she had to go first to a funeral service and then to a garden party.

She solved the dress problem by wearing smart but sober clothes and taking in a hat box a flowered hat which, during the service, she placed in the vestry.

Her sense of quiet pleasure at this successful solution of the problem was somewhat marred, however, when the coffin was brought into church. For reposing in the center of the wreaths on the coffin was her flowered hat.

Name Changes

Siam is the latest country to change its name. It is now to be known as Muang-Thai, the land of the free.

Towns sometimes change their names, too. Comparing the latest U. S. Postal Guide with former issues, a newspaper finds that "Frugality has disappeared from Pennsylvania, Graft from Colorado, Coin from Kentucky, and Truth from Arkansas." Worst of all, Love, Arkansas, has become Ash Flat.

Love let down. And burned out.

Three Styles in Aprons.

This practical pattern, 1829, really gives you three apron styles, because the pinafore part is perforated so that you can make it two ways, and both ways are thoroughly protective and useful, with buttoned straps, crossed in the back, that won't slip off. ## Treaty Language

French is still the language used in treaties concluded between more than two powers. French is employed also in the third copy of treaties drawn between two countries in their own languages, the French translation to be decisive in case of a difference of opinion as to the precise meaning of the other texts.—Collier's.

Would Reduce State Rent

Appraisers Recommend Smaller Amount For Liquor Warehouse

Gov George A Wilson Thursday said two appraisers had recommended that the state pay either $18,000 or $19,433 a year rent for the state liquor commission's warehouse and central office building here

The commission has been paying an average of $27,000 a year for the last five years

Taking into account the $57,000 spent by the state in improving the building and heating costs, the average annual rental has been "nearer $39,000 a year," the governor said

Both the state and the Mulberry Realty company, owner of the building, had agreed on the selection of Geis Botsford and J Paul Neal as appraisers to recommend a rental figure, the governor said

Botsford report declared $18,000 a year to be ample

The liquor commission Thursday held its second meeting with Sidney Mandelbaum of Des Moines, member of the Mulberry Realty firm Any lease arrangement would have to be approved both by the executive council and the interim committee. The old lease ran out last May 1 and no rent has been paid since

REMAKING THE HOME

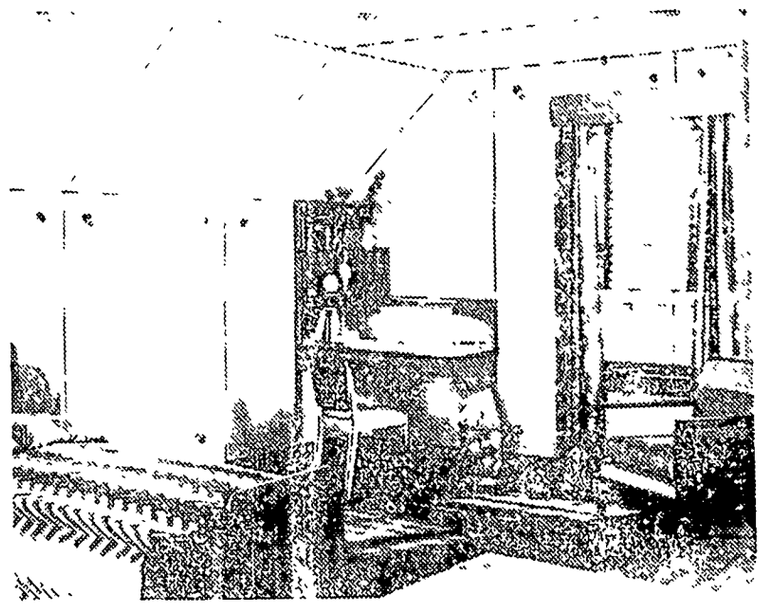
By JANNETT ALLEN



An extra room or guest room is waiting for you in your own home in that unfinished attic of yours

All very well, you say, to have that extra space, but can you afford it? Oddly enough you not only can afford it, but actually can save money by doing it in the proper way

There is no mystery about the process If your attic is properly refinished with a board that insulates as it builds, you will save about 50 per cent of the heat loss through your roof Too many houses apparently are trying to heat the great outdoors by allowing their heat to leak out The roof area of the house is the main culprit in this respect

By turning the attic into a finished room with insulation board walls, you thereby obtain an extra room which will pay its own way and provide an annual dividend in fuel economy The heat leakage which, with cold weather, take big bites out of the family purse, will be reduced

The extra room which will so cleverly add living space and cut fuel bills may take many forms, according to the needs and tastes of the family I know one that was turned into a game room, another into a children's library, a third into a photography dark room.

The simpler the wall finish of the extra room, the better Large sheets of cane fiber board lend themselves especially well to the attic finishing job, since they cover a lot of surface with little carpentry Left in the natural tannish color the walls will make pleasing background for any sort of furnishings If color is desired paint may be used Calcimines and water paints should be applied directly to unsized cane fiber board though calcimine may be applied to the board over a varnish size to facilitate removal by washing It should be sized before oil or varnish paints are applied

Lots Of Ducks First Day

LOCAL SPORTSMEN REPORT GOOD SHOOTING ON OPENING DUCK DAY

Although all ponds in this part of the state have been dry for some time and the outlook for the opening date on duck shooting looked none too bright, most local sportsmen report good bags for the first day, Sunday, October 22.

"Happy" Johnson and "Sum" Trumbell brought in their bag limit of ten ducks each which they shot along the river. "Stub" Lewis and "Dutch" Turgenson had a nice bag of sixteen ducks, and Paul Grange and son, Durance, brought in a nice bag they shot at Eagle Lake Other hunters reported fair luck.

In a report issued recently Leslie M. Carl, Director of the Cooperative Crop and Livestock Reporting Service for the Iowa and U. S. Departments of agriculture, stated that soybeans will be Iowa's fourth most important grain crop in 1939. MUSTN'T SAY IT!

Radio, Weary of Public's Complaints, Hires John Q. and Makes Him Censor

By GORDON GREENWOOD
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

NEW YORK.—The "fickle" public, which everybody tries so hard to understand, positively knows what it wants on the radio.

If there was some doubt on this point 20 years ago, in broadcasting's infancy, the fog is now completely dispelled. Not only do listeners register their reactions and complaints immediately, but they take the most direct approach—and talk straight from the shoulder.

A radio network's telephone switchboard works like a sounding board of public opinion, bouncing back the public reaction even before the program in question is off the air.

Words spoken in absolute innocence may precipitate minor chaos. For instance, a newscaster once told his listeners a certain situation was "like having the gas turned off on Thanksgiving day with your house full of guests." Within a few minutes irate telephoners were calling the National Broadcasting company to know why their gas would be turned off! (It was near Thanksgiving.)

Censor Rule Enforced.

After analyzing letters and protests from over the country, NBC has established a "you-can't-broadcast-that" rule for what appears to be slander, unverified reports, invasion of privacy and vulgarity. The entire radio industry generally follows the same rule.

Thus radio officials believe they have avoided censorship, not invoked it. As between strict government censorship and voluntary control from within, the industry much prefers the latter.

Behind every policy hangs a story. One day A. A. Schechter, NBC's special events director, received a "flash" that a passenger plane flying the Atlantic had not been heard from for several hours.

"Don't broadcast that," he told the news editor. His wisdom of self-restraint was clear 30 minutes later when a second bulletin announced that all was well aboard the plane.

Try to Avoid Confusion.

Suppose the first bulletin had been broadcast. The sudden and emphatic reaction would have been sorrow for some people. The second bulletin would have confused the situation, in addition to causing doubt about the veracity of broadcast reports. Nor was there assurance that everyone who heard the first bulletin would also hear the second.

MAN WITH BLUE PENCIL—A. A. Schechter, director of NBC's special events department. It's his job to look for potential dynamite as part of radio's program of self-censorship.

The wide panic following the famous Orson Welles "Mars" broadcast was an error of listening. Had the alarmists listened 15 minutes or more they would have heard the announcement that Welles was broadcasting a dramatization, not live hot news.

Schechter's wariness over tragedy reports dates back to the time a newscaster "flashed" an announcement from Hanover, N. H., saying nine Dartmouth college students had been killed by carbon monoxide gas in a fraternity house. This was certainly news. NBC's telephones handled hundreds of calls from distressed parents who wanted to know names. But none were available, and with 1,500 students enrolled at Dartmouth there was a lot of reassuring to do.

Guided by Experience.

That's the behind-scenes part of radio policy, and it's why broadcasters may withhold important news for hours while details are awaited. Experience, not mere theory, dictates procedure.

An analysis of protests show the Midwest shows stronger distaste for off-color humor and anti-religious dogmas than any other part of the country. The South demands high regard for womanhood and male chivalry. The Northwest sounds the praises of rugged individualism. North central states ask a progressive social outlook and New York city examines everything with the mind of an Old world critic.

Radio men are convinced we receive different sensations from reading and listening. You may, for instance, read war atrocity stories without feeling bitter about them, but when you hear a word-of-mouth description backed by the emotional stimulus of the human voice, you may become exercised, even moved to positive action.

A three-hour time-zone difference between east and west coasts always finds somebody sitting down to a meal, and, generally speaking, people are pretty sensitive about what they hear at mealtimes.

So it's the listeners, not the government or the broadcasters, who lay down radio's program policies.

Swiss Watch Ramparts Again, Ready to Ward Off Attacks Against 142-Year Neutrality

BERNE.—Little Switzerland, whose neutrality has been preserved and respected 124 years in the face of repeated warfare on all its frontiers, is once more watching its ramparts.

On every frontier well-armed troops stand guard to ward off belligerent planes or stop a sudden attack.

Though aged and peaceful, Switzerland is not missing any bets. Her defenses are up-to-the-minute, giving protection against any modern weapon a foeman may send against her. Typical is the fortress system surrounding her entire frontier, the novel automatic tank barriers which shoot out from Swiss highways at the press of a button, and her keen-eyed anti-aircraft battalions which are rated among the world's best.

New Border Threats.

Time was when Switzerland worried only about her northern and southern frontiers, bordering on Germany and Switzerland. But the Nazi juggernaut captured Austria, so the resourceful Swiss fortified on the east. Then, just for good measure, they arranged protection against any possible threat from France.

Swiss army organization is at once the world's most unique and most efficient. Voluntary frontier troops, organized in independent companies and highly mobile with their horses, bicycles and trucks, are assigned to ward off surprise attacks until regular army units can reach their positions.

At the moment of invasion, every man belongs to the army. Youngsters climb into alpine positions and oldsters take easier jobs in keeping with their individual capabilities.

Men Fully Equipped.

Mobilization is lightning fast. Only in a democracy like this can every soldier keep his complete outfit at home, ammunition excepted. Cavalrymen have their horses and cyclists their bicycles. Equipment is checked periodically under a severe control system.

When mobilization is called, it can thus be made an actuality within a few days, or even a few hours if necessary. "Light brigades," which consist of cavalry, cyclists, light artillery on trucks and machine guns on motors, form the vanguard of the army and may be thrown into a defense post at a moment's notice.

SKY SOLDIERS—Swiss alpine troops maneuvering on an icy slope of the Trient glacier.

One thing worries the Swiss—their electrified railroads, which could be decommissioned in a few hours with well-placed bombs. Hence the army's infantry units and their arsenals are widely decentralized to be within reach of a majority of men within a few hours.

Generals Are Scarce.

Only three times in its history has Switzerland had a military commander-in-chief. Under its constitution a supreme commander with powers over military and civil resources can be appointed only in times of general mobilization, and then only by election. Such a commander was General Dufour, who was commander-in-chief during the interior war in 1847; General Herzog, in power during the Franco-German war of 1870, and General Wille, commander from 1914 to 1918. There have been no others.

Between such emergencies the head of the Swiss military department is head of the army. He presides over the tongue-twisting Landesverteidigungskommission, or the board of national defense.

The Swiss are proud of their defense works. On the south they need worry chiefly about St. Gotthard and the Simplon passes. The former is protected by fortresses which have always been kept up to date, cut into solid granite rocks.

The Simplon entrance is through a tunnel which can easily be made impassable, and the road is guarded by a fort in the Gorge of Gondo.

"STUDS"—At a moment's notice, steel barricades can shoot up from these innocent-looking round spots on the Swiss highway, controlled by a concealed electric button.

SANITATION RETAINS GOOD MILK FLAVOR

Careless Handling May Result in Contamination.

By PROF. H. A. HERMAN

The application of modern knowledge and sanitary methods enable the dairy producer and distributor to protect the fine flavors of milk which meet the favor of the consumer according to research at the Missouri college of agriculture.

Bacteria may cause changes in the flavor of milk. Contamination of the milk by bacteria may come from careless handling of the milk or milk utensils, at any or all stages from the cow to the consumer. Strict cleanliness, proper cleansing and sterilization of utensils, and holding milk at low temperature will eliminate most bad flavors due to bacterial contamination.

The exposure of milk to rays of the sun seriously affects its flavor. The presence of iron or copper salts with the action of sunlight causes a speedier action than would otherwise take place. The type of off-flavor developing in this instance is usually described as "tallowy," "cardboard," "metallic," or "astringent." The use of poorly tinned milk cans, buckets, coolers, or vats is responsible for many off-flavors, and in addition add copper and iron salts to the milk, which aids in developing the flavors associated with exposure to sunlight.

Washing compounds or chemical disinfectants, if carelessly used, may be responsible for the addition of foreign flavors. It is recommended that only readily soluble, free-rinsing cleaners free from odors, be used for milk utensils. Chemical disinfectants such as chlorine solutions used according to directions cause little trouble.

After the milk is drawn, unless the strictest care and cleanliness are exercised, various off-flavors may be acquired.

Pasture Development Pays Good Dividends

Good pastures are good business for the farmer. In seven different districts of the country where the United States department of agriculture studied feed requirements for market milk production, pasture furnished nearly one-third of all feed, but was only one-seventh of the feed cost. On 478 corn belt farms, pasture furnished more than one-half the feed for beef cattle, but was only one-third of the total feed bill.

Because good pastures are a good investment, the AAA is helping many farmers in the northeastern, east central and a number of southern states to improve pastures with lime and superphosphate. In these regions, farmers may pay for lime and superphosphate with the conservation payments they earn for carrying out soil-building and soil-conserving practices. The farmers obtain the soil-building materials with the understanding that they use them to improve their pastures.

Farmers with depleted permanent pastures have found lime and superphosphate of particular value, for they aid desirable grasses and legumes in driving out and replacing weeds and poorer grasses.

Bin Capacity

One bushel of grain contains 1.25 cubic feet. One cubic foot contains .8 of a bushel. One bushel ear corn contains 2½ cubic feet. The floor area in square feet multiplied by 8, and this product divided by 10 gives the number of bushels in one foot height of bin.

A circular bin is measured as follows: The radius (one-half of the distance across) multiplied by the radius, multiplied by 22, and this figure divided by 7 will give you the cubic feet in one foot height. One cubic foot equals 7½ gallons, and one bushel equals 8⅜ or 8.375 gallons.

Farming Briefs

Terraces not only save soil, but are much less objectionable to cross than gullies.

If the combine or binder is greased and put away in good shape, it will be "ready for business" when next year's crop comes on.

One of the easiest sports to establish almost anywhere is quoits, or horseshoe pitching. Perhaps a twilight "barnyard golf" league might be popular among both old and young folks in a neighborhood.

Farm workers in Germany can't quit their jobs because of a recent order issued by Hitler. Farm owners cannot work elsewhere than on their own farms without official permission. Farmers and workers seem to be the chief sufferers from Fascism.

Where contour farming is practiced this leaves short rows, and sometimes small areas in a field that are not cultivated. Farmers are now using electric fences to pasture these odd-shaped areas.

INGRID BERGMAN is the heroine of the latest publicity build-up in Hollywood—perhaps the name isn't familiar to you now, but if it isn't soon the fault will lie with David Selznick's publicity staff. For Miss Bergman is the new Swedish discovery who makes her bow to film fans in "Intermezzo," with Leslie Howard.

She is pretty, charming and has a lovely smile. Stockholm is her home town. Whether she is as talented as her Swedish compatriot, Greta Garbo, remains to be seen.

"Intermezzo" is a romantic drama dealing with a world-famous musician who has to decide between home life with his family and the thrills of his life as an artist. Edna Best and John Halliday have supporting roles.

While Mr. Selznick was discovering a Swedish actress, Russian motion picture men were discovering an American one. Intorgkino, international film trading company for the Soviet Union, has bought Deanna Durbin's "One Hundred Men and a Girl" for distribution there. It is the first American picture bought for that market since 1936, when Charlie Chaplin's "Modern Times" and "City Lights" were purchased.

William Powell may appear in "Susan and God" opposite Greer Garson, who became famous overnight as a result of her appearance in Goodby, Mr. Chips." But the doctors have the last say in regard to Powel's taking on this new assignment; two weeks of retakes for "The Thin Man Returns" necessitated a rest, as his health still isn't what it might be.

"Drums Along the Mohawk," according to an announcement from Twentieth Century-Fox, will be 14 reels long when it is released. Not the longest picture ever offered to the public, but the longest in Technicolor. In case you didn't read the book, it's a swell story.

It's three times and out for "My Girl Friday," the new screen version of "Front Page." Irene Dunne was offered the lead, and refused it. Jean Arthur was offered the lead, and also refused it, which resulted in her suspension without pay for 12 weeks. (However, her contract will be extended for that same period.) The picture finally got started with Rosalind Russell in the role that the Misses Dunne and Arthur wouldn't touch with a 10-foot pole. As a rule, when this sort of thing happens in a motion picture studio, the actress (or actor) who steps in and saves the day makes such a success that she leaps ahead several rungs on the ladder to fame.

Every radio broadcast has to have a production man; his job, principally, is to sit in the control room and guide the progress of the show to split-second accuracy of schedule. Since radio began it's been a man's job. But CBS's "Grand Central Station" is produced by a woman. She's Betzy Tuthill, from Tucson, Ariz.

You girls who'd like to take on a similar job will be interested in the story of her career. After being graduated from the University of Arizona she worked with the Harvard Film Service, editing and cutting educational films. Then she went to work for Irving Reis, who was directing the CBS Workshop series. She looked after his mail, did some casting, read scripts and helped re-write them. First thing anybody knew she was in the studio, helping with production.

Glass-Making, First Industry Established On Continent of North America, Celebrates Silver Jubilee of a Revolutionary Discovery

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

THIS fall marks the 25th anniversary of a revolutionary change in the business of glass-making, an industry which traces its beginnings back more than 5,000 years and which was the first to be established on the North American continent. For it was just 25 years ago that the flat glass industry, with its modern ramifications into window glass, automotive safety plate glass, opaque colored structural glass of many kinds and plate glass with all its uses for mirrors and wall panels, "came of age" with the development of the Colburn process for drawing a continuous sheet.

So the year 1914 might be heralded as the true beginning of the "Age of Glass" and this fall it is celebrating its silver jubilee. This milestone in the development of America's oldest industry is, however, only one of many in its long and varied history.

Glass-making crossed the Atlantic to America with the first colonists, and the first glass manufacture in the New World was established at Jamestown, Virginia, in 1608. Capt. John Smith mentioned that he engaged in a rough and tumble fight with an Indian chief "one evening while returning to his house from the glass furnace."

America's first factory made glass beads to be traded to the Indians for furs, food and land. The artisans were Poles and Italians. They made the "money" which purchased the land of Virginia. The Indians are said to have obtained some revenge for the sharp trading by destroying the glass plant in the Jamestown massacre of 1622.

Other glass-making projects were organized in colonial America in endless succession. Most glamorous of the glass entrepreneurs was Baron Heinrich Wilhelm von Stiegel, who wasn't really a baron at all but who nevertheless lived in splendor like a feudal lord.

'The Baron' Arrives.

The baron arrived in Philadelphia from Germany in 1750 at the age of 21 and went to Lancaster county, where a year later he married Elizabeth Huber, daughter of an iron manufacturer. Stiegel learned the iron-making business and then began experimenting with glass. He returned to Germany to learn more about glass and brought artisans with him when he returned to America.

The Stiegel glass business was a huge success. He built the town of Manheim, Pa., near Philadelphia. His mansion there was the talk of the colony. He built a log castle on a hill called Thurm Berg. Whenever the baron arrived at one of his estates, three cannon boomed to announce to his friends that a celebration was to be held

Baron Stiegel loved the spectacular, liked to be the best dressed man anywhere around, liked to make generous gifts. He was a religious man, too. When he gave his fellow Lutherans land for a church in 1772, he demanded one red rose each June in payment. The Stiegel family still receives this tribute every year at the Festival of the Red Rose in Manheim. It is easy to understand why town folks spoke of him as "the baron."

When hard times came, other manufacturers pulled in their horns but Baron Stiegel tried to expand his business instead. He lost all his property, served a sentence in debtor's prison and died in poverty. A piece of genuine Stiegel glass is a treasure for collectors now.

Glass has hundreds of uses in the modern world but its application for windows in buildings and transportation vehicles transcends all the others.

The oldest known window glass was found in the ruins of Pompeii where panes half an inch thick were used to admit light to the famous baths. This was the kind of glass through which objects were "seen darkly." There was constant striving then to improve the transparency. The fall of Rome caused a thousand-year delay in the perfection of windows.

When Edward I of England brought Eleanor back from Spain as his bride, King Henry III was so delighted with the teenage girl that he gave the youthful couple a house which had real glass windows as a wedding present. Pope Pius II expressed surprise in 1448 at finding Vienna church windows fitted with glass. In 1467, frames to be fitted with paper were ordered for the duke of Burgundy's palace. And in the reign of Queen

Three generations in the same art—Ornamental glass blowing has been carried on in the Scott family since 1820. Her son, Dick, is a veteran of four years' experience at the age of 10. (Wide World Photo)

Elizabeth, the duke of Northumberland was warned by his steward that he had better have the windows taken down and stored when he left his estate. Even Charles II, the luxury-loving monarch who reigned from 1660 to 1685, had no glazed windows in his palace. These facts show how rare glass for windows was when America was colonized.

The demand for window glass rose during the Eighteenth century, but progress was slow in Europe and America. An unsuccessful attempt to manufacture window glass was made at Allowaystown, N. J., in 1738, and in 1790 a wealthy young man named Robert Hewes built a factory near Concord, N. H. This unsuccessful effort cost him his fortune.

The Boston Crown Glass company began operations in 1792 and became a financial success. Records show that it produced $82,000 worth of window glass in 1798. Glass made in the Boston factory was said to be superior to the imported product and was known as "Boston crown window glass." Specimens still can be seen in old colonial houses of New England.

"Crown glass" was made by gathering a large globule of molten glass on the end of a blowpipe, the glass then being blown into hollow spherical shapes. Then an iron rod, or punty, tipped with molten glass was applied to the opposite side of the sphere and the blowpipe was detached, leaving a hole. The globe attached to the punty was reheated and the punty given a sudden whirling motion that caused the globe to open and flatten to the form of a disc. The disc was removed, annealed in an oven, and then cut into small sheets.

The panes containing the "bull's eye" or "crown" where the punty had been attached were used for decorative effects and were employed largely for transoms and side lights of doorways. This method of making window glass was expensive and wasteful, and only small lights could be produced.

Inventors began a long effort to improve window glass and reduce the cost of manufacture. The hand process of blowing glass into cylinders—instead of globules—which could be flattened was a slight advance over the old crown glass method, and continued to be the accepted process until 1903. Glass was blown to form an elongated cylinder, the ends cut away, the cylinder split open and flattened. The next step was the machine cylinder process, which made possible larger sheets of glass and elimination of much arduous toil. Compressed air replaced human lung power and machinery did the heavy lifting.

Window glass made by the hand or machine cylinder methods never became precisely flat. The sheets had to be packed all the same way in boxes for shipping to allow for the bow in the glass. So Irving W. Colburn, a Pennsylvania inventor, began attempts to make flatter flat glass in 1898 in a small experimental plant at Blackford, near Philadelphia. He made little progress until 1905 when he saw a paper-making machine in operation and determined that sheet glass could be manufactured by a similar method. It had been his idea from the start that flat glass should be produced in sheet form instead of having to be flattened after it was made.

Spent a Million.

From 1905 to 1912, Colburn built machine after machine and spent more than $1,000,000 of his own and his friends' money. Success always seemed at hand but not quite within reach. The Colburn domestic and foreign patents were sold at auction in 1912 after the Colburn Machine Glass company was declared bankrupt.

Colburn's backers finally had lost confidence in his process, but Michael J. Owens, the master inventive mind of the glass industry and creator of the Owens bottle-making machine, believed that Colburn's basic idea was sound and that only refinements were needed. Owens induced Edward D. Libbey, his associate for many years, and the Toledo Glass company, of which Libbey was president, to purchase the Colburn patents from the trustee in bankruptcy.

Libbey, Owens and their associates redesigned the flat-drawing machine and after many months of effort and the expenditure of another million dollars the first wide ribbon of really flat glass was drawn in a continuous process.

When the Libbey-Owens Sheet Glass company, forerunner of the present Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass company, was formed in May, 1916, and purchased patent rights of the Toledo Glass company, Colburn was rewarded for his years of effort by receiving a liberal stock interest in the new company. This enabled him to discharge the many obligations assumed during the earlier years of his work and to provide for his family.

In the Colburn flat drawn process, the ingredients of glass—sand, ground limestone, soda ash, salt cake and cullet (broken glass)—are fed into the furnace and melted at a temperature of about 2,800 degrees Fahrenheit. The molten "metal" passes through a refining chamber and enters a shallow drawing pot.

By means of heat applied under and around the edges of the pot, the temperature is maintained at the proper degree for drawing. To start the drawing, the machine is placed in reverse motion, which allows a "bait"—a flat iron bar attached to strips of flexible metal—to pass over the bending roll, down into the molten glass. The glass immediately adheres to the bar, and the machine is started in forward motion.

Wide Ribbon of Glass.

Out comes a wide ribbon of glass, pulled by the bait—like pulling hot taffy out of a pan with a spatula—onto the horizontal flattening table and then to the long annealing oven, or lehr. When the bait reaches the end of the flattening table it is cracked off and removed, allowing the flat glass to continue through the 200-foot lehr.

The ribbon of flat glass is prevented from "pulling to a point"—as taffy or sealing wax does when an implement is lifted from the pot—by revolving knurled knobs and water-cooling along the edges, of the sheet which maintains a constant width. After it is annealed, the glass is cut to desired sizes, washed, graded and boxed for shipping.

The Colburn flat drawn process has made possible higher quality window glass at lower cost, and raised the standard of natural illumination for all interiors. It has made double glazing of residences economical and practical as a winter fuel-saving method where previously even single windows were virtually luxuries afforded only by the well-to-do.

Equally interesting is another phase of the glass industry—the history of the newest type automobile windows, dating from a spring evening in Paris in 1903 when Edouard Benedictus, a French chemist, dropped a bottle. When it struck the tile floor, the bottle bounced instead of scattering. Picking it up, Benedictus found the bottle star-cracked but held together by a celluloid-like enamel which had formed when its contents evaporated.

Benedictus later saw a taxicab collision in which a young woman was cut severely by broken glass. Then he thought of the bottle which did not shatter. He rushed to his laboratory and worked all night preparing the "cheese" for the first "safety sandwich." Two pieces of glass with a plastic filler between were squeezed in an old copy press. He used gelatin on the inner surfaces of the glass to hold the "sandwich" together.

Benedictus' laminated safety glass was used for airplane air screens, automobile windshields, goggle and gas mask lenses during the World war. Crude in performance and high in cost, it nevertheless proved the soundness of the laminating principle. After the war ended, there was no demand for safety glass until closed cars began to replace touring cars and roadsters, in the early twenties. Then Benedictus' discovery came to the attention of automobile and flat glass manufacturers. Scientists were set to work to perfect laminated safety glass, because more than half of the injuries in collisions resulted from contact with jagged pieces of glass.

Laminated safety glass made its first commercial appearance in the United States in 1924. It cost $10 to $12 a square foot then and was far from being a satisfactory product. The filler was nitro-cellulose, which turned brown and cloudy when exposed to sunlight. The filler also loosened with aging and weathering. The demand was so great, however, that even this imperfect product had become standard equipment for windshields of some makes of automobiles by 1928.

Research men still faced the dual task of improving the plastic filler and developing thin precision plate glass which would allow drivers and passengers an undistorted view from a car. The successor to nitro-cellulose as the safety sandwich "insides" was cellulose acetate, which did not discolor, but required sealing around the edges of the glass to prevent weather loosening. Cellulose acetate safety glass was so satisfactory to the public that the presence of the plastic filler was almost forgotten.

But scientists foresaw a filler which would be even stronger and more elastic at all temperatures. In a six-year, six-million dollar research program, chemists and glass engineers developed a high-test filler called "polyvinyl acetal resin" and precision plate glass less than one-eighth inch thick. This new product, safer at all temperatures and providing clear vision, will be standard equipment for windshields and windows of many 1940 automobile models. The new plastic clings to glass so well that no adhesive is required in assembling the sandwich, and no edge sealing is needed because weathering does not make polyvinyl deterioriate. Thus Twentieth century motorists get the benefits of a climatic phase of research efforts which actually have been going on for 5,000 years.

Scientists and historians have predicted that in the future our time will be known as the Age of Glass. Because of its versatility, new forms and uses of glass constantly are being developed. And the end is not in sight.

Malayan Snakes Prove Expensive Zoo Guests

The keepers of the reptile house of the London zoo might well be intoning a new version of the nursery rhyme about the "ten little Injuns," for this is exactly what happened there: Seventy-four Cerberus water snakes arrived at the zoo. The Hamadryads ate 12 of them—now see 62.

The Hamadryad snakes are three in number. Their habitat is Malaya. From the first day of their arrival they proved rather expensive to feed. Until the water snakes came they had lived comfortably on a black and gold tree snake apiece a week, but as these reptiles are rare and cost about $20 to $25 each, the Hamadryads' meals proved a strain on event he zoo's resources.

"You see," says a zoo keeper, "we have only three black and gold snakes left now, and they must be kept for show. So we imported these Cerberus water snakes from southeastern Asia as a substitute. They only cost about 10 shillings each if you buy a lot of them, so it is an economy in a way, as three Cerberus snakes go to one black and gold one."

He pointed to the cage in which the new arrivals were crawling happily about oblivious of the fate before them.

"Three of them will be lucky," he said, "as we will keep them for display. The rest will be fed to the Hamadryads at the rate of about six a week, although we will vary the diet occasionally."

Absolutely no pain is involved for the water snakes, however, as the great Hamadryads render each victim unconscious before consuming it.

"It is one of those problems we are always being confronted with," the keeper said. "The Hamadryads would starve to death if we didn't give them live food; the Cerberus water snakes, in their natural surroundings, would almost certainly meet a far more unpleasant end. It is happier for all concerned this way."

New Process Produces Coal From Sugar Cane

NEW YORK.—In an emergency, American farmers may grow the country's soft coal in their fields.

The fact that fairly good soft coal is now being made from sugars, the carbohydrates of farm crops, was reported to the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers by E. Berl, of the Carnegie Institute of Technology

The sugar coal is too expensive to be practical, but was made to settle an old controversy about the origin of coal and oil.

In the Carnegie laboratories, whose experts include some of the leading scientists of the coal fields, the artificial coal is made in two ways. Sugar heated in water at high temperature produces a sandy form of coal.

When weak alkali is added to the water, Berl said, "excellent coking coals" are the result. Adding pressure to the hot sugar water increases the amount of carbon in the man-made coal

These farm-product coals, Berl said, can be treated with hydrogen to make the same products which the Germans and English obtain from "hydrogenated" coal. These products include gasoline and oil for motor cars.

The old idea, said Berl, that coal came from the woody, or lignin, part of plants is as dead as the idea that petroleum is from dead fish. He said that the Carnegie experiments show that coal, oil and bitumen all come from carbohydrates in plants.

OUR FUTURE

Students who are of high school age must live with the future in mind They must plan for the higher ideals of life, and continually strive for this goal When the work becomes harder, and things seem to go wrong, some people lack the ambition to continue Instead they merely live for today We mustn't believe entirely to the theory that "to-morow will take of itself" Instead we must face to-morrow with a broader view of life It is now when we must begin in a small way by doing our small duties well in school life With a beautiful new school it should be easier than before to do our best

MUSIC HIGHLIGHTS

The band gave a short program before the high school assembly Wednesday morning This is the first performance this year, and it already shows improvement.

Marie Schmidt

SPORTS

During our Wednesday night practice Coach Bowles laid out the rules for basketball. One rule was "There's no reason under the sun why any boy should throw a ball high enough to touch the ceiling for it will leave a bad mark"

Well, the rule was broken before the night was over, for some poor soul forgot himself and threw the ball to high. If you want to find out who made the spot, ask Coach Bowles It was the boss himself.

One of the main things in our basketball practices, is running, so that we will have lots of wind By the end of one hour practice we are ready to go home, for almost every boy's tongue is hanging out Coach said we are coming along quite well.

Now Everybody Nose To What Success Is Due

Much of the success of the local flower show had been due to Smith, who'd organized it, and being an ardent horticulturist, had won quite a few prizes.

Later on, he was reading the report in the local paper when he jumped to his feet, with an angry bellow.

"Why, what's wrong?" asked Mrs. Smith, dropping her knitting.

"Listen to this!" he roared. "It says here: 'As Mr. Smith opened the show, all eyes were fixed on the large red nose he displayed. Only years of careful cultivation could have produced an exhibit of such brilliance.'"

At the Sound of the Breakfast Bell

Five mornings a week there's a last-minute scramble to get to school on time, and a mad dash to beat the boss to the office—and too frequently the all-important business of eating breakfast is neglected. Maybe the breakfast menu needs revising, or needs a "beauty treatment" to increase its appetite appeal.

If all homemakers would join forces to raise the standard of American breakfasts, it would be a long step in the direction of happiness and well being for the family. Breakfast needn't be elaborate to be good, but it should consist of foods well chosen and well prepared to tempt the appetites of members of the family who aren't ordinarily interested in this first meal of the day.

Serving something new, occasionally, is a more effective means of getting the laggards out of bed than the loudest alarm clock!

Blueberry Muffins.
(Makes 10-12 muffins)

¼ cup butter
¼ cup sugar
1 egg
2⅔ cups flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 cup milk
1 cup blueberries (well drained)

Cream the butter and add sugar gradually. Add the egg, well beaten, and mix. Sift all dry ingredients, reserving ¼ cup flour to be mixed with the blueberries. Add milk, mixed with vanilla extract, and dry ingredients alternately. Add the floured blueberries. Bake in greased muffin tins in a moderate oven (375 degrees) approximately 20 minutes.

Bacon With Apple Rings.

7 slices bacon
1 egg (slightly beaten with 1 tablespoon cold water)
White corn meal
3 apples (peeled and cut in ⅓-inch round slices)
1 teaspoon powdered sugar
½ teaspoon cinnamon
Juice of 1 lemon

Melt sufficient bacon fat to cover the bottom of a skillet. Cut bacon strips in halves, dip in beaten egg, then dip in corn meal. Saute gently in the bacon fat until each strip is a golden brown. Place apple slices in a mixture of the lemon juice, sugar, and cinnamon for a few minutes. Drain the apple slices, without drying, and saute in the remaining fat. Place bacon strips in the center of a warmed platter and arrange around it the browned apple rings.

Hominy Grits With Baked Eggs.
(Serves 4-6)

3 cups freshly cooked grits
5 to 6 eggs
Salt, pepper and paprika
⅔ cup cheese (grated)

Fill a shallow baking pan with the cooked grits. With a spoon make hollows or wells in the grits. Drop a fresh egg into each hollow. Sprinkle with salt, pepper, paprika and grated cheese. Bake in a moderately hot oven (375 degrees) for 20 to 25 minutes.

French Toast With Pineapple and Bacon.
(Serves 4)

8 slices bacon
2 eggs (slightly beaten)
½ cup milk
¼ teaspoon salt
4 slices bread
4 slices pineapple (canned)

Pan fry bacon until nicely browned and crisp; drain and keep hot. Combine slightly beaten eggs, milk, and salt, and mix well. Dip bread in egg mixture and saute in the hot bacon fat until golden brown. Then saute the pineapple slices. Place one pineapple slice on each piece of toast and top with two slices of bacon. Garnish with parsley, and serve very hot.

Waffles.

2 cups pastry flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
2 eggs
1 cup milk
⅓ cup butter (melted)
Sliced bacon

Mix and sift all dry ingredients. Beat egg yolks thoroughly and add milk. Then pour this milk mixture into the dry ingredients and blend lightly. Add melted butter and fold in the well beaten egg whites. Cut bacon into 1-inch pieces; place 1 piece on each waffle iron section and then pour waffle batter on hot waffle iron.

Buckwheat Cakes.

1 yeast cake
1 cup lukewarm water
3 tablespoons dark molasses
1 tablespoon salt
1½ cups flour
1½ cups buckwheat flour
1 cup lukewarm water (approximately)
1 teaspoon soda dissolved in ¼ cup water

Soak yeast cake in 1 cup of lukewarm water. Add molasses, salt, and flour, and enough additional lukewarm water to make a batter a little thicker than that used for ordinary griddle cakes. Put batter in a covered bean jar, and let stand over night. In the morning add soda dissolved in water. Bake on a hot greased griddle.

Birmingham Eggs.

Slice bread 1 inch thick, trim off crusts and cut a 1½-inch hole in the center. Place in heavy frying pan containing generous amount of butter. Break an egg in the center of each slice. Fry bread slices until golden brown, then turn and brown other side. Salt and pepper.

Quick Butterscotch Rolls.

2 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
¼ cup shortening
¾ cup milk
Melted butter
1 cup light brown sugar
¼ cup butter
½ cup pecan nut meats

Sift flour, baking powder and salt. Cut in shortening and add milk. Roll out and brush with melted butter. Sprinkle with ⅓ cup brown sugar Roll firmly like a jelly roll. Cream together the remaining ⅔ cup of sugar and ¼ cup butter. Spread this mixture, together with the pecan nutmeats, over bottom of baking pan. Slice biscuit roll in ½-mch slices and place cut side up in the butter-sugar-nut mixture. Bake 20 minutes in moderate oven (350 degrees) and turn out of pan at once. Serve upside down.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D.
Dean of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for October 29

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education; used by permission.

BEVERAGE ALCOHOL AND SOCIAL PROGRESS

LESSON TEXT—Micah 2:9-11; Luke 21: 29-31, 34-36, I Corinthians 6.9-11.

GOLDEN TEXT—Know ye not that the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God?—I Corinthians 6:9.

"International Temperance Sunday—October 29, 1939." Let us join with people the world over in making our protest against the sale and use of intoxicating liquors. If every Christian would declare himself on this matter now, there would be a tremendous impact made on this universal problem and notice would be served on the liquor industry, on politicians, and on unbelieving mankind that Christianity intends to do something about it. We are far too docile and quiet on such matters, when we ought to speak up for God and for our country.

The lesson portions may seem a little unrelated, but study of them yields three important truths regarding the use of wine and strong drink.

I. Lovers of Wine and Strong Drink Destroy Their Nation (Mic. 2:9-11).

That statement may surprise some of our self-styled patriots who like to wave the flag and speak swelling words of devotion to our country and who at the same time love their intoxicating drinks. Micah rightly points out that his people had come to the place where they chose men to be prophets because they encouraged the people in the use of wine and strong drinks (v. 11). They must therefore expect the result which follows, namely, the destruction of the home and of the nation (vv. 9, 10).

We are all familiar with the claim that prohibition retarded the advancement of our nation and that its repeal would bring a return to higher moral standards, reduce crime, bring in prosperity, etc. The facts reveal that none of these have come true. Crime has increased by leaps and bounds under repeal, a situation so well known as to call for no proof. Moral standards have gone rapidly downward with the free use of liquor. If you don't believe that, ask a policeman what goes on in our taverns, or just keep your eyes half open and you can see for yourself.

Just now much is being made of the many jobs which are supposed to have been created by the liquor industry. What are the facts? The Christian Herald tells us, "A million dollars spent for furniture would employ 339 persons, spent for boots and shoes 336 persons, for home furnishings 191 persons, for booze just 95 persons." And remember that jobs making the stuff that destroys other jobs, are not worth having. The man who drinks is helping to destroy his nation.

II. Christians Do Not Drink, Because They Look for Christ's Return (Luke 21:29-31, 34-36).

If we are not "looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ" (Titus 2:13), we should consider whether any of the things mentioned in these verses have gained control in our lives: the cares of this life, surfeiting, or drunkenness. But why speak to Christians about that? Surely they do not use intoxicants. Sadly enough, some do. Taking advantage of the fact that the Bible speaks of temperance rather than of abstinence, they seek to justify an indulgence in these things which they (and their neighbors) know is dishonoring to God and destructive of their testimony and usefulness in the community.

Christian, Jesus is coming again! He may come today! In fact, the fig tree (vv. 29, 30), which is the nation Israel, has long been shooting forth new branches and bearing green leaves. The indications are that Christ is coming soon. Are you ready to meet Him?

III. Drunkards and Other Sinners Need to be Saved (I Cor. 6:9-11)

Being drunk is not a joke, even though thoughtless people laugh and cartoonists and writers of jokes use such unfortunates as their stock in trade. Drunkenness is a foul and sinful thing, classed by the apostle Paul with the lowest of human vices. Review the list as it is given in verses 9 and 10 (and by the way, notice that covetousness is mentioned there too) and place drunkenness in its proper classification. Call it what it really is—sin, and then call on the One who can save from sin and then you will be washed from your sin, sanctified, and justified in the name of the Lord Jesus (v. 11). In Christ there is hope for the drunkard. A spiritual revival is the real answer to the liquor problem. Let us seek to promote it even as we at the same time give ourselves to an intelligent and constructive battle against this destructive force in the life of our nation.

New uses for a camp stool.

HAVE you ever wished for a small, low table that would appear from nowhere and disappear again when you were through with it? Have you ever thought it would be nice if Father's ottoman could be folded up and put out of the way when not in use? Or perhaps you have unpacked a suit case in a guest room and wished for something other than the bed; a chair or the floor to put it on during the process?

A camp stool plus a tray to fit the top makes a very satisfactory small table to place beside a game table or to set up for your books or mending basket by your favorite chair. But be sure to dress it up so that it will look its best either when in use or when folded up and placed in some out of the way corner. A remnant of material and some upholstery braid will do the trick. Stain and wax are suggested for the base as paint might be marred in folding the stool.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Mrs. Spears has prepared for our readers a booklet containing 32 useful and practical suggestions for beautifying the home; with step-by-step directions clearly illustrated. # Corn Husk Beds...

Years ago, in the late fall of each year, after the corn crop was in the crib, the housewife and her helpers would go into the field of corn stalks and gather many bags of nice soft corn husks, these were put into large mattress size ticking bags and used on the beds of the household.

These Corn Husks Beds were quite comfortable, and all of us older people, who are 50 years of age or more, have at some time or other slept on a corn husk bed.

In the fall of the year when the World War started, cotton prices took an awful slump and mattresses were very cheap. At this time, Our Store sold a carload of all cotton mattresses in six weeks; This was the end of corn husk beds in the Klemme trade territory, they were all replaced with cotton mattresses.

And today—the best selling items in Our Store, in the fall of the year are, Beds, Springs, and Mattresses, it seems the housewife wants her family to rest comfortably during the long night of the wintertime.

The cheap, all cotton mattresses, which sell at five or six dollars are made of loose cotton, they do quite well for children's beds, but for heavy grown people, they are not so good, as they will get lumpy.

There is a better all cotton felted mattress made of carded layer cotton, selling from ten to fifteen dollars, these do not get lumpy and will give good service for many years.

The "last word" in mattresses is the inner spring mattress. You can buy these at $8.50 up to $39. The cheaper inner spring mattresses, at $15 or less are not so good, but will last well on a spare bed. But, if your mattress is to have hard ware, 365 nights in a year, and only can afford to spend $15 or less, better buy a good felted cotton mattress. You will be better satisfied in the "long run".

The inner spring mattress which we sell at $19.50 to $24.50 have been giving good satisfaction.

The best inner spring mattresses are the "Quilt Top" mattresses, priced at $29—$33 and $39. The manufacturers guarantee these to last as long or longer than the best felted cotton mattresses.

There is a difference in mattresses as to weight and qualty of ticking, all of which we will be glad to explain, when you call at the Store for your bedding needs.

Interior Views of New Building

Top picture shows the corridors of the second floor which is also a representative view of corridors throughout the building. Note the steel lockers along each side of the wall.

The picture in the middle above shows the Study Library on the second floor.

The bottom picture shows the large gymnasium-auditorium on the main floor and may be entered from the street or from the lower corridor off from the main entrance.

Modern Equipment In New Building

Visitors going through Klemme's new school will see modern features of school planning throughout the building Some of the outstanding ones are described below

LOCKERS

Every student in school has a steel locker in which to store his books, and other school supplies In the first six grades, the lockers are in the grade rooms. For grades seven to twelve, lockers are maintained in the upper corridor High school students do not have individual study desks but keep all books and supplies in the hall lockers Students can rent locks if they wish

HEATING AND VENTILATING SYSTEM

The heating and ventilating of the building is taken care of by a Campbell forced air heating plant Fresh air is drawn in from the outside, heated, filtered, and forced to all rooms. Return louvers in the doors provide for complete circulation Foul air is exhausted through roof vents

Temperature and humidity are automatically controlled through thermostats and humidostats located in each of the heating zones

This fall on the hottest days the air inside the building was cooler than that on the outside, so windows were kept closed, and ventilation was provided by circulating the air with the blower

FLOORS

Floors are of asphalt tile throughout the building except for the gymnasium, stage, shower rooms, furnace room, and manual training room The tile floor is maintained with wax and presents an attractive appearance at all times. There are three different patterns in the building

The gymnasium and stage floors are of hard maple, while the manual training room, shower rooms, and furnace room are of cement.

GLASS BLOCK

Glass block is used in the new building in just the right amount to make it both useful and attractive It appears above the main entrance, on the south and east stair landings, in the superintendent's office, in the teacher's room and in the typing room This type of wall affords an abundance of light without a direct glare and has proved very satisfactory in these places

CLOCK AND PROGRAM SYSTEM

An automatic clock and bell system is one of the most appreciated improvements over the old building All clocks and bells both outside and inside, are controlled from a central machine in the superintendents office There are four separate programs of bells, and they can be made to ring at intervals of one minute if necessary Time signals are given by buzzers in the rooms, bells in the corridors, and large gongs on the outside entrances.

FIRE ALARM SYSTEM

The building is virtually fire proof, but every precaution has been taken to make the building safe in case of any hazard from fire or smoke Electrically controlled fire alarm boxes are located on both floors and in the basement rooms. A metal fire door at the entrance to the furnace room which closes automatically when the temperature reaches a certain point there

In fire drills conducted this fall, the building has been completely emptied in from fifty-eight to sixty seconds.

Public Invited To Visit New Building In Afternoon And To Attend Program

Auditorium Seats Over Six Hundred

The gymnasium–auditorium has a playing floor 40 by 70 and a stage 15 by 40 Seating capacity for games will be approximately five hundred and for programs, about six hundred and fifty A Fair-Play electric scoreboard is one of the outstanding features of this room from an athletic standpoint From the standpoint of dramatic work, the flame-proof cyclorama and velour pull-curtain are the big features

A serving window and Dutch door connect the gymnasium with the home economics room to faciliate the serving of dinners in the big room

STUDY LIBRARY

There is no assembly room for the high school students in the new building Classes are operated on a modified home room plan in which pupils go immediately to their first period classes when they arrive in the morning or at noon.

The largest room on the second floor is the study library, which is equipped with study tables and chairs instead of the conventional type desks This room accomodates most of the group not in a class in any one period If this room overflows, extra students are seated in one of the adjoining class rooms, and both rooms can be supervised by one teacher

VENETIAN BLINDS

All rooms except those with lighting on the north side are equipped with Venetian blinds. The blinds afford excellent light control, and they can also be used as a ventilation unit when windows are open in the spring and fall. The blinds are of a light ivory color with canvas straps and cords

PRESIDENT OF THE BOARD

HENRY F. JOST

Miss Agnes Samuelson Will Be Speaker On The Evening Program

The dedication program for Klemme's new $72,000 school building Friday evening, November 10, is being heralded as the biggest event in the history of local education

Educational leaders of district, state and national prominence will be present either as speakers or platform guests. Former teachers and students are expected to return to make the event a virtual homecoming

Heading the list of distinguished guests will be Miss Agnes Samuelson, who will deliver the dedicatory address Miss Samuelson is past president of the National Education Association, former state superintendent of public instruction, and the present executive secretary of the Iowa State Teachers Association She is probably the outstanding authority in the state on Horace Mann, the pioneer educator to whom Klemme's building is dedicated Her address will be built around Horace Mann and his contribution to present day education

SPEAKER ON PROGRAM

MISS AGNES SAMUELSON

Also appearing on the program will be A J Steffey, regional supervisor, who will bring greetings from the state department; J R. Baggs, county superintendent of schools; Thorwald and Oswald Thorson, architects; Edward R O'Neill, traveling engineer of the Public Works Administration; and H F Jost, president of the local board of education.

Platform guests for the evening include some of the leading educators in this part of the state. Among them will be neighboring superintendents, county superintendents junior college presidents, and former heads of the local school

SUPT. OF KLEMME SCHOOLS

W. HENRY GALBRETH

Special music for the evening will consist of selections by the Klemme school band, a marimba solo by Irene Becker, and a violin solo by Jacqueline Kudje

School will close at noon Friday, and open house will be observed between the hours of three and six o'clock for those who care to visit and inspect the building Visitors will also be shown through the building after the evening program

The Inscription Over Main Entrance

The inscription over the main entrance expresses what will probably be the theme of the dedicatory address to be delivered by Miss Agnes Samuelson. Each year leaders in the field of education are coming to realize more and more their debt to Horace Mann. This pioneer school official really gave his life in the cause of free public education, and his educational ideas and ideals are still sound and useful today, eighty years after his death.

The inscription, as it has been cast in the concrete panel above the entrance, is as follows;

A. D. 1939
DEDICATED TO
HORACE MANN, WHO BELIEVED THAT EDUCATION IS WORTH ALL SACRIFICE THAT HUMAN HAND OR HEART CAN ENDURE. . . . .

Long Time No Move

Will Hixon, Sac county farmer, has rented and lived on the same farm for 48 years.

Klemme's New $72,000 School Building

Klemme School History

-:- Compiled By Miss Novella Bredbenner -:-

It was nine years after Klemme was platted that the town was incorporated. Prior to this incorporation, Klemme was known as a village and was part of Ell township, and was governed by the Ell township trustees. The village of Klemme was at that time a part of the Ell township school system.

It was the plan for Ell township to have nine rural schools, each school serving the residents of four sections of land. But the nine schools were not all built the same year. There were not children enough in the township to make nine schools practical, so they built three schools to start with and added more schools as needed.

It seems that district No. 9, which included the village of Klemme, was sparsely settled and the children from this district attended at No 8, which is the district next east from Klemme and was then known as the Morris Day school.

The adult population of Klemme grew rapidly right from the start, but it takes time for the little folks to grow to school age. Thus it was three years before this village could obtain the approval of the Ell township school board for the building of a one-room school house.

Mrs. Lew Lewis said there was one little girl who wasn't quite old enough but would be by the time the school house would be finished, so they put her age in as a little older ond in this way secured seven pupils, enough to build the school house.

So a one-room school house was built in 1892. The seven pupils were: Will and Mae Kirkwood, Flov Schafer, Charlie and Gertie Lewis, and Luella and Alma Feiro. The first teacher was Maggie Day, John Day's sister (now Mrs. Fred Skow of Watertown, South Dakota.)

In 1893 and 1894 Mattie Hubbard was the teacher and received a salary of $30 a month.

Minutes from the Ell township school record September 18, 1893, show the following entry: "Motion made and seconded that we pay first grade teachers $30 a month and second grade teachers $28 a month."

The town of Klemme grew very rapidly, and the school soon increased to about forty pupils. The one-room building was not large enough for this number, and the people of Klemme wanted a larger one. Following are quotations from the minutes of a school board meeting March 11, 1895:

"Motion made and seconded that we move the Klemme school house to District No. 5 and build a new school house in Klemme. Motion lost.

Motion made and seconded that we reconsider the motion. Motion carried.

Motion made and seconded that we move the Klemme school house to District No. 5. Motion carried Motion made to build a new school house in Klemme 48 feet square and two stories high this summer. Motion carried.

WILLIAM YOHN, President
LEW LEWIS, Secretary."

The one-room school building was then moved to District No 5 two miles east and two miles north Lew Lewis had the contract to move the building John Day said he rode out on horseback and watched them move it. It was then used as a school house there for many years until finally Pete Josten bought it and tore it down for lumber He bought it for $55.

The township record says that at a school board meeting May 4, 1895, three years after the one-room school was erected, a motion was made and carried that the contract for building the school house in Klemme be let to J. P Larsen for the sum of $2,445 By the fall of 1895 this schoolhouse was completed. The teachers were John J Suckow, principal, and Mattie Hubbard, primary grades They now received $35 a month.

For four years, only the two rooms on the first floor were used. The upper story was used as an auditorium.

The following are minutes from the Ell township school record March 9, 1896: "Motion made by R. M. Day that we levy a tax of $800 and get the Klemme school house insured Motion carried

WILLIAM YOHN, President
STEVE B DAY, Secretary."

During the school year of 1897 and 1898, A C Carpenter was principal.

On April 15, 1898 Klemme was voted an independent school district, forty votes being cast for it and seven against it.

During the school year 1898-1899, Miss Lulv Merrick was principal and Mrs. L. Hawley was teacher in the lower grades. By the fall of 1900 a third room was finished, and Miss Maud Dunlap was added to the teaching staff. Miss Emma Steward took the place of Miss Merrick sometime during the year.

On January 22, 1901, on a Monday morning the school house burned to the ground. This building was still quite new, just four and one-third years old The fire started in the furnace room about 10:30 a. m. Mrs. Emma Gibbs was teacher in the intermediate room on the west side of the building Ralph Blank, working at the blackboard near the register saw the fire around the bottom of the register. Mrs. Gibbs sent Ralph to the room on the second floor to give the alarm. John J Suckow was teacher in that room Mrs. Gibbs also sent someone to the primary room where Mrs. Hawley was teacher.

Some of the men and boys threw the books, wraps, desks, etc., out of the windows.

For the remainder of the school year, the high school and intermediate grades had school in the M W of A Hall or Opera House above the Gruetzmacher hardware store The primary grades were located in the Schope building, which was on the south side of main street east of the present creamery building.

By the fall of 1901 a new school was completed It was also a four-room building, built just like the one that burned, with an entrance on the south

In 1902 the first commencement exercises were held There were only ten grades at this time, and there were three graduates. They were Anna Gibbs Emelia Lenz and Emma Krunkelfield The teachers were F. S. Grawe, who had succeeded Mr Suckow as principal during the year Miss Amy Paul and Mrs. Hawley.

Klemme continued to have only a two-year high school until the fall of 1918. Another teacher had been added in 1913, however, bringing the staff to four. In 1918 one more teacher was added with C. H Tompkins heading the list as superintendent in the school's first year as an eleven year institution.

In the spring of 1923 an election on the question of building a new $45,000 building was lost for want of the necessary majority for a bond issue However, a vote to issue $15,000 in bonds for remodeling the old building was successful

Bids for the general contract and the plumbing and heating contract were received May 10, 1923. W. F. Hoffman was the successful bidder on the general contract with a bid of $16,711.60. It is interesting to note that Ernest Anderson of Clear Lake, contractor for Klemme's new building, was second low with a bid of $16,865.00 The plumbing and heating contract went to H. Medlicott with a bid of $3,751.00, bringing the total cost of the remodeling in these two contracts to $20,462.60.

The remodeling work was completed during the summer, and in the fall of 1923 the twelfth grade added. The spring of 1924 saw Klemme's first class graduate from the regulation four-year high school. Members of the class were Marie Blank, Clarence Elder, Bertha Johnson, Dolores Koerner and Bernice Tanner. The faculty had now increased to seven members, headed by Levi Neese as superintendent.

Another member was added to the faculty in the fall of 1924 and still another in 1936, bringing the staff to nine teachers, the present number.

The New School

In the spring of 1938 various groups of Klemme men started talking about the possibility of securing federal PWA aid for the building of a community hall. The sentiment drifted from this to a school gymnasium and eventually to a complete new school building.

On the evening of June 1, 1938, the school board, then composed of H. F. Jost, president, H. R. Gibbs, C. G. Waterman, C. A. Larsen, Albert Barz, and A. J. Kudje, secretary, met with architect Thorwald Thorson of Forest City to discuss the possibility of such a building. At this meeting, the board decided to apply for federal aid for the project and to present the matter to the Civic Club at its meeting June 23.

Mr. Thorson was present at the Civic Club meeting and explained the PWA plan and described the type of building that could be constructed for the amount the district was able to pay. The general reaction of the Civic Club was favorable to the proposition, and the board was encouraged to advertise for an election on the question August 18.

Specifically, the election was to authorize the issuance of $30,000 bonds. This amount, together with an available surplus of $10,000 in the general fund and a PWA grant of $32,715, would make possible a $72,715 building

Two weeks before the election date the board received notice that the federal grant had been approved. Klemme people responded enthusiastically to the chance to make good on this opportunity, and the election carried in a manner beyond the expectations of the most optimistic backers of the proposition. The official vote was 206 to 47 in favor of the new building

The $30,000 in bonds were issued and sold to the First National Bank of Garner at a meeting September 19, 1938 They were sold at a rate of two and three-fourths per cent with a premium of $240.

The next big event was the letting of the contracts October 27. Four contracts had been advertised for bids. Together with successful bidders, they are as follows:

General contract, Ernest Anderson Clear Lake, $49,000: Plumbing, Schmidt's Plumbing and Heating Co., Charles City, $4,276; Electric, Garner Electric Shop, Garner, $3,394; Heating, Campbell Heating Co., Des Moines, $4,598

Mr Anderson did not delay long in getting on the job and excavation work was started the first week in November on the site purchased from C A Larsen and Joe Johnson Work on the building continued through the winter, being halted only for a week or two at a time during the more severe weather.

Original plans called for the entire project to be comoleted by July 1, 1939 The contractors did not miss this mark far, and the school board formally accepted the building in a special meeting July 13.

At the present writing (August, 1939) the building is not only the newest in the county but one of the most modern in the state It is of such structure as to be virtually fireproof and has ample classroom, gymnasium, and playground facilities to take care of expansion for many years to come.

The teaching staff for the coming school year (1939-40) is as follows: W Henry Galbreth Supt.; A. L. Kingery, Prin; M C Batchelder, Glenn Bowles, Ruby Greiner, Irma Merritt, Marion Irvine, Claudia Michalek, and Ruth Potter

Present members of the school board are: H. F Jost, president; H R Gibbs, C. G Waterman, Dr A. H. Dulmes, and Henry Barz. A J Kudje is secretary and F. A. Arnold is treasurer

NOVEMBER 30 IS PROCLAIMED AS LEGAL HOLIDAY

Des Moines Gov George A Wilson Monday proclaimed Thursday Nov 30 as Thanksgiving day in Iowa ignoring President Roosevelts recommendation that observance be advanced a week

I recommend to my fellow citizens he said, that on the day named the people of Iowa lay aside their secular pursuits so far as is possible that we assemble in our house of worship and with song and music express the spirit of this occasion that we gather around our firesides and recount the blessings of this year and of the past

The governor chose not to follow President Roosevelt's recommendation that Nov 23 be observed

This year the governor said we have abundant cause to be grateful traceable more than ever from the form of government under which we live"

"Never before in the lifetime of those we know, nor in the life span of those who have gone before has humanity's pathway of liberty, of freedom and of the reflection of the divine in man been lighted as now through the American bill of rights"

The fine tolerance for differences in racial origin and divergent religious and philosophical ideals strengthen our confidence and confirm our loyalty to all things truly American"

TIMES EDITOR AND PARTY ENJOY TRIP THROUGH EAST AND SOUTH

The Editor and Mrs. Jorgenson, accompanied by Mrs. C. E. Barnes, of Garner, and Mrs. A. J. Hansen, of Wyoming, Iowa, returned Friday evening from a trip through the east and south.

The writer and Mrs. Jorgenson and Mrs. Hansen visited with Ray Jorgenson, Jr. and Bob Hansen at the United States Naval Academy, while Mrs. Barnes visited with her daughter, Catherine, at Baltimore.

We left Klemme early Thursday morning, Oct. 28th, driving to Wyoming where Mrs. Hansen joined us, and thence across the Mississippi River at Clinton and through Illinois and Indiana. The latter state gave us our first view of beautiful scenery as the light frosts had turned the tree's foliage into all colors of the rainbow and the bright colored leaves presented a beautiful sight on the remainder of the trip to the east.

We noted that most of the Illinois corn was being picked by hand, while in Indiana nearly all of the corn is in shocks and husked later.

Coming into Ohio the country became a bit more hilly and the roads were full of curves and driving became slower the farther east we proceeded. Coming into Pennsylvania we drove through a downpour of rain and saw very little of the mountains through that state and Maryland. It was all mountainous driving nearly all the way to the east coast and the second night found us in Baltimore

The next three days, Saturday, Sunday, and Monday we spent visiting our boys at the Academy and seeing the many wonderful sights of that greatest of all American Institutions. We spent three happy, but all together short days there. Ray,Jr. and Bob were both looking fine and enjoying their work at the Academy. We will tell more about the Academy life in a later article.

Leaving Annapolis on Tuesday morning we met Mrs. Barnes in Washington, D. C. There we secured the services of a guide and spent the morning seeing the many wonderful government buildings. The writer and Mrs. Jorgenson called on Rep. Fred Gilchrist and enjoyed a visit with him. Mr. Gilchrist secured passes for our party and we had the privilege of seeing the House of Representatives in action on the neutrality bill.

Leaving Washington in the afternoon, we visited George Washington's home and tomb at Mt. Vernon, a most beautiful place and everything just as it was in Washington's time.

Because of the rain we were not allowed to take the "sky-line drive" south so we drove to Charlottesville, Virginia to spend the night and the next morning drove through the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia. This section was the most beautiful of our entire trip The main industry there seemed to be raising fruit.

Continuing westward we drove through the mountainous region of West Virginia which was nearly all coal and mineral mining for hundreds of miles along Cabin River gourge. Hard frosts in that state had turned the leaves on the trees a dark brown and it was not nearly as pretty as in Virginia and Maryland. However, the great mining region was very interesting and the high cliffs and deep gourges were very scenic on the entire route.

Approaching Kentucky the country became less broken and the hills more rolling and we began to see tobacco plantations. The tobacco crop has been harvested and the tobacco stalks were hung in large barns to dry and season for the market. We also began to see fine pastures and herds of cattle and occasionally a silo. Coming near Lexington we beheld the wonderful horse farms, all fenced with boards painted white surrounding blue grass pastures where fine race horses were grazing. We were in the heart of the Kentucky race horse country and it was not amiss to drive to Faraway Farms seven miles from Lexington where we saw the world's finest in horseflesh, Man O'War in person, insured for $500,000 and who earned over $275,000 on the race track. This beautiful creature is now 22 years old. Next to his stall was War Admiral, five year old now retired, whose winnings amount to over $290,000. He is a son of the famous Man O'War. Colts sired by Man O'War bring $75,000 each.

We saw hundreds of fine race horses in pastures around Lexington and Louisville, Kentucky.

We had planned on driving to St. Louis and take the scenic drive northward along the Mississippi, but as our time was running short we soon headed northward toward Springfield, Illinois and were grateful for the flat country which speeded up driving again after days of slow driving through the mountains and rough hill country of Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia and a part of Kentucky.

The balance of our trip homeward was, of course, through Illinois and Iowa corn belt and it looked mighty good to all of us.

We have a number interesting things to tell our readers which we will try to cover in a later article.

It did not take us long to decide that we would not care to live in the east. The west is more progressive in every way and is far ahead of the east in every respect

The Editor

n Flood

When three walls of an annex the W J. Knoke elevator burst at Lavinia, 30,000 bushels of corn spilled to the outside with a crash that was heard for miles, completely flooding the Milwaukee tracks. It took several hours of hard work by a crew of men to clear the right-of-way in time for the passage of the next train

GRADES 7 and 8

We have a new bulletin board at the back of our room. Patricia brought us some narcissus bulbs

In geography we finished unit 2 in "The Far East" Barbara Johnson, Patricia Kudje and Eunice Larson gave some very interesting floor talks. We are studying a new unit on Latin America.

Both grades took the Self-Test Drill 2 in arithmetic. Eunice earned perfect score The median for rating the seventh grade class was 8 which is good The eighth grade received a score or 7

Ruth Bell, a girl scout, treated each member of our room with a cookie which the scouts had made

Wednesday afternoon Grace Frogg from Crystal Lake visited our room with Nadine Kimball.

Betty, Patricia, Ewald, Edward, Larry, Paul, Eunice, and Corrine received one-hundred per cent in spelling this week

TRUTH

Truthfulness is adhering strictly to or in accordance with fact or truth Those who are truthful or honest have all the qualities necessary to be loyal, faithful, sincere, and pure A person who lacks truthfulness lacks the friendship and admiration of those with whom he comes in contact. Companions cannot have devotion to one another if they do not have unswerving loyalty Those who are not believed in are not given important and noble responsibilities, and therefore they continue to dwell on the lower rungs of the ladder of success and unfortunately fail to achieve their aims in life If you expect truth in your fellowmen, possess it yourself Truthfulness is an essential part to a strong character Truth is a valued and prized possession, yet it costs very little If you value your friendship with others, always be truthful As Shakespeare said "To thine own self be true and it must follow as the night the day; thou canst not then be false to any man".

Elsie Ward

SHAKESPEARE'S LITTLE THEATER

The Junior class has settled down in earnest to get their plays, "Cross My Heart" and "The Group Photograph" down pat.

"Cross My Heart" is a story concerning a Chicago family going to the small town to live Allan Barz plays the part of Bob Adams, a mischevious boy of 17, who helps welcome the family to town Every one who knows Alan realizes quite well how he will be able to take his part This is a play with a crisis during the whole story; in fact, they are all in love!

"The Group Photograph" is the most humorous one-act play you will be able to see in some time Johnny Schwichtenberg plays the part of Grandpa, a very old man! Can you feature that?

Really folks, try and make a date with the Klemme gym for Friday evening November 17 The Juniors would be delighted to have you present and you will be glad you came. . . Elsie Thieman

The sophomore English class have been giving interesting talks on their favorite books, amusing movies and their opinions on current topics

We physics students have shown our ability as super scientists during the last few weeks. At first the formulas baffled us, now we baffle the instructor with our own formulas. We have been stressing that the stress is proportional to the strain We have recently learned, through the study of physics, why our batting averages were in a slump last season It was due to the fact that we did not know that the center of oscillation is the spot where we should connect to hit a "homer".

All of the biology students enjoyed a field trip last Wednesday The purpose of the trip was to get some frogs to dissect They followed the railroad track until they came to the first bridge and looked for frogs but they were unsuccessful in finding any They returned home on the road east of Klemme and spent the rest of the period removing preacher's lice from their clothes

The past week was National Girl Scout Week and the Klemme Girl Scouts placed an attractive poster on the bulletin board in the lower hall

The seniors have not forgotten about Hallowe'en. One day last week one of the senior girls was even found making a jack-o lantern I wonder who it was?

The freshmen boys in manual training have been studying about the different kinds of wood We have divided ourselves into two groups. There are twelve boys in each group One group meets from eleven o'clock to twelve and the other group meets from one o'clock to two in the afternoon We are writing material on fifteen different kinds of trees that are important.

The physical training girls have been playing kittenball and taking hikes lately

Klemme is bound to be the home of a future prsidential candidate or orator in years to come We wish you could have heard Marvin Lemke's ability to give an oration on the Arms Embargo which is now a current topic of debate

KINDERGARTEN, GRADES 1and 2

We had a party Tuesday afternoon The kindergarten children were the guests of the first and second grade boys and girls. We enjoyed the cookies which the Girl Scouts passed to us on Hallowe'en day.

Isabelle Gibbs had a birthday last week. She treated us to candy

The fourth grade are studying about the Amazon jungle. We expect to study about the Congo jungle next week and see how they are similar.

We made jungle animals from clay for art this week

GRADES 5 and 6

We had two visitors in our room the past week.

Ruth Smith and Mavis are the reporters for this week.

A fat negro bumped into a rather lean son of the dusky race.

"From the looks of you," he said angrily, "there must've been a famine."

PUBLIC WILL SEE FIRST PLAY STAGED THIS YEAR

Large Stage And Equipment Will Add Interest To Productions

Two plays for the price of one is the bargain being offered by the junior class of Klemme High School when they present a big double feature Friday evening Nov 17 CROSS MY HEART is a 3 act play by John McRae and George Savage which had it's premiere last summer at Oregon State College Plenty of laughs and action are promised to those who see it THE GROUP PHOTOGRAPH is a one-act farce based on the trials and troubles encountered in trying to get a picture a family reunion

The following summaries give you an idea of what to expect when you see these plays

Cross My Heart

Dave and Bess Adams, with their two children, Bob and Pauline, look with some misgiving on the arrival of the Rosses to their little city In the first place, Jerome Ross has purchased a bank in which Dave has been working for years, and Dave is not sure how the new set-up will work out whether he will be promoted, demoted, or fired

Naturally, the Adam's family plan to welcome the Rosses in a big way Charlie Westover, a timid young man in love with Pauline, also works in the bank, and his future may depend on the Rosses too

The big question mark for the Adam's family is seventeen year Bob He goes around in old clothes with his hair mussed up and hates the sight of girls (he says) His family gives him the responsibility of introducing Eleanor Ross to the young people of the town, and he rebels

Bob and Eleanor meet, however, and find that their lots are somewhat the same They are both considered problem children by their parents. They decide to put on a "big evening" just to worry the old folks, and they accomplish their end in a big way

They find a tuxedo and evening gown that belong to other members of the family and also "borrow" brother Jim's car Reports over the radio and from the police cause the parents to imagine that all sorts of things have happened to their children, but it finally turns out that they have been doing nothing much worse than consuming unheard of quantities of hot dogs and pop

The Group Photograph

The family is anxious to get a group picture before Grandpa leaves them for a better world They make no secret of the fact that they think the old man is about ready to start down the long road to the cemetery. The depressing talk, however, doesn't phase "Gramp" and he proves to be about the strongest of the lot

The admission price for the two plays is 15c for students and 25c for adults Remember that the plays will be given only one night Seats are being reserved at Wilson's Pharmacy. Tickets can be obtained there or from students.

Folger Shakespeare Library

The Folger Shakespeare library in Washington houses the finest collection of Shakespeare material outside of England. Eighty-five thousand volumes, ranging from first folios to the most modern product of Shakespearean research are on its shelves. Of a world supply of 200 first folios, the Folger library possesses 79. The next largest collection is in the British museum which contains but five first folios The oldest document on display is one written at Rouen, France in 1435 and signed by the king's treasurer, John, Bastard of Orleans, which mentions Sir John Fastolf, who, in name though not in character, became Shakespeare's Falstaff. The library building includes a theater which seats 262.

World War Turned U. S. Into Saboteur's Utopia; Will It Happen Again?

By PARKER ELDRIDGE
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

NEW YORK. — There are many good arguments for repeal of the embargo against arms shipments to belligerents in the European war. Maybe this is an argument to retain the embargo:

Should the United States try selling munitions abroad as in the World war, would another plague of terrorism raise havoc with our industrial production?

Searching newspaper files from the 1914-16 period, history students find that America's attempt to aid Great Britain and France in their last war brought a rash of general sabotage, the responsibility for which was usually placed on the Central Powers' doorstep.

Reads Like Fiction.

In the 32 months while America tried with one hand to remain neutral and with the other to help her European friends, there were scores of munition plant explosions, attempts were made to dynamite trains and bridges, spy plots were uncovered almost daily (often snaring folks in high places), assassinations were attempted and at least one effort was made to get the United States involved in a war with Mexico.

One chap, a Chicago school teacher named Frank Holt, alias Erich Muenter, tried on July 2, 1915, to blow up the capitol building at Washington. The next day he tried to kill J. Pierpont Morgan at his home in Glen Cove, Long Island.

Dumba Sent Home.

Many of the plots were strange as fiction and were traced to the highest diplomatic representatives of Austria and Germany. On August 30, 1915, a sensation was created by seizure and publication of

VON IGEL—On April 19, 1916, the United States government seized papers of Wolf von Igel, former secretary to von Papen. The state department later said the papers disclosed a spy system financing a bureau to stir up labor troubles in munitions plants and to finance propaganda.

DUMBA—Constantin T. Dumba, Austria-Hungary's ambassador to the United States, whose recall was demanded by President Wilson after seizure of a letter he wrote, disclosing plans to "disorganize . . . manufacture of munitions . . . which, in opinion of the German attache, is of great importance and amply outweighs expenditure of money involved."

an official letter from Constantin Dumba, ambassador from Austria-Hungary. The letter disclosed he planned "to disorganize and hold up for months, if not entirely prevent, manufacture of munitions in Bethlehem, Pa., and the Middle West, which, in opinion of the German attache, is of great importance and amply outweighs expenditure of money involved."

A few days later Ambassador Dumba was recalled and the government began investigating the unnamed "German attache." In December Germany was asked to recall Capt. Franz von Papen (now a high Nazi and ambassador to Russia) and Captain Boy-Ed, for "improper activities in military and naval matters."

Within a few months some interesting data was collected concerning Captain von Papen. The government seized papers of Wolf von Igel, former secretary to von Papen in a New York "advertising office." Later the state department said these papers disclosed maintenance of a spy system and the financing of a spy system to stir up labor troubles in munitions plants, "the bomb industry and other related activities." Propaganda and subornation of American writers and lecturers was also financed by the "agency," it was alleged

Recall 'Black Tom' Case.

In 1917, while pro-war sentiment was mounting swiftly in the face of repeated bombings, two west coast German consulate officials were convicted of conspiring to injure American shipping, railroad trains, bridges and munitions.

That same year, on January 12, occurred two history-making explosions. At Kingsland, N. J., a munitions plant of the Canadian Car & Foundry company was destroyed at a loss of $16,000,000 Nearby, at Haskell, N. J., an explosion of 400,000 pounds of powder in a duPont plant was felt in four states.

The Kingsland explosion and destruction of ammunition trains at Black Tom, N. J., on July 30, 1916, are still in the news. The latter sabotage killed four men and resulted in a loss of $45,000,000. Only this year a special United States tribunal placed responsibility for these explosions on Germany's shoulders and demanded payment.

Mexican Aid Sought.

In February, 1917, the United States published a note from German Foreign Secretary Zimmermann proposing a German-Mexican alliance for which Mexico would be paid by annexation of southwestern American states. It was later revealed that many German spies headquartered in Mexico and that both the Black Tom and Kingsland explosions may have been plotted there.

The year 1915 was a banner one for the saboteurs. Explosions were almost a daily event. At least 21 were recorded during the year. In a period of three months the duPont plant at Carney's Point, N. J., suffered three explosions which destroyed a mixing house, stillhouse and two other buildings.

EVERYBODY'S WOE

Food Goes Up, but Not Farm Prices; Here's Why, Says One Market Boss

NEW YORK —It's not the greedy middleman nor the selfish consumer who forces the American farmer to accept a pauper's profit on the produce from his land.

Blame it on the "dead end" of agriculture, the typical metropolitan market place where swift-moving fruits and vegetables run against a stone-wall of waste, confusion and spoilage.

That, at least, is the opinion of William Fellowes Morgan Jr , New York city's commissioner of markets, who's trying to "forge an alliance between the man with the plow and the woman with the market basket "

Writing in the current issue of Country Home magazine, Morgan places the hot poker of distribution waste firmly against metropolitan markets It's not a deliberate plot that causes the farmer to get back as little as 15 cents from the consumer's grocery dollar, he says It's simply that city markets throughout the country are "ill equipped, clogged up and handicapped with wasteful practices which cost millions of dollars yearly "

New York Guides Food Prices.

Discussing New York, which annually buys a billion dollars' worth of fresh food, enough milk to keep the navy afloat and enough fruits and vegetables to sink it, Morgan points out that market quotations throughout the nation are affected directly or indirectly by the daily Manhattan quotations. New York prices, in turn, will remain exorbitant until the bottleneck of inefficient handling is transformed into a smooth-working market system.

"I have wandered amidst the midnight uproar on our Hudson river waterfront, watching the goods arrive. I have followed crates, boxes and barrels from boats, trucks and freight cars until they rolled into the thunderous traffic snarls of West street I have watched buyers and sellers, truckmen and wagon drivers, and freight handlers of every kind running over one another, like folks trying to get out of a burning grandstand at a county fair I have seen men lug crates on their backs for blocks . . because they could find no room to park their vehicles at the places where the goods were unloaded."

CONGESTION—New York produce being trundled through business streets while the city sleeps. Better distribution methods would speed the process, cutting costs at a profit to both farmer and consumer.

Manhattan Reforms.

New York has made a start in solving the problem with its new Bronx terminal, a model market which other cities may soon be copying because Manhattan's confusion is duplicated in most other large population centers. New York has also taken market peddlers off the streets and placed them in city-controlled centers where stall rents are kept at a minimum. Market gangsters, like the famous "artichoke king" who once controlled New York sale of this vegetable and made a handsome profit, are being eliminated.

The city also has Mrs Frances Foley Gannon, who goes on the radio every morning to tell housewives about market conditions. If a certain item is plentiful, yet the price stays high, she tells them. Within a few hours grocers are being asked embarrassing questions.

Mr. Morgan is trying to start a nation-wide campaign against inefficient metropolitan markets He wants both the farmer and consumer to howl.

"Lower retail prices are a consummation devoutly to be wished by both," he says. "They would mean more consumption. More consumption means fewer surpluses. And fewer surpluses would mean an increased farm income."

When Witches and Goblins Roam

What night is better suited to informal entertaining than all Hallow's Eve? Candlelight, leering Jack-o-lanterns, and crepe paper decorations in orange and black create an eerie atmosphere for an evening of hilarious fun.

No one "dresses"—or, if they do, they dress in grotesque costumes which only add to the festivity.

Entertainment is simple, and easy to provide. Old fortune telling games and bobbing for apples are always fun, and a trip through a "chamber of horrors" is as much a part of Halloween as are good things to eat.

For variety, and a lull in the excitement of wilder entertainment, you might try a "paper and pencil game"—a prize to be given to the guest who can list the greatest number of superstitions, or answer the greatest number of questions in a "Cat Questionnaire" (for example), "What cat is an ancient burying place?" (catacomb) and "What cat is a plant of the mint family?" (catnip).

Food for a Halloween gathering is simple and substantial—baked beans with brown bread, cabbage slaw, and coffee; doughnuts with mulled cider, or pumpkin pies a la mode. You'll find among the following suggestions some that are old and some that are new.

Caramel Pecan Tarts.
(Makes 6 tarts)

1 can sweetened condensed milk
2 tablespoons hot water
6 small tart shells
½ cup nut meats (cut fine)

Place the unopened can of sweetened condensed milk in a kettle of boiling water, and keep at boiling point for three hours. (Be sure to keep can covered with water.) Remove the caramelized milk from the can and blend with two tablespoons hot water, beating until smooth. Cool. Pour into baked tart shells, and sprinkle with chopped nuts. Cut pattern of cat from stiff white paper With a sharp knife, carefully cut cats from pastry, using the paper pattern as a guide. Place on cookie sheet and bake in hot oven (450 degrees). Cool and place one on each tart before serving.

Chocolate Indians.

½ cup butter
1 cup granulated sugar
2 eggs
2 ozs. chocolate (melted)
½ cup bread flour
Dash salt
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
½ cup nuts (broken)

Cream the butter and add sugar slowly. Add the eggs and beat well. Add the melted chocolate, flour, salt, vanilla extract and nuts, blending lightly. Bake in a shallow layer in a well greased pan in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for 30 to 35 minutes. Remove from pan and cut in bars while hot.

Harvest Moon Doughnuts.
(Makes 24 doughnuts)

¼ cup butter
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
4 cups flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon nutmeg
½ teaspoon cinnamon
1 cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
Fat for deep fat frying

Cream butter and sugar. Beat in eggs. Sift together dry ingredients and add alternately with milk. Add vanilla. Roll dough ¼-inch thick and cut with doughnut cutter. Fry in deep fat at 385 degrees until doughnuts are brown.

Sausage Roll-Em-Ups.

4 small pork sausages
4 long slices bread
Prepared mustard
Melted butter

Cook pork sausages until lightly browned. Spread bread with prepared mustard. Wrap the sausages in the bread and fasten with a toothpick. Brush with melted butter—covering outside entirely. Bake in a hot oven (400 degrees) until brown. Garnish with crisp bacon and parsley.

Taffy Apples.

2 cups granulated sugar
½ cup light corn syrup
¾ cup water
Red liquid coloring (few drops)
12 red apples
12 skewers
Few drops oil of peppermint, cinnamon or cloves

Wash apples thoroughly and dry them. Insert skewer in blossom end. Put sugar, corn syrup and water into a saucepan and cook, stirring until the sugar is dissolved. Continue cooking without stirring until the temperature 300 degrees F is reached—crack stage.

Wash crystals away from side of saucepan as mixture cooks. Cook slowly during latter part of period so that syrup will not darken. Remove from flame and set saucepan into boiling water. Note: A double boiler may be used for this. Add coloring and flavoring and stir just enough to mix well.

Holding apple by skewer, plunge it into hot syrup. Draw it out quickly and twirl it until the syrup runs down to the stick and spreads smoothly over the apple. Stand skewer in a small glass or cake rack so that apple will not touch anything while cooling.

Apples should be made the day they are to be used because moisture from apple will soften candy and make it sticky. Dipping must be done rapidly or syrup will become too stiff for coating.

The football season is in full swing! One of these chilly Saturdays it would be a grand treat to let the youngsters bring "the gang" home from the game for a football supper.

Desired Extra Bathroom Need Take Little Space

Few houses are being built today without two bathrooms, or at least a bathroom and extra lavatory. In the modernization of an old house, consideration should be given to this feature.

Plumbing authorities have found that the essential fixtures of a bathroom can be installed in a floor space which measures five feet one way and six feet the other. Space at the unused end of the hallway often may be converted into an extra bathroom, and in some cases an oversized bedroom may be converted into a guest suite by partitioning it and including a bathroom.

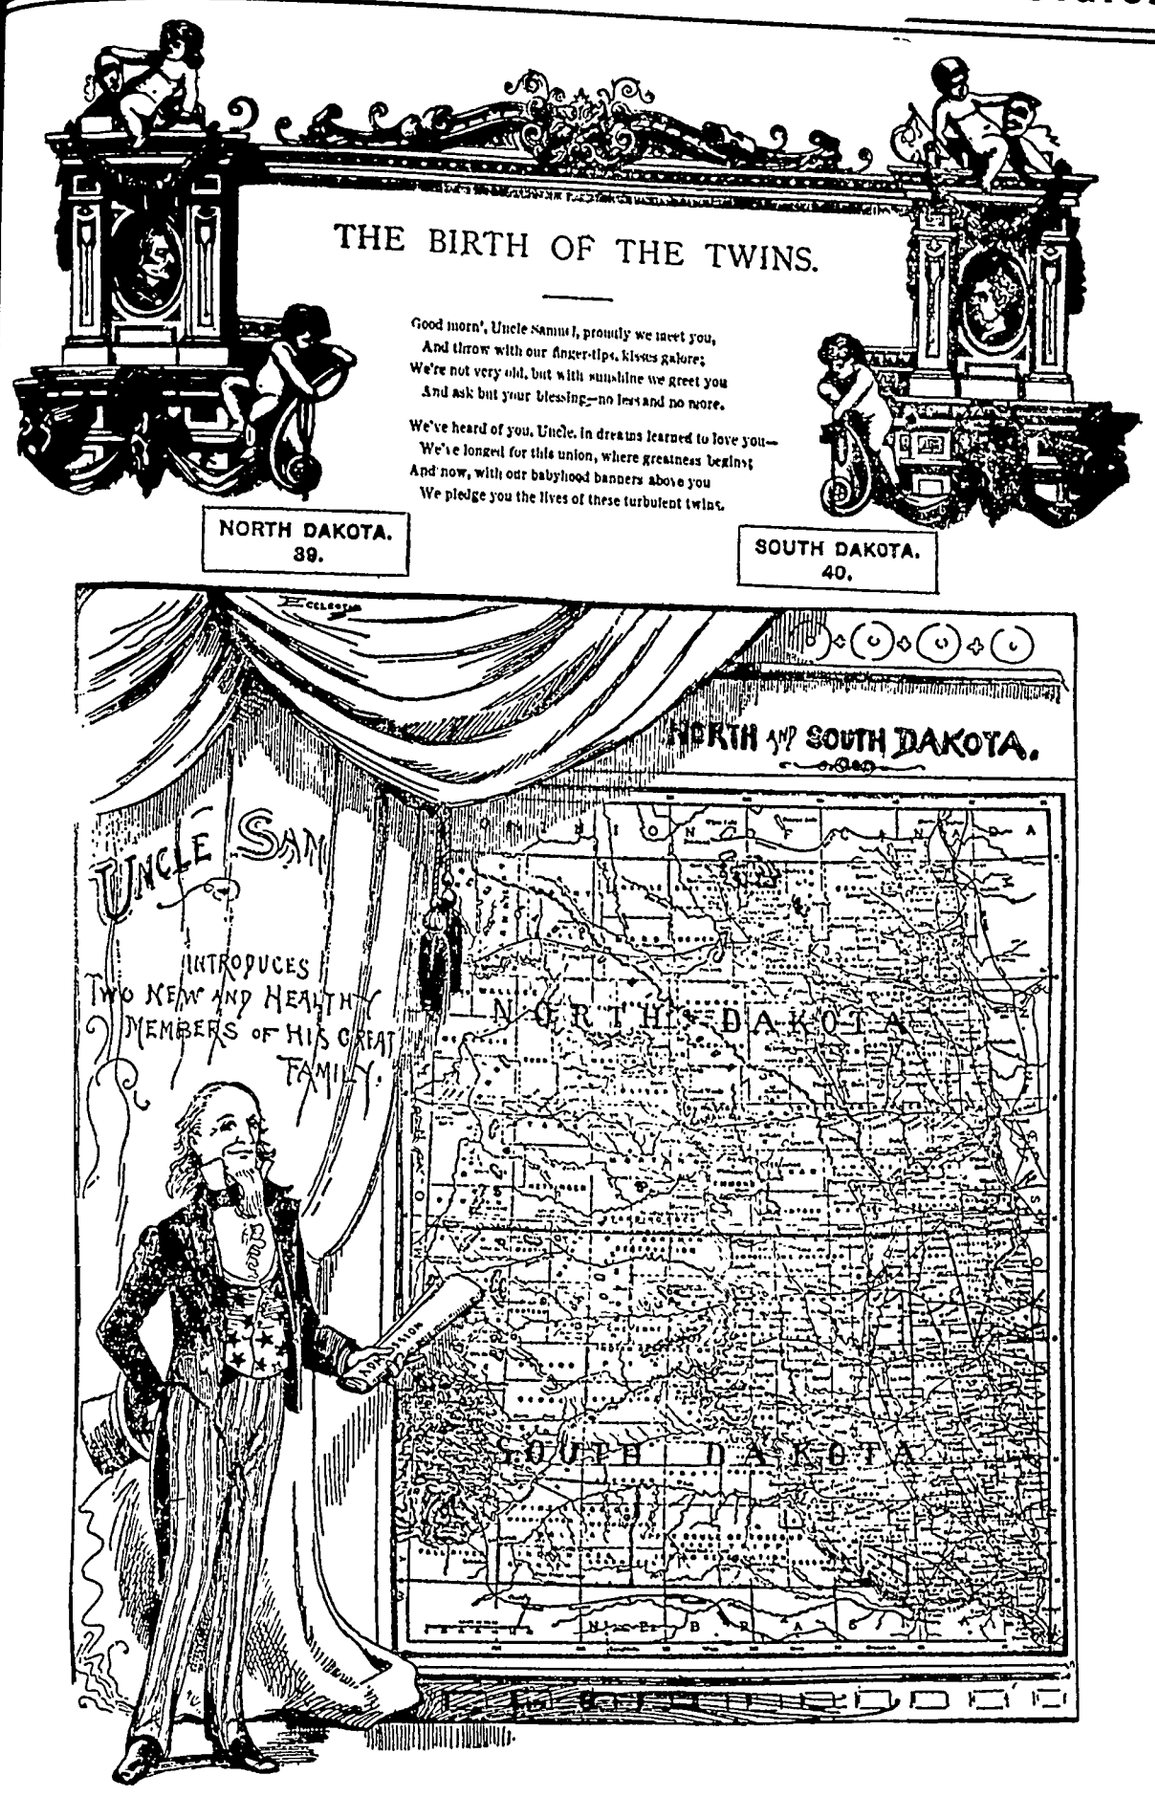
Fifty Years Ago Uncle Sam Proudly Announced Addition of a Pair of Twins to the Sisterhood of States



THE BIRTH OF THE TWINS.
Good morn', Uncle Samuel, proudly we meet you,
And throw with our finger-tips, kisses galore;
We're not very old, but with sunshine we greet you
And ask but your blessing—no less and no more.
We've heard of you, Uncle, in dreams learned to love you—
We've longed for this union, where greatness begins;
And now, with our babyhood banners above you
We pledge you the lives of these turbulent twins.

SOUTH DAKOTA

An illustration on the front page of the Bismarck (N. D.) Tribune for November 3, 1889, depicting the admis- of North Dakota and South Dakota into the Union.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

FIFTY years ago (at 3:40 o'clock in the afternoon of November 2, 1889, to be exact) Uncle Sam became the father of a pair of twins. This was the first time such event had taken place in the career of that venerable ntleman, who was then one hundred years old, and you y be sure that he was mighty proud.

he official "birth an- ncement" was a tele- phic dispatch sent from White House in Washing- by the secretary of state President Benjamin Har- on's cabinet. It read.

o Governor Miller and Gov r Mellette of North and South kota, Bismarck, North Dakota: he last act in the admission the two Dakotas as states into Union was completed this rnoon at the executive man- at 3 o'clock and 40 minutes the President signing at that ment, the proclamations re- ed by law for the admission the two states. The article on hibition submitted separately ach state was adopted in both. article providing for minor- representation in South Da- was rejected by the people. his is the first instance in the ory of the national govern- nt of twin states. North and th Dakota entered the Union the same moment.

JAMES G. BLAINE.

Thus it was that two more ers were added to the 38 ich, at that time, adorned e field of blue in the Amer- an flag and these two stars presented Uncle Sam's wins"—North Dakota and uth Dakota.

You will notice in the illustra- n above that North Dakota is edited with being the thirty- th state and South Dakota the rtieth. That's probably be- se it appeared in a North Da- a paper, the Bismarck Trib- which, in a recent golden ilee edition makes the state- nt that "Most available rec- in Washington pertaining to division of Dakota Territory admission of the two states r to North Dakota first, and to confirm the belief of all l North Dakotans that North ota actually entered the n first."

o which equally loyal South Dakotans are quite likely to reply, in the argot of the day, "Oh, yeah?" Also they might point to those words in Secretary Blaine's dispatch: "North and South Dakota entered the Union at the same moment."

With no desire to become involved in any sisterly dispute, the present chronicler would like to remind both North and South Dakotans of a tradition—how well authenticated I do not know—connected with signing the proclamations which created these two new states. It is probable that one state had a few seconds priority over the other, in so far as President Harrison couldn't very well have signed the two proclamations simultaneously. That is, he couldn't have, unless he were ambidextrous and there is no evidence to indicate that he was.

First? No One Knows!

But, according to this tradition, when the two proclamations were laid upon his desk for his signature, someone, foreseeing the possibility of a dispute over which state had the honor of entering the Union first, covered the proclamations with a sheet of paper, then shuffled them around a bit, and exposed only the space at the bottom of the proclamations where the President was to affix his signature. After he had signed both, they were again shuffled around before the covering sheet of paper was removed. As a result no one who was present knew which proclamation was signed first. Therefore, Secretary Blaine could truthfully say "North and South Dakota entered the Union at the same moment."

Just as the two new states have had eventful careers as separate commonwealths during the last half century, so did they have an interesting history together for nearly two centuries. The first white men to visit both were Frenchmen. It is probable that the French explorer and trader, Le Sueur, visited the present site of Sioux Falls, S. D., in 1683 to buy furs. It is known more definitely that by 1700 his traders were operating on the Big Sioux river at Flandreau and Sioux Falls.

Thirty-eight years later the first white men came to North Dakota—a French fur-trading expedition led by Pierre Verendrye, who came down from Canada to the present site of Minot and then pushed on southward to the Missouri river.

For the next 60 years the Dakota country was a part of the French territory of Louisiana, except for a brief interlude when it belonged to Spain. Then in 1803 the lilies of France were lowered when Thomas Jefferson made his famous Louisiana Purchase from Napoleon and from that time on the Stars and Stripes floated over its upland plains.

Dakota was a part of Louisiana Territory, organized in 1804, which was changed to Missouri Territory in 1812. In 1849 that portion of North Dakota east of the Missouri river was made part of Minnesota Territory and that portion west of the "Big Muddy" was part of Nebraska Territory. South Dakota had an even more varied career in this respect. The part east of the Missouri was successively included in Michigan Territory in 1834, Wisconsin Territory in 1836, Iowa Territory in 1838 and Minnesota Territory in 1849. The part west of the Missouri was made a part of Nebraska Territory in 1854.

Dakota Territory Founded.

In 1861 Dakota Territory emerged as an entity which included the later "twin states" and large parts of Montana and Wyoming. However, in 1863, when the territory of Idaho was organized, the Dakotas were reduced to substantially their present limits.

In 1862 the territorial capital was located at Yankton but 20 years later it was removed to Bismarck. The next year, 1883, a convention was held at Sioux Falls, a constitution was drawn up and a petition for statehood was presented to congress. It met with no success but the agitation for statehood continued. Finally in 1889 an enabling act was passed, providing for the division of the territory "on the line of the seventh standard parallel" and on November 2 of that year Uncle Sam presented his "twins" to the sisterhood of states.

November, 1889, was an eventful month for Uncle Sam. November 2 witnessed the birth of his first "twins," North and South Dakota Six days later he had another daughter, Montana, and three days later still another whom he named for his first President—Washington.

In many respects the history of Montana resembles that of her neighbors to the east—North and South Dakota. Verendrye, the Frenchman, was the first white man to visit this "Land of the Shining Mountains." That was in 1742. In 1804 Lewis and Clark, crossed Montana from the northeast to the extreme southwest and recrossed it again the next year.

In 1840 Father De Smet, the Jesuit, began missionary work among the Flathead Indians and the next year a mission was established in the Bitter Root valley. With this beginning permanent white occupation of the territory became a certainty. When gold was discovered in the early sixties there followed a veritable flood of immigration. Within a year the little town of Virginia City near Alder Creek was a flourishing city of 4,000 inhabitants. In 1863 the territory of Idaho, which included the present Montana, was set off from Washington and Dakota and on May 22, 1864, the territory of Montana was erected from land taken from Idaho.

Ten years later the seat of government was moved from Virginia City to Helena and with the completion of the Northern Pacific railroad in 1883 began an era of prosperity, added to by the development of silver and copper mining. By now the lusty young territory was beginning to think of statehood and in January and February, 1884, a convention framed a constitution which was ratified by the people in November and an application for admission to the Union was presented to congress.

Five years dragged by, however, before congress took action. Then in February, 1889, it passed an enabling act and on November 8 Montana became the 41st state in the Union.

A Greek Explorer.

Spanish, French, English, Dutch, Americans—all have been the "first white men" to see or set foot upon the soil of 47 of our states. But to the state of Washington belongs the distinction of having associated with its earliest history a Greek!

In 1592 a Greek explorer named Juan de Fuca visited the region of the present state of Washington but it remained for a Spanish explorer named Hecta to first set foot upon the soil of the northwest coast. That was on July 14, 1775, and the place was near the mouth of the Hoh river. Other explorers, English and Americans, followed in his wake, but more important to the future history of this commonwealth was the fact that on May 11, 1792, a certain Capt. Robert Gray, an American, "discovered" a river to which he gave the name of his ship, the Columbia.

For the title of the United States to what is now Oregon and Washington rests upon the voyages of Captain Gray to the exploration of Lewis and Clark, who established winter quarters at Fort Clatsop on the Columbia during the winter of 1805, and to the occupancy of this region by the Astor Fur company, an American firm, in 1811-12.

This was the only territory in the United States that was never at any time legally under any other flag except the Stars and Stripes. True, during the War of 1812 the British government, in conjunction with the Northwest Fur company, compelled Astor to sell out his holdings to the British firm and after the war the country was occupied jointly by the Northwest company and by early American settlers. But the United States never once relinquished her claims upon this region.

"54-40 or Fight!"

The boundary line between the territories claimed by the two countries soon became a subject for bitter dispute which for a time threatened to result in war. Despite the American yells of "Fifty-four, Forty or Fight!" a settlement was reached in 1846 by which the Webster-Ashburton treaty fixed the boundary from the Rocky mountains to the Pacific along the 49th parallel of latitude

On August 14, 1848, the Territory of Oregon was organized Its boundaries were the 42nd and the 49th parallels, the Rocky mountains and the Pacific, thus including the present state of Washington. On March 2, 1853, the Territory of Washington was organized, including the present state and that portion of Idaho and Montana lying north of parallel 46 and west of the Rockies. When the present state of Oregon was established with its present limits in 1859 the remainder of Oregon Territory was added to Washington Territory.

When Idaho Territory was organized in 1863 Washington Territory was reduced to its present limits. Agitation for statehood began in 1876. But it was not until February 2, 1889, that the enabling act was passed by congress and on November 11 President Harrison signed the proclamation which made it a state.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D.
Dean of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for November 5

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education; used by permission.

RIGHTEOUSNESS IN THE KINGDOM

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 5:17-20, 38-45; 6:1-4.

GOLDEN TEXT—Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect.—Matthew 5:48.

"Righteousness in the kingdom," the title of our lesson, properly relates its teaching to the kingdom of the Messiah which is to come on the earth, and to the condition which shall then prevail. At the same time we agree with Dr. James M. Gray that "it would be wrong to press this too far and to say that the Sermon on the Mount has no application whatever to the Christian church or the time in which we live, for God is the same through all dispensations and the underlying principles of His government never change."

Certainly it is true that if all of the men and all of the nations of the earth were on this Armistice Sunday true followers of Christ and ready to carry out the teachings of this lesson, there would no longer be any possibility of war. This means that the best peace propaganda is the sending of missionaries and teachers to all the earth to win men to Christ.

Our lesson should be studied and taught with great care lest we confuse morality with Christianity and make it appear that men are justified before God by their good works rather than by their faith in Christ.

I. Christ Fulfills the Law (5:17-20).

The law of God is eternal, never to be abrogated, never set aside. Christ Himself, although we might properly say that He was in reality the Law-giver and thus had power and authority over the law, indicated His purpose in coming to be that of giving the law its full meaning, not of destroying it. One could wish that those who profess to be His servants might have the same measure of regard for God's law. If they did, they obviously would not be so ready to ignore it, so quick to change it or explain it away, and far more ready to accept with their Master every "jot and tittle," that is, even the minutest detail of His Word.

Recognizing Christ as the fulfillment of the law should prepare one to manifest obedience to every moral precept through His grace and by His strength. Certainly it should not lead anyone to lawlessness or carelessness regarding details of the daily walk. Fellowship with the Saviour should be revealed in consistent living (v 20).

II. Christ Explains the Law (5:38-45).

Look at verses 21 to 37. The spirit of murder is anger (vv. 21, 22). A lustful look is adultery (vv. 27-30), and it is better to be blind than to be guilty of it. Divorce is linked very plainly with adultery (vv. 31, 32). Swearing is forbidden (vv. 33-37). Thus Christ strips outward conformity to the law of its apparent virtue and reveals that with God it is the spirit that gives meaning to the act.

He goes on to make plain that God alone is wise enough to take vengeance, that we ought never to retaliate with evil for evil. Note that verse 39 probably refers to an insult rather than to physical violence; that in verse 40 it is a question of a difference of opinion in which the other man feels that he has a legal right to your coat; and that here, as in verses 41 and 42, it is not a matter of letting a wicked or scheming person defraud you of your rights or property, but rather of doing what is required of you in an ungrudging spirit and of being generous with others who are in need. In Christ we are to be like our heavenly Father and love our enemies (vv. 43-45).

III. Christ Illustrates the Law (6:1-4).

Possibly it would be more appropriate for us to say that Christ here illustrates the right and the wrong way of fulfilling the law. How very clear He makes it that the one who, while ostensibly doing the will of God, actually is seeking the recognition and glory of men has received his full reward, for men have applauded his act of generosity. The transaction is complete and God has nothing to do with it at all. On the other hand, the one who gives in the spirit of Christ, not wanting men to know of his faithful stewardship (v. 4), and in fact making no reckoning of it himself (v. 3), may be certain that he has a heavenly Father who takes careful account of the loving deeds of His children and who will reward him, both in this world and in the world to come.

Memories of Happy Days

Why is it that the memory of some days in the past, unmarked by any striking event, always come to us like the breath of spring? It may be that on those days, in reward for some forgotten act, God drew us close to Him, and that we absorbed something of His eternal peace and happiness.

Hasty Regrets Follow Hasty Conclusions

Jimmy, who had been climbing trees, came in for the second time within the week with his trousers torn.

"This time you can go upstairs and mend them yourself," ordered the harassed mother.

Some time later she went upstairs to see how he was getting along. She found the trousers there, but no Jimmy.

Puzzled, she came downstairs, still looking for Jimmy. She noticed, as she passed, that the cellar door, usually shut, was open. She went to the door and called down loudly and angrily, "Are you running around down there without your trousers on?"

The reply came in a stern and heavy masculine voice: "No, madam, I'm reading the gas meter."

Pull the Trigger on Constipation, and Pepsin-ize Acid Stomach Too

When constipation brings on acid indigestion, bloating, dizzy spells, gas, coated tongue, sour taste, and bad breath, your stomach is probably loaded up with certain undigested food and your bowels don't move. So you need both Pepsin to help break up fast that rich undigested food in your stomach, and Laxative Senna to pull the trigger on those lazy bowels. So be sure your laxative also contains Pepsin. Take Dr. Caldwell's Laxative, because its Syrup Pepsin helps you gain that wonderful stomach-relief, while the Laxative Senna moves your bowels. Tests prove the power of Pepsin to dissolve those lumps of undigested protein food which may linger in your stomach, to cause belching, gastric acidity and nausea. This is how pepsinizing your stomach helps relieve it of such distress. At the same time this medicine wakes up lazy nerves and muscles in your bowels to relieve your constipation So see how much better you feel by taking the laxative that also puts Pepsin to work on that stomach discomfort, too. Even finicky children love to taste this pleasant family laxative. Buy Dr. Caldwell's Laxative—Senna with Syrup Pepsin at your druggist today!

IOWA PHEASANTS ARE TOUGH BIRDS

Klemme Main Street was the scene of two funny accidents that took place Sunday and was repeated Monday.

Sunday a group of hunters stopped in Klemme after getting their limit of birds. One man in the party, opened the trunk on the car to put away his hunting coat when a pheasant flew out and went merrily on his way.

Monday another group stopped in Klemme on their way home to Des Moines after the day's hunt One of the men took three pheasants out of his hunting coat, laid them on the steps of the First National Bank, took out a cigarett which he lit and turned to his companions to talk it over. Just then they noticed a pheasant flying across the street over the top of Herman Paul's filling station. It was a queer sight! Then as the group turned around and the hunters saw only two pheasants on the steps where there had been three a few seconds before! The pheasant had merely been stunned and was enjoying a good nap, when he got a sniff of good Klemme air and decided to wake up and take off! The hunters got plenty of healthy ha, ha's from the natives gathered about.

KLEMME SHOT IN HUNTING ACCIDENT ON RIVER BANK

Thus read the headline in the Klemme Times of October 25, the day before the Editor and wife were rushing around getting ready to drive to the East. The headline took the eye of one of Klemme's practical jokers so he prepared a surprise package which was then mailed to the Editor in care of the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, Maryland, where we were visiting.

The package contained a hunting cap all shot full of holes and a copy of the Times marked "Exhibit A". And, of course, there were a group of Midshipmen around to see what the mysterious package contained and we got the merry ha, ha!

Since returning home we have been doing some "sleuthing" and it has come to our attention the one Mr. Ira Overholt, implement dealer de luxe, is wearing a NEW HUNTING CAP.

For the enlightment of our readers, the heading should have read "Klemme MAN Shot in Hunting Accident on River Bank".

DORMITORY AT NAVAL ACADEMY LARGEST IN WORLD

And while we are on the subject of Annapolis, we might state that one of the big sights at the U. S. Naval Academy is Bancroft Hall, the dormitory where some 2400 young men stay. The building is in the form of the letter "H" and the square is four blocks from one corner to the other. This may give you an idea of the immensity of the structure. The building is five stories high with basement. Besides housing the boys it also has has a large recreational hall, a large dance hall, offices and a dining room, that is six hundred feet long and eighty feet wide. The halls are large enough for drill and formation when the weather is bad and formations cannot be held outside.

The Academy also boasts the largest indoor swimming pool in the world. The pool is 150 feet long and 60 feet wide and the water is so pure that it is drinkable. In addition there is another large pool in the gymnasium.

THE WAY OF PHEASANT HUNTING

Here's the way one Klemme sportsman puts it about pheasant hunting. First day: Three birds, very little walking. Second day: two birds and a hellofalotof walking. Third day: No birds and still walking likeell.

RING THE BELL

An Italian who was working on a railway in Florida had been told to beware of rattlesnakes, but was assured that they would always give the warning rattle before striking.

One day he was sitting on a pine log eating his dinner when he saw a big snake coiled a few feet in front of him. Keeping an eye on the reptile, he began to raise his feet from the ground, and as he did so the snake's fangs hit the bark beneath him, no warning having been given.

"Son of a gun!" yelled the Italian. "Why you no ringa da bell?"

THAT argument between Bette Davis and Warner Brothers should set a record of some kind. Usually a star protests because she either wants better stories or more money. Miss Davis didn't want either.

She gets the best stories that the studio can find; in fact, the executives can't hear of a good one without trying to buy it for her. The latest purchase is "No Time for Comedy," the play that Katharine Cornell has been doing so successfully for so long on the New York stage. It's said that George Brent will play opposite Miss Davis, in the role done in New York by Laurence Olivier.

Miss Davis' complaint is that they buy too many of these good stories for her—in other words, she works too hard. Since last January she has made "Juarez," "Dark Victory," "The Old Maid," and "Elizabeth and Essex," which makes an impressive record.

Its producers work with law enforcement authorities, and each case that is dramatized is based on facts supplied by official agencies.

They didn't dare pause to consider the rest of the public, who went to hear them play.

Lace by Day and Lace by Night Continues Its Magic Dominion

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

FASHION is growing increasingly lace-inspired As the style picture for the winter social season unfolds the importance of lace is emphasized throughout every phase of the mode.

Time was when lace was considered a special-occasion item but as regarded today, lace becomes a positive fashion "must" in every well-planned wardrobe It's as good style to wear lace in the daily routine of affairs as it is to array in lace for those dramatic highspot moments when every woman seeks to look her loveliest and most alluring.

To be sure in the interest of good taste discrimination must be exercised in choosing the right lace for the right place.

With suits as popular as they are this winter the call for a collection of blouses becomes imperative. Of course there should be at least one lace blouse included in the list and several of varied-type lace will prove none too many. The lace blouse pictured to the right in the foreground of the illustration herewith is styled to a nicety, with a softly draped front, wide full sleeves and a peplum which has a slight bustle treatment in back. Wear it with a velvet skirt and a cunning velvet toque for any afternoon occasion which calls for a dress-up costume.

The new metallic embroidered laces make up beautifully into fitted jacket-blouse types such as you see centered in the group, and if you are going to dinner dances this winter or banqueting with socialites, a formal jacket and skirt dress becomes a necessary luxury these times. Perhaps the charming model here shown will help you in making a selection when it comes to "looking up" a correctly styled evening dress. A truly beautiful lace is this in creamy beige embellished with metal threadwork achieving that air of elegance so characteristic of this season's fashions. The classic simplicity of the handsome flared skirt of monotone net sets off the glory of the superbly beautiful metallic embroidered lace basque to perfection. The resplendent bib necklace and wide bracelets are just such as fashion decrees shall be worn on gala occasions with one's handsomest gown.

When a very voluminous skirt is of black lace with a deep flounce of matching lace about the very wide hemline, when the bodice blouse worn with it is of cerise red satin with a mantilla-like lace fichu enveloping the shoulders as pictured to the left in the group, you sense, and rightly so, that the costume reflects Spanish influence. You know also that the ensemble interprets the "last word" in high fashion. Also the message of exquisite black lace for evening wear is conveyed to you in unmistakable terms. The separate little shoulder cape or fichu is a decided feature of evening dresses this season.

The flair for lace is, however, not confined to formal dress. On the daytime program lace is assigned a leading role. One of the cleverest uses of lace is to trim sheer black wool or crepe afternoon frocks with black lace edging in exactly the same manner as val lace edging is used on lingerie dresses and blouses. You will find these lace-trimmed blacks very flattering and youthful in aspect as they are styled with naive simplicity.

Evening Glamor

There is no limit to the wealth of jewelry fashion urges ladies who are style-ambitious to wear this season, especially when it comes to attending night-time functions. In the picture hand-fashioned gold plated beads strung on heavy knotted silk cord, designed by Simonne Gerli, as new as the world of tomorrow, contrast dramatically with the old world elegance of an evening bag of ancient Egyptian silk brocade which is re-embroidered in gold thread. The dynamic young designer medallions the hundred-year-old Egyptian frame with butterfly motifs in Italian mosaic. The story of handbags for this season promises to be a thrilling one.

Hooped Peplum

Designed to fit over the newest wide-hipped evening frocks is the white ermine wrap shown by Bruyere The coat is about finger-tip length and has a peplum fringed with white silk and held out with a wide hoop.

Eyeleted Pique Is Important Style

The new eyelet embroidered piques now showing are creating a sensation. The simpler eyeleted patterns are ideal for the smart tailored shirtwaist to wear with your suit. The eyelet embroidered edgings make up beautifully in collar and cuff sets Boleros to wear over dark crepe frocks or linen tailleurs are ever so chic in eyelet embroidered pique. Milliners are also doing clever things with the new piques. Taking it all in all it promises to be very much of a pique season this summer.

Gold Braid Favored For Accessories

Collar and cuff sets of gold braid are being displayed in the neckwear sections. You can also buy gold braid military looking frogs and epaulets for shoulder decoration on your new black dress.

Effective new neckwear shows intriguing collars styled of gold kid, to wear with your afternoon black sheer wool or velvet afternoon dress.

Wide Inset Belts Appear on Frocks

Many of the incoming frocks are styled with wide inset belts that accent high bustline and small waistline. The trend to jeweled girdles is also noted. Belts of gold or silver kid give a dramatic touch to black velvet gowns that stress utmost simplicity in their styling.

A Bow for a Belt

Trading a belt for a bow or a tassel, Bruyere features in his new collection slim beltless frocks which have a bow or a tassel posed at the waistline where a belt would ordinarily be.

WARS SELDOM HELP FARMER

Expert Advises Adherence to Planned Crop Schedule.

By Dr. V. R. WERTZ

Regardless of whether or not the armies of the world decide on stepping up the pace of war, many American farmers are willing to try a gamble which appears to be a losing proposition unless economic laws are repealed by mass hysteria of the world's inhabitants. This would seem apparent from facts available to the rural economics department of Ohio State university.

It may be possible that mathematics are blown out the window when wars occur but it is a matter of historical record that numerals have their old values when wars end The farmers who are betting their judgment against statistics are the farmers who are abandoning their planned crop schedules to plant an unusual amount of wheat this fall and coming spring.

These farmers give two reasons for believing that extra acres of wheat will be profitable; first, rapid increases in grain prices occurred immediately after this war began; and second, wheat prices started upward in 1916 and continued to rise until pegged at a bonanza figure.

Such increases as may occur in grain prices are no more than the farmer deserves, but it is doubtful if the planting of a markedly increased acreage of wheat is the proper method to add dollars to the 1940 farm income. Several reasons present themselves for doubting that unusually large wheat harvest next year will be profitable for its producers.

The chief reason is that the granaries of the world already are bursting with the largest stocks of wheat that have been known since records were kept. The world price of wheat in Liverpool last July was the lowest on record since Queen Elizabeth ruled England.

A second reason for doubting the advisability of increasing wheat acreages in the United States is that consumption of wheat does not increase in time of war although prices may rise if supplies fall to normal or below. Any unwarranted rise in wheat and flour prices in the United States is certain to be met by resistance from consumers.

Local Seeds Best

Seeds from trees in the backyard or along a neighbor's fence are likely to produce better trees than those from distant places, says R. W. Graeber, forester of the North Carolina State college extension service.

The reason for this, Graeber explained, is that trees must be thoroughly adapted to the climate of the planting site. Seed of even the same species gathered at great distances from the planting location cannot compete with the home-grown product.

Sooner or later, the State college forester said, a variation occurs in the size of the seedling trees and in their survival, usually in favor of the home-area seedlings. Local seed are considered to be those obtained within a hundred miles of the planting site and with a difference in elevation of not more than 1,000 feet.

Soil-Erosion Is Now Nation-Wide Problem

Although "man-made" soil erosion increased year by year in this country as settlers moved west, it was not until 1933 that the problem was attacked on a nationwide scale. In that year the soil erosion service, now the soil conservation service, was organized.

During the past six years, 175 demonstration areas have been established in 45 states and Puerto Rico, the service says in a current statement. Erosion control work is going forward under technical supervision of the service near more than 350 CCC camps. Hundreds of individual farms are being replanned for soil conservation in co-operation with state extension services.

Over the country as a whole the soil conservation service demonstration program includes co-operative agreements with nearly 70,000 land-holders and covers more than 12 million acres of privately owned land.

Deer Problem

In a number of eastern states, the excess high population of whitetail deer is proving to be a serious problem to the farmer. Pennsylvania has erected many miles of deer-proof fences. Michigan is now experimenting with electric fences to keep deer from damaging crops, the National Wildlife federation reports. One Michigan farmer, given permission to kill trespassing deer, shot 14 in one field, then quit in disgust with the deer still coming.

In a Minnesota case, a house was sold to the first bidder for $675 after the second and only other bidder had offered $680. The auctioneer refused to consider such a trifling increase. So the second bidder sued but lost his case on the ground that no contract exists until the offer to purchase is accepted by the auctioneer.

Iowa Abides By Gov. Wilson And Will Observe Thanksgiving Nov. 30

PROCLAMATION

From our constant effort for progressive advancement in an economic and spiritual sense, we of America have developed a truly awakening custom of pausing once a year to contemplate as a people, the many blessings which are ours, and for Thanksgiving to the All-Wise Providence This year we have abundant cause to be grateful, traceable more than ever from the form of government under which we live

Never before in the lifetime of those we know, nor in the life spans of those who have gone before has humanity's pathway of liberty, of freedom and of the reflection of the Devine in man, been lighted as now through the American Bill of Rights The fine tolerance for differences in racial origin and divergent religious and philosophical ideals, strengthen our confidence and confirm our loyalty to all things truly American. In our freedom from the curse of war, we extend sincere sympathy to the millions of innocent victims of the lust for power that has filled the old world with unparalleled crime and suffering. As one people with one voice we fervently pray that this burden be speedily lifted

The countless blessings which we enjoy as a part of our daily lives inspire us to return thanks at the close of another year to the Great Disposer of Events Therefore, I, Geo. A. Wilson, Governor, in accordance with the traditions of the people of America and of Iowa, do hereby proclaim, Thursday, November 30 1939, as Thanksgiving Day

I recommend to my fellow citizens that on the day named the people of Iowa lay aside their secular pursuits, so far as is possible; that we assemble in our houses of worship and with voice and music express the spirit of this occasion; that we gather around our firesides and recount the blessings of the year and of the past that we humble ourselves before Almighty God, and from our humility offer up prayers of gratitude to Him from whom all mercy and goodness flows, and make sincere appeals for continuance of that devine pleasure that has so generously protected us all of our lives.

Because of the extraordinary association of the blessings we enjoy with our great inheritance from those early patriots who founded this nation and the Thanksgiving custom I further recommend that the National Colors be displayed on our public buildings, our homes and our places of business on the occasion aforesaid

Let us be thankful that the material resources of nature and the intellectual and spiritual powers of men have joined in the filling of our granaries and storehouses and driving the wheels of industry to provide everything needful for our peaceful pursuits and let us give evidence of our gratitude by remembering those less fortunate than ourselves Let us give thanks for the government under which we live and for the wisdom of our forefathers in preserving for us the blessings of freedom and liberty which so exalt our daily lives according to His pattern. Let us be thankful for the equal rights of men, for our freedom of worship, for our freedom of speech and of assembly and for the security of our homes and our persons. Above all, may we give grateful and humble acknowledgement of Christianity, which is the foundation on which man has built, and which has has given us faith, love and happiness in this life and hope for the fulfillment of the Devine Purpose in the life to come.

In Testimony Whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State to be affixed, at Des Moines, this sixth day of November, in the Year of Our Lord One Thounsand Nine Hundred Thirty-Nine, and in the One Hundred Sixty-fourth Year of the Independance of the United States of America, and of the State of Iowa, the Ninety-Third.

(Signed) GEO A. WILSON
Governor

NEW AUTO LICENSE PLATES GO ON SALE DECEMBER FIRST

Iowa's 1940 Auto License Plates Will Be New Color Scheme

For several years Iowa's auto license plates have been blue on white, and white on blue, but Iowa's 1940 plates will be blue numbers on an orange background, according to County Treasurer Roy L. McMillin, who said the new plates will go on sale December first.

The pates will be the same size as in other years, and the license fee will also be the same.

As has been the case in past years, the treasure's office is flooded with requests for "pet" numbers Those requesting special numbers, however, should have the application and check on file before December 1st so that the number can be laid aside in the normal order of filling out the books

Truck registrations will be considerable different this year than has been the case in the past Registrations will be based on gross weight of the truck plus the weight of the load As a consequence it will be nesessary for truckowners to know the weight of their truck empty in order to obtain the correct registration.

Fees will range from $15 for a gross weight of three tons to $285 for a gross weight of 15 tons.

Another innovation will be the plan to sell truck licenses on a six months basis. Truckers will be able to buy the plate for a half year at a time and renew them on the first of July. The six month plates will be of a distinctive color other than the regular plates.

No free trailer licenses will be issued hereafter, accoring to the new law governing registration of trailers Fees will range from $1 for wagon boxes for farmers up to $35 for eight ton vehicles.

A high of $375 will be the fee for 18 ton combined truck-tractor and semi trailers At the bottom of the scale in this class will be the six ton vehicles with an assessment of $60 for licenses.

Other rates will include $25 for portable mills and $15 for corn shellers.

Sealed Pullet

You won't believe this story - we didn't--but it is true just the same. When a group of men were shelling corn at the George Wright home 7 miles northeast of Lake City, recently Ed. Ringgenberg thought he saw a chicken's bill protruding through an opening in a sealed corn crib, they were unable to find any place where the pullet had entered the corn crib, they made preparations to release it. The pullet was trapped in a space large enough for her to stand in, about 7 feet from the floor of the crib. When removed, she was a little uncertain in her walk but was able to stand when put on the ground. When offered water she thrust her bill in the container as a baby chick would but in time she drank quantities of water. The corn crib was sealed in 1937 and re-sealed in 1938; so you figure it out.

Career Men

Billy Brown, 3, and Ronny Mincer, 4, of Panora, went into--- and cut of---the painting business last week When the two youngsters found some paint and a brush, they performed a paint job on the most expensive automobile in the city, the local funeral coach.

Oldest European Dye

The oldest known European dye was made from the herbaceous plant, reseda luteola, commonly called "weld" The name weld probably came from the old German word walda from which the French word gaude was derived—the source of our own word "gaudy." To produce the propular gaude green of that day, the material to be dyed was first dipped in indigo and then in weld.

MEMORIES OF THANKSGIVING PRICELESS HEIRLOOMS

Cooking the Thanksgiving Dinner

Incredible as it may seem the calendar is bringing Thanksgiving time again and with it comes to every homemaker thoughts for the Thanksgiving menu—plans for its preparation and anticipation of the family's return.

Today, however, I want to reverse this whole situation. I want to suggest to you that enjoyment of your family on Thanksgiving day should be the keynote of every one of the plans that you make for the day. Now that does not mean for one minute that I am suggesting that the Thanksgiving dinner be slighted. I couldn't do that, for who of us for one minute would sacrifice those precious memories of Thanksgiving dinners at grandmothers that are really priceless heirlooms. No, I say—we won't sacrifice the dinner—but we will plan it so that you will be as free as possible on Thanksgiving day so that you too can enjoy the family and let the family enjoy you. A miracle you say? No—not really—just wise planning—plenty of work the day before perhaps—but time—no worry—and an easy dinner on Thanksgiving—and that's worth while isn't it?

How to do it? Well here are my suggestions. First, it is entirely possible to clean, prepare and even stuff the turkey the day before Thanksgiving rather than on Thanksgiving morning. Then put it on a rack in an open roasting pan and store it in your refrigerator over night. If you have a mechanical refrigerator it will be running of course. If you have an ice refrigerator, be sure to get an ample supply of ice so that your refrigerator can really work for you over this holiday.

Vegetables—salads—relishes, including celery, radish roses, etc., even desserts, one and all can be gotten ready on Wednesday and as I say, then all that remains for Thanksgiving day is just the cooking, the table setting and later the serving of the viands.

Below I am including a number of Thanksgiving recipes which are all planned for just such Thanksgiving ease. And—a happy Thanksgiving to each one of you.

Roast Turkey.

Allow ¾ to 1 pound of turkey per person served. Dress, clean, stuff and truss turkey. Brush well with unsalted fat and place on rack in large open roasting pan. (Store over night in refrigerator if desired).

Roast in moderate oven (325 degrees) allowing approximately 20 minutes per pound roasting time for a 12-pound turkey, 17 minutes per pound for an 18-pound turkey and 15 minutes per pound for a 22-pound turkey.

Brush with melted butter just before serving.

Dressing for Turkey.

10 cups soft bread crumbs
1 cup butter (melted)
1 tablespoon salt
1 cup chopped parsley
2 tablespoons poultry seasoning

Mix all ingredients thoroughly and use for stuffing the turkey. Note: This amount of dressing is sufficient for a 10-pound turkey. If a larger turkey is to be stuffed the recipe should be increased proportionately.

Giblet Gravy.

Pour off liquid in pan in which turkey has been roasted. From liquid skim off 6 tablespoons fat; return fat to roasting pan and brown with 6 tablespoons flour. Add 3 cups stock in which giblets, neck, and tip of wings have been cooked; or if preferred, 3 cups milk may be substituted instead of the stock. Cook, stirring constantly, until thick; then season to taste with salt and pepper. Add giblets (cut in small pieces), heat well, and serve hot.

Oranged Sweet Potatoes.
(Serves 6-8)

Parboil 6 medium sweet potatoes, peel and slice lengthwise. (Prepare to this point on Wednesday and store overnight in refrigerator.) Arrange slices in baking dish and sprinkle with ½ cup brown sugar, dot with 2 tablespoons butter and add 1 tablespoon grated orange rind. Pour over this ½ cup orange juice and scatter 2 tablespoons brown sugar and a little paprika over top. Bake covered for 30 minutes in moderately hot oven (375 degrees). Uncover and bake approximately 15 minutes longer.

Creamed Onions With Cream Cheese.
(Serves 6)

2 pounds small white onions
3 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons flour
2 cups milk
½ teaspoon salt
1 block cream cheese

Boil onions until tender in salted water. (This can be done on the day before Thanksgiving and in this way the onions will be all ready for their final baking on Thursday.) Melt butter, add flour and stir thoroughly. Add milk and salt and stir until thick. Then add 1 block of cream cheese broken in small pieces. When blended, pour over onions in a baking casserole. Sprinkle with buttered cracker crumbs and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) until crackers are browned. Serve at once.

Cabbage-Pineapple Gelatin Salad.

1 tablespoon unflavored Gelatin
½ cup pineapple juice (canned)
1 cup water (boiling)
1¼ teaspoon salt
1½ tablespoons vinegar
2 cups cabbage (shredded)
1 cup pineapple (diced)

Soak gelatin in the cold pineapple juice. Add to hot water and stir until dissolved. Add salt and vinegar. Chill. Add remaining ingredients and pour into mold. Chill until set.

Pumpkin Pie.
(Makes 2 pies)

3 cups pumpkin
4 eggs
1½ cups brown sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
¾ teaspoon grated nutmeg
¾ teaspoon ginger
⅛ teaspoon cloves
⅛ teaspoon allspice
½ teaspoon cinnamon
4½ cups milk (scalded)

To cold canned or cooked pumpkin add the eggs (slightly beaten). Blend salt and spices with the brown sugar. Mix pumpkin mixture with the brown sugar mixture, and to this add the scalded milk. Pour into pie plate lined with pastry dough. Bake 10 minutes in a hot oven (450 degrees), or until crust is set. Then reduce heat to a moderate oven (350 degrees), and bake until filling is firm—about 45 minutes. (These too can be baked on the day preceeding Thanksgiving.)

Don't Miss These Household Hints.

"Household Hints" by Eleanor Howe contains as helpful a group of time-saving suggestions on every phase of housekeeping as one can ever expect to find. Homemade Bread for Young And for Old.

All the world loves homemade bread and what is more homelike than the old-fashioned hot butterscotch rolls, homemade bread, parker house rolls, etc., that mother used to make? It's just those kind of recipes, (simplified though) that you will find in this column next week. Be sure to look for them.

Capone Goes Free After 8-Year 'Rap'

But Mantle of Glamour Is Strangely Missing From Scarface Al.

By WILLIAM BARNES
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

CHICAGO. — They tell you in this town about the heyday of "Scarface Al" Capone who was so rich he could squander $7,500,000 in eight years of gambling, whose fine Italian hand was seen in some 250 Chicago gang deaths between the years of 1925 and 1930, and who "beat" two murder charges and a couple of miscellaneous legal entanglements before the federal government caught him—on the small item of income taxes covering $215,000!

The Chicagoans don't quiver or goggle when you tell them Al Capone leaves prison this month. Since the spring of 1932, when he rode to Atlanta penitentiary handcuffed ignominiously to a small-time auto theft suspect, the one-time beer baron has lost face among Windy Citians. When he steps from Terminal island correctional prison at San Pedro, Calif., this month, there will be few to cheer, sigh or groan.

Underworld Has Passed.

Not even the underworld will call a holiday, because Chicago's underworld isn't what it used to be. Moreover the muggs who once worked for Scarface Al have heard stories about him.

First there's that paresis report—the story that Al is suffering from decay of the brain tissues and consequently has been deranged to a "dangerous" extent one week in four. Then there's his reputation as a model prisoner at Alcatraz, which is anathema for a gangster's reputation. One story says this former enemy of society has subscribed to a magazine devoted to social progress, "Survey Graphic."

Despite his efforts to win parole by good behavior, Capone had at least two scraps in Alcatraz. The first was in 1936 when James C. Lucas, Texas bank robber, knifed him in the back with a pair of barber scissors. Al dealt a return blow on the chin that sent Lucas reeling before they were both carted off to the hospital

In 1938 a mail robber named Roy Gardner was freed from Alcatraz, bringing forth the story that he and Capone had mixed it up one day, and that Al was sent to solitary confinement four days as a result. Another paroled convict said Capone had been branded a "yellow rat" for refusing to join a mutiny.

But Capone's resolution did bring one result. He succeeded in getting three years lopped from the original 10-year sentence, and last January he left Alcatraz with only a year's imprisonment (on a misdemeanor count) and payment of $50,000 in fines standing between him and freedom. But after freedom, what next?

Even if the paresis story is untrue, the glamorous and reckless life of the mad twenties is no longer open to Al. He can only return to his home in Florida and relax with memories of the most insane period of American history, when organized crime fought with itself and with the law—usually to the latter's distress.

Johnny Torrio's Protege.

Al came from Naples originally. He had just turned 22 in New York when the notorious Johnny Torrio took him to Chicago to be bodyguard for "Big Jim" Colosimo, a former street sweeper who pulled himself into a place of power in Chicago's south side night life. Torrio was a henchman of "Lefty Louie" and "Gyp the Blood," who with others were supposedly hired by a Manhattan police lieutenant in 1912 to slay the gambler, Herman Rosenthal.

They were nice, clean fellows, all of them. Torrio seized control of Colosimo's kingdom when the latter was shot down behind his own liquor bar. He taught Capone the ropes of racketeering and built vice and crime into a $100,000-a-week business before he made the mistake of engineering Dion O'Banion's murder. Dion also had a gang, and they took a few shots at Johnny in retaliation. So Torrio left town to save his skin—and Al Capone inherited the empire.

The Business Grew.

Not many young men reach such eminence at 28, but Al was already a veteran. Undeniably a keen executive in his line, he streamlined gang warfare by introducing the machine gun. He expanded the business adding gambling, dog races and politics. This was a billion-dollar enterprise and he protected it by stifling the competition: O'Banion, O'Donnell, Gennas and Saltis gangs were "liquidated."

But it was bloody business. Capone once said they blamed him for everything except the Chicago fire, and that was no exaggeration. A new death was chalked up almost daily, and for two of them the beer baron was hauled in. Joe Howard, a small-time hijacker, told police before he died that "Young Al" had done him in. Later William H. McSwiggin, assistant Cook county states attorney, was murdered. His old father, a police officer, is supposed to have confronted Al with the charge that he, Capone, was responsible. Whereupon, says the story, Al handed his gun to the elder McSwiggin with the admonition: "If you think I did it, kill me."

Law Caught up at Last.

But even a ring of steel couldn't protect him at the end. They couldn't get him for murder, for election fraud or for violating the dry laws, but tax evasion was Scarface Al's Waterloo.

His notoriety reached a climax during the trial and in subsequent months when he languished in Atlanta prison. But there were rumors of an escape plot and the charge (which reached congress) that Capone was given special favors at Atlanta.

So one dark night in August, 1934, a heavily barred railroad car slipped into the prison siding. At midnight the great Capone and 52 other dangerous prisoners were hurried away. A few days later they were safely stored away in Alcatraz.

The beer baron died that day. When they release him this month, he'll just be plain Mr. Alphonse Capone.

Cocky Then, But What's He Like Today?

A remarkable picture of Al Capone made the day his trial opened in Chicago. Still flushed with success, he didn't expect the 10-year prison sentence that followed.

SOMEBODY'S FOOLING

Can Russia Help Reich?

WASHINGTON. — When Russian Premier Viacheslav Molotov made his epochal speech before the Soviet parliament on Halloween day, he stated very emphatically that Germany and Russia were going to improve their trade relations.

That means Adolf Hitler expects to get oil and foodstuffs for his massive army in exchange for machinery and finished products which he would send to Comrade Josef Stalin.

But somebody's fooling, say the experts, because Russia's in no position to help anyone but herself.

Disrupts 'Five-Year Plan.'

Last January Dictator Stalin made a speech outlining the third "five-year plan," during which industry was ordered to increase its production by 88 per cent. Agriculture, he said, was to be boosted 53 per cent. His speech, which is reproduced in United States department of commerce bulletins, said in part:

"It is undeniable that the country still lags behind the capitalistic states in an economic sense. Because of the low level of industrial production which prevailed before the World war, the present level is still below that of capitalistic countries with respect to per capita production in such respects as electric power, pig iron, steel and coal production, and the manufacture of consumption goods such as textiles, paper, soap and some others . . . This backwardness must be completely overcome before Communism can triumph in its historic competition with capitalism.

"The third-plan period is to carry further the satisfaction of needs and desires of the workers for foodstuffs, housing facilities and services of a domestic and cultural nature."

Compared With U. S.

How Russia lags by comparison with American production was pointed out a few days later by Pravda, the official paper. The per capita comparison showed Russia producing 1.1 barrels of petroleum for America's 8.7 barrels; 806 pounds of wheat and rye compared with America's 452 pounds; 1,722 pounds of coal compared with 5,953 pounds; 235 pounds of steel compared with 478 pounds; 30.8 pounds of sugar compared with 26.4 pounds, and 233 kilowatt hours of electricity compared with 1,120 hours.

Only in the two foodstuff items—wheat and sugar—does the Soviet lead. This year Russia had only 21 bushels of wheat per capita compared with 38 bushels here. The only reason she exports any of it is to gain exchange on the world market.

U. S. Trade to Suffer.

One other point the experts bring up. Most Russian imports in the past few years have been from the United States, which, in 1938, sold the Kremlin $74,644,000 in products compared with Germany's $11,849,000. Undoubtedly Germany would get trade formerly placed with the United States under the new cooperation plan. But since Russia's industrial expansion has been accomplished chiefly with American-made machinery, most of this must be junked if the Soviet continues her expansion with German tools.

The reason: A difference in designs and patterns, which would be death to industrial efficiency.

Can Russia complete her third five-year plan and still aid Germany? The experts think not. Somebody's going to get fooled.

HITLER—Was he tricked?

HOUSEHOLD QUESTIONS

New Hot-Water Bottle.—Add teaspoonful of glycerine to the water when filling a new rubber hot-water bottle for the first time. This keeps the rubber soft and in good condition.

When Glass Breaks.—A hand of moistened absorbent cotton will pick up bits of broken glass without endangering the fingers.

First Presidential Thanksgiving Proclamation Started a More Bitter Dispute Than Change in 1939 Date

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

ARE you going to celebrate Thanksgiving day on November 30, the traditional "last Thursday" in the month, or on November 23, the new date announced by President Roosevelt?

One hundred and fifty years ago Americans didn't have any such choice, for George Washington named Thursday, November 26, as the day for them to celebrate. He did it in the first Presidential Thanksgiving proclamation ever issued, which was, incidentally, the first proclamation of any kind to come from the hands of a Chief Executive of the United States.

In view of the discussion that was started when President Roosevelt changed the date of Thanksgiving day this year, it is interesting to recall the controversy that raged around the first "official Thanksgiving day." The story back of that historic event is not one in which we can take much pride, any more than we can be especially proud of the kind of celebration that resulted. For politics played a part in it and it did so because of the jealousy and rivalry of two great Americans — Thomas Jefferson and Alexander Hamilton.

Hamilton Started It.

The idea of a Thanksgiving day celebration apparently originated with Hamilton who broached the subject at a meeting of Washington's cabinet in New York city, then the nation's capital, in August, 1789. A prime mover in securing the adoption of the Constitution, Hamilton had but recently succeeded in getting his own state of New York to ratify it. Despite the fact that two states had not yet ratified, this made enough acceptances of the Constitution to assure the permanence of the new government. So Hamilton evidently felt that the nation, as well as he, personally, had cause for thanksgiving.

It is quite likely that the secretary of the treasury, instead of pressing the matter in the cabinet, where it would be opposed by Thomas Jefferson, the secretary of state and Hamilton's political enemy, engineered it so that the movement for a national Thanksgiving day would come from congress. At any rate, on September 25, 1789, Elias Boudinot, a member of congress from New Jersey, offered a resolution calling upon the President to issue a Thanksgiving day proclamation.

In moving that the resolution be adopted, Boudinot said that he "could not think of letting the session pass over without offering an opportunity to all the citizens of the United States of joining, with one voice, in returning to Almighty God their sincere thanks for the many blessings He had poured down upon them."

Boudinot's resolution was not unexpected and Jefferson's supporters in congress, principally Southerners, immediately opposed the idea. Rep. Aedamus Burke of South Carolina declared that he "did not like this mimicking of European customs, where they made a mere mockery of thanksgiving." He pointed out that "two parties at war frequently sang Te Deum for the same event, though for one it was victory and to the other a defeat."

Rep. Thomas Tudor Tucker of South Carolina "thought the House had no business to interfere in a matter which did not concern them." He suggested that the people might not "be

Whereas it is the duty of all nations to acknowledge the providence of almighty God to obey his will to be grateful for his benefits and humbly to implore his protection and favor — and whereas both Houses of Congress have by their joint committee requested me "to recommend to the People of the United States a day of public thanksgiving and prayer to be observed by acknowledging with grateful hearts the many signal favors of Almighty God, especially by affording them an opportunity peaceably to establish a form of government for their safety and happiness."

Now therefore I do recommend and assign Thursday the 26th day of November next to be devoted by the People of these States to the service of that great and glorious Being who is the beneficent Author of all the good that was, that is, or that will be — That we may then all unite in rendering unto him our sincere and humble thanks — for his kind care and protection of the People of this country previous to their becoming a Nation — for the signal and manifold mercies, and the favorable interpositions of his providence, which we experienced in the course and conclusion of the late war — for the great degree of tranquility, union, and plenty, which we have since enjoyed — for the peaceable and rational manner in which we have been enabled to establish constitutions of government for our safety and happiness, and particularly the national One now lately instituted — for the civil and religious liberty with which we are blessed, and the means we have of acquiring and diffusing useful knowledge, and in general for all the great and various favors which he hath been pleased to confer upon us.

And also that we may then unite in most humbly offering our prayers and supplications to the great Lord and Ruler of nations and beseech him to pardon our national and other transgressions — to enable us all, whether in public or private stations, to perform our several and relative duties properly and punctually — to render our national government a blessing to all the People by constantly being a government of wise, just and constitutional laws, discreetly and faithfully executed and obeyed — to protect and guide all Sovereigns and Nations (especially such as have shown kindness unto us) and to bless them with good government, peace, and concord — to promote the knowledge and practice of true religion and virtue, and the increase of science among them and us — and generally to grant unto all Mankind such a degree of temporal prosperity as he alone knows to be best.

inclined to return thanks for a Constitution until they have experienced that it promotes their safety and happiness." He said further that if a Thanksgiving day must be held the states could institute it. He said that "it is a religious matter, and, as such, is proscribed to us."

Jefferson's Spokesmen.

Through the words of these spokesmen we can hear the voice of Jefferson, protesting against a monarchial trend in the new government, against encroachment upon the boundary line which had been fixed between church and state and against any invasion of "states' rights." In answer to these protests Boudinot "quoted further precedents from the practice of the late congress" and Rep. Roger Sherman of Connecticut rallied to his support, declaring that the practice of thanksgiving was "warranted by a number of precedents in Holy Writ: for instance, the solemn thanksgivings and rejoicings which took place in the time of Solomon, after the building of the temple, was a case in point."

The resolution was carried and Representatives Boudinot, Sherman and Peter Silvester of New York were appointed by the house committee to wait upon the President. The senate, on the following day, adopted the resolution, appointing Senators William Samuel Johnson of Connecticut and Ralph Izard of South Carolina to be the senate members of the committee.

Accordingly this committee waited on the President and on October 3 Washington issued the proclamation in which he recommended that Thursday, November 26, be observed by the people of the United States as a day of thanksgiving.

Hamilton had won the first skirmish but there were still stormy days ahead. For now arose the question of how the celebration should be carried out and, of course, the two statesmen were at odds on that. Hamilton proposed a monster parade of military officials and governmental dignitaries, headed by President Washington. Jefferson, opposed as he was to all displays of pomp and circumstance, protested against such a celebration. He apparently won his point, for it was determined that the day was a domestic holiday and should be observed in the privacy of the home after the New England tradition.

Martha Plans a Levee.

Accordingly Mrs. Washington began making plans for a levee in the true colonial style at the Executive Mansion in Franklin square to which everyone of consequence in New York was invited. It promised to be a great social occasion so it was eagerly looked forward to by the beaus and belles of the city.

But even though Jefferson had outmaneuvered him in this respect, Hamilton was not yet ready to admit defeat. He began organizing all kinds of public festivities to upset the plans of those who wished to celebrate quietly. The festivities opened with a parade in the morning as Hamilton had planned and the secretary of the treasury reviewed it from in front of Fraunces tavern. After the parade Hamilton was host at a great feast in the tavern and it is this first official Thanksgiving dinner to which we can look back, but not with any great pride, for it degenerated into a disgraceful brawl.

Hamilton could not be present for the entire affair. He was to have remained long enough to respond to a toast and then leave for the President's mansion.

But Hamilton was late in arriving at his own party and his guests, impatient to be at their feasting, sat down without him and began to eat. Almost immediately a disagreement arose among the diners. A certain Lieutenant St. Clair, who had toasted the festive day not wisely but too well, felt called upon to assert, upon his honor as a gentleman, that he was "perfec'ly sober." Whereupon Alderman Tisdal of the city council, who had probably also been toasting the festive day extensively, disputed the statement and called upon St. Clair to prove that he was sober. The result was a fight from which the lieutenant emerged with a broken nose.

Order was finally restored, so Hamilton made his speech and left. Unfortunately for him, however, news of the disorder at the tavern had preceded him.

An Angry President

When Hamilton arrived the President questioned him about what had taken place. When he learned that a young soldier of the United States army had been injured in a disgraceful brawl, especially at a gathering presumably for the purpose of giving thanks to God for the blessings of "good government, peace and concord," his anger was aroused and he demonstrated again that he knew how to use strong language when the occasion called for it.

"It is disgraceful, by ——, sir!" spoke George Washington, and there was nothing left for Alexander Hamilton to do but meekly agree and discreetly withdraw from the presence of his chief without further comment.

Thus did the political rivalry of two of his cabinet members have a part in detracting from the solemn character which our first President had wished the first Thanksgiving day to have. Although this may have had nothing directly to do with it, the fact is that not for five years thereafter did Washington again proclaim another official Thanksgiving. That was during his second administration and it is interesting to note that this Thanksgiving day was celebrated, not in November at all but in February!

On January 1, 1795, in Philadelphia, which was then the nation's capital, Washington called upon his fellow Americans to "set apart and observe, Thursday, the nineteenth day of February next, as a day of public thanksgiving and prayer, and on that day to meet together and render their sincere and hearty thanks to the Great Ruler of the Nations for" a long list of blessings which the country was then enjoying.

The example set by George Washington of setting aside a day of national thanksgiving was followed by his successor, John Adams, who proclaimed two Thanksgiving days during his administration—one on Wednesday, May 9, 1798, and the other on Thursday, April 25, 1799. This custom, however, was allowed to lapse during the two terms of Thomas Jefferson, but it was revived by James Madison who issued four such proclamations during his administration.

The first three were more for a day of "public humiliation and prayer" because of the nation's tribulations in the form of the second war with England, but the fourth was a day of real thanksgiving that peace had come at last. All of these proclamations were issued in response to a joint resolution from the senate and house of representatives. The first set aside the third Thursday in August of 1812, the second named the second Thursday in September, 1813, as the day; the third designated Thursday, January 12, 1814, and the fourth, issued soon after the treaty of peace with England was proclaimed, called upon the American people to set aside the second Thursday in April, 1815, as a day for praising "the Great Disposer of Events and of the Destiny of Nations" for their many obligations "and more especially for the blessing of the restoration of peace."

The Month Varied

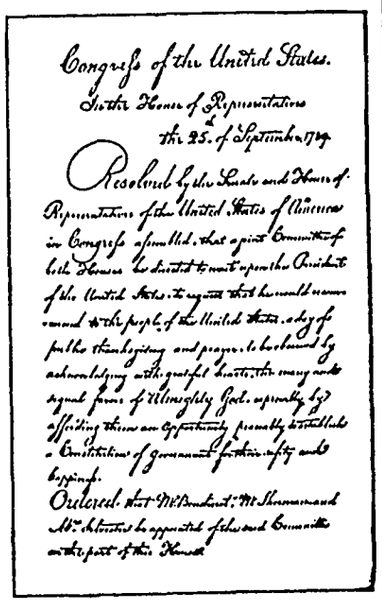
Thus it will be seen that although Thanksgiving days by Presidential proclamation in the main picked upon Thursday as the day of the week for such an observance, the month varied greatly and there was no connection between these Thanksgiving days and the annual observance established by the Pilgrims. No other Presidents after Madison seemed to have had occasion for proclaiming a Thanksgiving day and it remained for Abraham Lincoln to resume the custom and to link up the proclaimed Thanksgiving day with the Pilgrim custom by establishing the last Thursday in November as a national day for giving thanks.

The first Lincoln proclamation appointing a day for divine supplication was dated August 12, 1861. It designated the last Thursday in September as "a day of humiliation, prayer and fasting."

The regular Thanksgiving in November, 1861, was a rather subdued occasion. There had been no presidential proclamation. In 1862 there was no proclamation, either.

The momentous year of 1863 brought, however, three proclamations. The first was dated March 3 and designated April 30 as a day of fasting and prayer. July 15 another was issued, setting August 6 as a day to give thanks at the prospect of peace.

The third came October 3, when President Lincoln issued a proclamation that said "And so . . . the last Thursday in November is hereby set apart as a day of thanksgiving and praise." As a result the first of the presidentially-proclaimed, last-Thursday-in-November Thanksgiving days was observed that year.



Congress of the United States.
In the House of Representatives
the 25. of September 1789

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, that a joint Committee of both Houses be directed to wait upon the President of the United States to request that he would recommend to the people of the United States a day of public thanksgiving and prayer, to be observed by acknowledging with grateful hearts the many and signal favors of Almighty God, especially by affording them an opportunity peaceably to establish Constitutions of government for their safety and happiness.

Ordered that Mr. Boudinot, Mr. Sherman and Mr. Livermore be appointed of the said Committee on the part of the House

Resolution by Elias Boudinot

On July 7, 1864, by direction of congress, President Lincoln designated the first Thursday of August as "a day of national humiliation and prayer." October 20 of the same year saw the issuance of his second proclamation designating the last Thursday in November as Thanksgiving day. Before that day arrived it was known that he had been re-elected by an overwhelming majority—a result which had been extremely doubtful during the campaign. Moreover, by November, 1864, it seemed certain that the Confederacy could not hold out much longer. So with the assurance that the Union was saved and with the great vote of confidence in his administration given him by the people, Abraham Lincoln had good reason to lead the nation in a Thanksgiving celebration.

For the last 75 years succeeding Presidents have not deviated from the custom of proclaiming the last Thursday in November as Thanksgiving day until this year when President Roosevelt lived up to his reputation of being a "tradition-defier" and established the next-to-the-last instead of the last Thursday in the month for this national holiday

THE illustration shows what became of the mirror and piano stool which the bride had left over last week. To the mirror and stool were added two wooden boxes from the grocery. These were placed on end about 18 inches apart and a shelf of ½-inch pine screwed to the top. A frame was then screwed to the back of the boxes as shown here. A curtain rod was placed across the top and the mirror hung lengthwise under it. An arm was then hinged to the front of each box. White paint was used next. The flowered chintz in tones of rose and blue-green with narrow frills of the plain blue-green tone matched the window curtains.

The dressing table skirt was made with a one-inch heading at the top and tacked along the ends of the table and the hinged arms with thumbtacks through a double strip of the plain material.

IOWA IS STILL OLD FASHIONED . . .

Governor Wilson and the people of Iowa are just old fashioned enough to think that November 20th is a good day to observe Thanksgiving.

For the past seventy-four years the last Thursday in November has been designated as a day to be set aside to offer thanks for the many blessings received during the past year

Prior to that time, most any day of the year would be designated as Thanksgiving . it could be in the summer, spring, fall or winter Then President Abraham Lincoln decided that the date should be more definite so he named the last Thursday in November and for seventy-four years that date has been observed

This year, President Roosevelt decided to have the date ahead one week Many states followed his suggestion, while many others, Iowa among them, preferred to abide by President Lincoln's choice Maybe Iowa is old fashioned, but we still like Thanksgiving on the old date.

WASHINGTON, THE CITY BEAUTIFUL . . .

A few weeks ago, this writer visited Washington, D C., the city beautiful" Our nation's capitol has a right to be beautiful and should be the most beautiful city in all the world.

The Democrats must not be blamed entirely for beautifying the city of Washington, however, they have contributed a good share in the past few years in making the capitol city beautiful

They tell us that only a few years ago, the very slum district of Washington, was right in the shadow of the Capitol itself Now that has been all cleared away and beautiful grounds, parks and drives have replaced the slums

Great sections of the city have been swept aside, and are still being cleared away, to make room for great, wonderful government buildings The Capitol itself is no longer the fine, beautiful building that it once had been, as it is now outshadowed in splendor by newer government buildings. The Supreme Court Building is one of the most beautiful structures in the world, being built of solid marble, inside and out, with the finest of craftsmanship displayed in every section of the building.

Washington talks in terms of millions. "This group of buildings recently completed at two hundred million dollars. That new building on your right will cost over ten million dollars. To your left is a new government building under construction to cost four million That section of business buildings will be torn down to make room for a group of buildings to cost seventy-five million,,. And so it goes. That is why Washington is "the city beautiful". Money means nothing to make our capitol the most beautiful city in the world . . . and it's just that.

WATCHING THE GOVERNMENT FROM THE INSIDE . . . .

During our short stay in Washington, the writer had a fine chat with Fred Gilchrist, representative from our home district. Mr Gilchrist took time out to personally escort us into the House of Representatives, where our party watched and listened to the "government in action" for over two hours.

The neutrality bill was being debated hot and heavy, but apparently no one was very greatly excited, except the speaker on the floor and a few congressmen who would fire questions at him and try to get him all bawled up.

We had expected to see the House being conducted in a very dignified manner, but such did not seem to be the case that day Congressmen strolled around, visited with each other and there was a general "hub-bub" and sometimes so much noise the speaker could not be heard, and nobody seemed to care. Evidently they had heard the same arguments for weeks and no one was interested, and every congressman had his mind made up as to how he would vote when the time came. Much of the important work is carried on through committees and the sessions in the House do not always mean so much, and therefore the impression we got was that it was a regular mad-house as far as order was concerned.

Anyway we saw the government at work "from the inside"

Damage Suit.

Remember when there used to be lot of friction between horse-owners and automobile drivers? Just to show that the time marches on, W E. O'Conner, of near Dunlap, has filed suit for $215 in damages to his team of horses which he claimed were frightened by an airplane flown by Dr C W Byrnes, of Dunlap The team was tied to a post in the field when the physician flew over at "less than 500 feet" according to the petition, frightened the horses, which broke loose and dashed madly around the field, finally running into barbed wire fence

Fraetured Skull

Although the horse has a historic place next to the dog as man's best friend. Roy Hines, of near Lone Rock, feels that the horses which kicked him in the head last week and fractured his skull in two places, could do with a little more history Hines is resting comfortable

Didn't Stop 'Em

The blockade didn't stop Swea City's annual lutefisk supper in the Lutheran church there The lutefisk, caught along the coasts of Norway and Sweden are cleaned by the fisherman, sun-dried, and shipped to this country The dried fish, corded up in warerooms like stove wood, must be soaked for four weeks before being sent out to the consumers Swea City was worried for awhile that the European war would interfere with the lutefisk dinner but the fish got through—though not under their own power.

All's well that ends well and a young man at Waverly has nothing heavier on his conscience this week than the necessity of paying for a few automobile windows When he fired at a rabbit, scampering up the Great Western railroad cut near Waverly, the extra heavy load was high and crashed into an automobile occupied by Mr and Mrs Paul Fasset and three year old daughter. The six-foot pattern of heavy buckshot broke out the windows dented the car body in 30 places, showered the ocupants with broken glass but no one got hurt.

THANKFULNESS

Thanksgiving is a day set aside each year at harvest time as a time of thankfulness for the mercies of the year It owes it's origin to the pilgrim fathers who celebrated it for the first time in Plymouth, in 1621 Every year since 1863 the last Thursday of November has been regarded and proclaimed by each president as Thanksgiving Day We have many things for which to be thankful The private and personal blessings we enjoy, the blessings of liberty integrity, deserve the thankfulness of a whole life Those who are too proud and not grateful or thankful for their blessings, because they never think they get as much as they deserve Thanksgiving this year will mean more to us than those we have witnessed in the past because of the present horrible war which is raging across the ocean and also the glorious peace which reigns in this land and protects our homes Isaac Walton once said "God has two dwellings, one in heaven and the other in meek and thankful hearts"

Star Dust

★ Trick of the Peacock
★ It's Micky With Judy
★ First Up Gets It!

By Virginia Vale

WHEN an actress who is famous for wearing beautiful clothes beautifully wants to get a bit of extra publicity, it's usually a good trick for her to announce that she'd just love to have a role in which she wore rags. Usually, too, she hasn't the faintest desire to wear rags, or anything faintly approaching them; she'd scream and gnaw the woodwork if anyone suggested it. But women who can't dress as she does on the stage or in pictures are supposed to like her better for saying that she's tired of being a clothes horse.

Joan Crawford

Joan Crawford is proving that she really wants to be something more than a modiste's mannequin. In "Not Too Narrow, Not Too Deep," her new picture in which Clark Gable plays opposite her, she has just one dress. There may have to be replacements, it's true, for she has to do quite a bit of dashing about in a South American jungle, but technically it will be the same frock. That is, according to the present announcements it will be.

As for Gable, he's to be a really tough egg; escapes from a prison colony and all that sort of thing.

With some of these ladies of the screen it's a calamity if the public doesn't see through that ostrich-with-its-head-in-the-sand disguise of dark glasses. Not long ago your correspondent lunched with one, in New York. We just went in, sat down and ordered luncheon. Dismayed, the lady glanced around. "Isn't anybody looking at me?" she asked, in anguished tones.

Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland are going to go with on—and on, and on—as a team, because the public likes them. "Babes in Arms" has decided that; it pairs them musically as well as romantically, finishing the work begun in "Love Finds Andy Hardy" and "Thoroughbreds Don't Cry." Incidentally, people who meet him like the Rooney lad a lot better than they did for a while, when he was accused of having a swelled head and all the things that go with it. He's grown into a likable chap, modest rather than bumptious, and he and the pretty Judy make such a nice pair that the people who pay to see them on the screen seem to want them to stick together.

Judy Garland

There's a tradition in radio that the first actor to try out for a part is sure not to get it. Dorothy Knox has proved that it isn't so. She competed with 27 other actresses for the role of "Frieda" in "The Life and Loves of Dr. Susan"—was the first to enter the audition room and the last to leave it—and she got the part.

Major Bowes is rapidly becoming a public benefactor. Not long ago he presented St. Patrick's cathedral in New York with 11 Schwedleri maples and four English elms—a gift which cannot be appreciated by anyone who does not know how barren New York is of trees, or how some of its inhabitants long to see one. The trees are magnificent, a living tribute to the Major's thoughtfulness.

Now he has given his estate, Laurel Hill, at Ossining, N. Y., to the Lutheran church for a retreat for the clergy and laity of New York and nearby states. The 10-acre estate is a show place, filled with memories for Major Bowes; he and the late Mrs. Bowes, who was Margaret Illington, the famous actress, bought it in 1927, and through the years they landscaped it, installed a swimming pool, and did everything they could to make it beautiful.

Major Bowes not only gave the estate to the church, but added a substantial gift to help equip it.

New Elegance in Current Mode Calls for Quality-Kind Silks

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WHAT was good enough for our great - great - grandmamas should be equally as good for us. Some such thought must have motivated the minds of our modern fabricists when they announced for fall and winter 1939-1940 a revival of the quality-kind old-fashioned silks such as were the pride and the joy of our ancestresses. Call them heirloom silks if you will, for some of the silk weaves so chic and so fabric-fine that are considered high-style today but tell the story over again of sterling-worth bengalines, failles; likewise traditional ottoman silks and grosgrains, also stand-alone moires and taffetas that make music with their rustle of real honest-to-goodness silk.

When you come to analyze the present situation, the re-incarnation in current fashion of the elegant "lovely lady" fashions so characteristic of the early Victorian and Edwardian periods, we of this generation just naturally have to think in terms of fabric elegance.

The idea that prevails this season is fabric elegance for dresses styled with utmost simplicity, depending on accessories for dash and allure. High value is put on skillful fabric treatment in drapes, shirrings, pleating and self-fabric details.

It is a very silk-conscious group we present in the illustration herewith. A great favorite with French designers is pure silk jersey which they say, and they prove it in the lovely creations they turn out, has no peer when it comes to sculptural draping and intriguing shirring.

The attractive dress to the left in the picture is of smooth, dark silk jersey. Although it has been elaborately draped and shirred, the slender silhouette has been in no respect sacrificed. If you haven't a silk jersey (preferably black) daytime dress in your collection you are losing out on a lot of pleasure and comfort. Choose dark or black jersey for practical afternoon wear and for your loveliest formal let it be of white silk jersey sculpturally draped, adding gold accents to make it supremely beautiful.

A draped and shirred green silk crepe luncheon dress, designed for the new corseted lady, is shown to the right. It speaks eloquently in favor of fabric treatment. Note the self fabric pleated ruffle on the bodice the wide corselet belt and other fetching styling details.

Centered in the trio is a striking evening ensemble developed of handsome silk white faille, for faille, such as our grandmothers treasured, is again a favorite silk. Note the brief peplum that flares from the new lowered waistline of the basque jacket. The novel square buttons are of outstanding style importance. It's fortunate you'll be if you have stored away among heirlooms some of the gorgeous jeweled buttons that once were fashionable and are so again. Glorify your evening coat with these buttons or your blouse or your "bestest" afternoon dress.

In conclusion just a word about the stunning jacket tailored suits that are made of black bengaline silk or faille. These silk classics register among the topnotch fashions of the day.

Whimsical Velvet Turbans in Colors

Milliners are designing adorable little velvet turbans, bright with color, to wear with fur coats this winter or to crown smart dinner gowns with glory. These little fantasies of velvet are often allover shirred or are formed of myriads of little corded loops. Some houses are showing them in that old-time favorite, old gold. Others exploit them in teal blue to ensemble with silver jewelry set in blue stones, and as for eye-dazzling red, there's nothing smarter than a red hat with a black dress.

In fact these cunning velvet turbans have gone on a gay and festive color spree. The fireman-red velvet types make you "stop, look and listen" but you'll love these startling reds just the same. With dark furs they are simply perfect.

Most of these flattering little hats have a snood to cover the coiffure at the back, and it's "mighty like a rose" that some of them look being often a huge pouf of velvet in flower color, posed jauntily low over the brow.

Suits Are Favored In Newest Modes

Suits are important in the new mode and include both dress and jacket and skirt and jacket combinations. Short, fitted, peplum jackets and long fitted jackets are both in the picture. Many are furred and worn with fur muffs, hats and umbrellas whose handles are covered with the same pelts.

Smartest coats, both cloth and furs, are fitted and flared. Many cloth ones are so liberally trimmed with pelts that they seem about half fur. Persian lamb, beaver, seal, leopard, fox, marten and mink are all used.

Air-Travel Suit

Now that it's "ship ahoy" in the air, as well as by sea, designers are making a feature of air-travel fashions. Victor Stiebel, noted London designer, is among the first to turn attention toward creating airship wardrobes. For daytime needs in his clipper wardrobe he designs this handsome and practical suit. In this instance rabbit's hair crepe of napthalated wool is intricately tailored into a slim straight model with rows of self-colored stitching. A mist green hat tops the suit to perfection.

THE WORKS OF THE MESSIAH

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 8:14-27
GOLDEN TEXT—Jesus of Nazareth . . . went about doing good.—Acts 10 38

"Does it work?" Modern man is not impressed by a thing simply because great claims are made for it or it is intricately organized. After all, the important thing is, does it really work? Such a test can be carried to an extreme and the finest and richest things of life be thrown aside because they have no utilitarian value. But in general, the question is a good one, and especially is that true as it is applied to religious systems and philosophies of life. These claim to have power to deliver man from his sin and give him peace and rest. What we want to know is, do they actually do it, not only in the day of health and prosperity, but in the hour of death and devastation? The answer is that every one of them has failed and does fail, with the exception of Christianity, which comes "not in word but in power" (I Cor. 4:20). In Christianity is found the only real dynamic for daily living.

I. Personal Needs Satisfied (vv. 14-17).

This entire section of the Gospel of Matthew is concerned with miracles. It is interesting to note how many of these events concern personal needs. There is scant comfort to the needy one to speak to him in generalities about a great God who is ready to help people. When I am in need I want to know whether there is any help for me. Jesus healed Peter's mother in the home, and then He went out and healed multitudes in the throng, but in each case it was a personal interest which He took and a personal healing that was received.

Observe also that He met the need of all whether they were sick in body, mind or spirit. Someone may say, "That is all very well, but that took place when He was here on earth." Well, He is here now, working in and through the power of the Holy Spirit and in and through His children. The Lord Jesus Christ daily satisfies every need of His disciples, and often does so in ways which are miraculous in their sight.

II. Sacrificial Service Exemplified (vv. 18-22).

Following Jesus in discipleship is more than speaking sweet words of devotion or of taking part in the carrying out of some public worship ministry. To really follow Him is to "follow one whose vocation is such that there are incessant demands compelling the renunciation of home and the comforts of a settled life. Only the call of God can make one equal to the demands of such a hazardous life" (Edward E. Anderson).

Observe that even the demands which love may present on behalf of an aged father must not be permitted to stand between the disciple and his Lord. There is no thought of unkindness or lack of consideration here, for as our Lord points out, those who are spiritually dead, although still physically alive, may well be called on to care for the physical needs of an aged parent, even in the hour of death, if the Lord Jesus has work for His disciple to do elsewhere.

There is no thought of neglect of the duties of life, but rather of a placing of the Lord first, whatever else may take the second place. The blight upon many a Christian experience is that almost anything else which is of interest is allowed to take first place and the Lord must take second place if He is given any place at all.

III. Divine Power Demonstrated (vv. 23-27).

There are those in the world who are unable to see the workings of God's power in the spiritual realm because they themselves have not been spiritually born again (I Cor. 2 14). For these the Lord here presented the working of His mighty power in the realm of nature.

Satan, who is "the prince of this world" (John 14.30) had evidently whipped the waves of the sea into a mighty storm, possibly thus hoping to drown Jesus and get rid of his divine adversary, but the Lord Himself speaks in the majesty of His eternal power and we read that "there was a great calm" (v. 26). Even His disciples were strangely astonished that the very "winds and the sea obey Him." Yes, the forces of nature respond to His slightest word. The winds and the sea obey Him. But what is even more wonderful is that the turmoil of a man's soul becomes a great and blessed calm when this holy Lord Jesus speaks the word of peace.

Confused and troubled man or woman who reads these words, will you not now by faith submit yourself to the One who can speak to you, who can meet and satisfy every one of your needs, and who can give you the blessed privilege of sacrificial service on His behalf in a needy world?

Ed Henschen Died Tuesday Morning

Former Klemme Resident Died At County Home, Tuesday

Ed Henschen, a former Klemme resident, but for the past ten years at home on the County Farm near Duncan, was found dead in his bed at breakfast time Tuseday morning, Nov. 28, 1939. He had not complained of illness and was up and around on the day previous to his passing. Death is presumed to have been caused by heart failure at about five o'clock in the morning.

Ed Henschen was born March 20, 1879, on a farm in Ell Township one of a family of eight sons born to Mr. and Mrs. Herman Henschen.

He attended rural school during his childhood, but as his mind was somewhat clouded he found it hard to remember his lessons and thus grew up to be one of the few who neither read nor write.

He did, however, remember many of the Bible Stories which he learned in childhood at his Mother's knee and this religious instruction helped him to know right from wrong.

He worked as a farm hand where ever he could find work. His last job was on the Ralph Ludeke farm where he stayed several years.

Funeral services will be conducted by the Rev Calvin Grosshuesch at the Wellemeyer Funeral Home Friday, Dec. 1st at 2 p. m. and interment made on the family lot in the Klemme cemetery.

He reached the age of 60 years, 9months, and 8 days. He leaves of his immediate family, two brothers, Fred Henschen, of Klemme and Julius Henschen, of Clarion. Three half brothers: Henry Henschen, of Garner; Lewie Henschen, of Garner, and Ernest Henschen, of Klemme.

The extent to which war orders will increase the demand for American farm products is still uncertain.

This Bird Escaped "Franksgiving" Day!

Thanksgiving Dates Have Differed Widely

Thanksgiving in Canada comes in October, but in the United States it is a November holiday. This year there has been much talk about it because of President Roosevelt's statement that he would proclaim it for the fourth instead of the fifth Thursday in November.

Most Novembers have only four Thursdays, but this November happens to have five. By the old rule of "the last Thursday in November", the date would be the last day of the month.

Some persons say Thanksgiving was started by the Pilgrims, but this is not entirely true. It grew out of harvest feasts which were held in several parts of Europe. The Pilgrims, themselves, seem to have joined the Dutch in an autumn feast during the 10 years they lived in Holland before sailing for the New World The Dutch feast was celebrated on Oct. 3. It marked the date Holland had obtained freedom from Spanish rule, but was of much the same nature as the "Harvest Home" feasting in England.

The Pilgrims, however, seem to have been the first white settlers on this continent to hold a harvest feast or Thanksgiving. One of the Pilgrims, Edward Winslow, told about it in a letter to a friend in England.

"Our corn did prove well, and . .our harvest being gotten in our governor sent four men on fowling, so we might after a special manner rejoice together after we had gathered the fruit of our labors".

Winslow went to tell how the men had killed "many fowl" and how Chief Massasoit and ninety men were entertained at the feast for three days.

Another Thanksgiving was celebrated less than two years later It was held much earlier in the year—on July 30—to mark the coming of a new boatload of Pilgrims.

In the years that followed, the Thanksgiving custom spread to other villages, but the dates were not regular. A boatload of food which reached Boston brought a Thanksgiving on Feb 22, 1631

George Washington and some other early presidents of the United Sttaes named Thanksgiving days, but the feast did not become a regular yearly event until after 1864. President Lincoln started, in the United States, a regular yearly custom of observing Thanksgiving on the last Thursday of November.

"Thunder Afloat" at Avery Theatre Sun., Mon., and Tues.

"Thunder Afloat" offers Wallace Berry another two-fisted role. Epical story of courage at the sea, adding a seldom-told chapter to the history of the United States Naval Reserve, "Thunder Afloat" brings Wallace Berry to the screen of the Avery Theatre next Sunday, Monday and Tuesday amid some of the most thrilling action ever filmed. Teamed with Chester Morris as his rival throughout the story, and with Virginia Grey, as his daughter, Beery appears as a tugboat captain who joins the Navy after a U-Boat has sunk his beloved craft. The action-packed sequences in which the principals participate include the raiding and sinking of the tug and it's string of barges, the torpedoing of a lightship, the disabling of a subchaser after Beery, in command, has attempted to sink the sub with depth bombs, the attempted ramming of the U-Boat by a Gloucester schooner which is sunk by gunfire, and the final crippling of the underseas boat.

SEVEN EAGLES BASKETBALL JAMBOREE DREW CAPACITY CROWD HERE

The Seven Eagles Basketball Jamboree here last Wednesday night drew a crowd that packed the gym to capacity. It was the first jamboree ever held in the county.

Goodell, Kanawha and Klemme, representing the South, defeated Hayfield, Crystal Lake and Woden, representing the North 53-42. Each team of the South met each team from the North during the game which was played in seven minute periods

Klemme and Crystal Lake opened the game which saw the Lakers step out in front of the Shamrocks, 7 to 3 Goodell and Hayfield played the next frame which saw Goodell run up ten points against Hayfield's 5 to put the South ahead 13 to 12. From that point on the South made a steady gain, and the game ended 53 to 42 in favor of the South.

Hayfield lead the field in scoring, ringing up a total of 22 points to score more than half of the North's score Goodell was the powerful team for the South and they ran a close second to Hayfield by scoring 21 points for the South.

Klemme had a total of 17. Kanawha 15, Crystal Lake 14 and Woden 14.

SHAMROCKS BOW TO SWALEDALE, 31 to 22

Klemme's faltering preformance at Wednesday night's Jamboree was "kinged" by an impressive display but at the Swaledale court Thursday evening Though Klemme lost by a 1 point margin at the half way point and was deadlocked at 21 all at the close of the third quarter, they lost out in the total score, 31-22.

The Shamrocks defense had things checked until the fourth stanza. Bill Grosshuesch was given a rest via the foul route which jeppardized the invaders scoring chances and a bid for honors during the last frame. the Klemme defense found some trouble in silencing Eddy Swaledales 17 point scorer.

All agree it was a good ball game and that Garner will have no "set up" when they are guests of Klemme next Tuesday.

The actress was appearing in a breakfast scene where eggs were being served, and a child sitting in a box made manifest his interest in the food. Stepping down to the footlights the actress tendered the youngster an egg; but his mother drew back her child with a sign of annoyance.

"You should let the young man take it," said the actress quietly. "It is quite extraordinary for eggs to be passed from this side of the footlights."

Lavish Embroidery Bespeaks Fashion Trend to Elegance

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

THIS is a season of elegancies and niceties such as bespeak gracious-lady fashions. One of the surest signs that the luxury note is being sounded is the lavish use designers are making of rich embroidery and other fastidious surface decorations, such as intricate applique design, exquisite beadwork and resplendent sequin embellishment, also (very important is the news) latest costume collections declare the revival of handsome old-fashioned, now new-fashioned, passementerie.

Been treasuring for years a bit of precious passementerie that adorned grandmother's wedding gown, or perhaps her best Sunday-go-to-meeting dress? Now's the big moment to bring it out. If it is just a single ornament, applique it near your heart on your smartest blouse or frock and it will serve as effectively as a jewelry gadget. If it's two motifs of a kind you've hoarded, one atop each sleeve will bring infinite style prestige to your best gown.

Embroidery is wielding its magic in every direction, enhancing with gaily decorated sleeves afternoon gowns of silk crepe, sheer wool or velvet, electrifying the formal evening gown with resplendent glittering note, adding intrigue to sports sweaters with yarn-worked posies, stressing the sumptuous trend in formal evening sweaters (now so stylish) with all sorts of dazzling gadgetry.

Speaking from the accessory standpoint, ornate with embroidery will your gloves and your handbag be this year, your mittens and your scarf, your wide corset-like girdle and even your chapeau will not be immune from the epidemic of embroidery.

The charming gold tissue lame evening gown to the left in the picture will, no doubt, prove one of the loveliest that goes to parties during the winter social season. It subscribes to the embroidery vogue in that the cunning little gray lida cloth jacket that is worn with it is embroidered with sequins and gold cord.

It's a gay and very formal sweater that you see portrayed in the oval inset. The sweater is of sheer-knit fuchsia wool, tuned to evening formality with embroidery worked with sparkling gold sequins in a leaf pattern.

A foremost topic in fashion circles is the floor-length evening coats made of handsome wool material. See centered in the group a gorgeous affair styled of red broadcloth enhanced with massive gold applique done in gold kid with embroidered accents.

And now comes the climax of our story—the allover embroidered daytime coat! When Jane Alden, Chicago stylist, flew back from Paris following a week-end to week-end flight she arrived just as you see her pictured to the right in the illustration. Her hurried trip was made to work out special styles with Madame Bruyere of the Maison Bruyere, for use in her talks before the Four-H clubs throughout the United States. She stepped out of the plane wearing a dark green kid hat, in a snail design, with matching kid gaiters, a black dress of the new one-side fringed apron type and an allover-embroidered gray coat by Bruyere. You sense the exquisite detail of the coat at first glance, and you are at once impressed with its quiet elegance. The embroidery reflects consummate art in its refined handling and although it is done in an allover patterning the effect is smartly conservative and practical because of the soft gray coloring of the embroidery that blends into the background in perfect symphony.

Breakfast Jacket

The knitter who is thinking in terms of Christmas presents for her friends will do well to take note of this winsome breakfast jacket. You can make it in no time, for it is knitted in an easy effective drop stitch.

Dame Fashion Now Goes Star Gazing

It's star gazing we will be enjoying this winter, for the latest is star-shaped nailheads and sequins, scattered over bags, snoods, gloves, dresses and wherever spangled effects adorn. Silk prints with star patternings are also shown.

Jewelry Vogue Is For Diamonds Now

Diamonds have entered a new era of popularity, both as jewelry and as personal possessions of marketable value. In several style shows recently staged many of the manikins wore this sparkling type of jewelry in preference to the spectacular gold effects.

New ear-rings from a noted Paris house are called "opposites," in that one earring is a diamond flower set with sapphires, the other a sapphire surrounded by diamonds. Which do you wear in which ear? Well, that makes no difference, but to have a touch of sapphire blue repeated in your dress somewhere scores high in allure.

Diamonds can be worn for day or evening. One fine piece such as a brooch or a clip can be used on the coat lapel, at the neckline of a dress, at the center of the velvet neckband or even in the coiffure.

Leather Important In Style Picture

It has come to the point that suede is regarded as important a medium for wearing apparel and fetching accessories as any fabric might be. The loveliest suede items imaginable are being turned out—hats, bags, dresses, coats, bolero jackets, tailored classic jackets, and so on. Seeing that suede brings into the fashion picture a wealth of color unsurpassed, small wonder is it that it has come to be considered "tops" in fashion Leather trappings on wool sports togs include smart leather buttons, stitched applique of leather, leather bindings, belts and an endless list of the uses of leather too numerous to mention.

★ Picturing Thomas Edison
★ Great Picture to See
★ O'Brien Rates Contract

By Virginia Vnlo

THERE are two new books that should greatly interest you, one if you like the movies, the other if you are interested in radio serials in general and two in particular, "Pepper Young's Family" and "When a Girl Marries."

The book for movie fans is by an ex-motion picture actress, Patsy Ruth Miller; its title is "That Flanagan Girl." Patsy Ruth made a name for herself on the screen in the days of silent movies, although she's very young to be a veteran of that era. Some of you old-timers may remember her as the girl in the Lon Chaney version of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame."

She gave up the movies for the stage, after a while—she's one of these girls who want to take a shot at everything. Simultaneously, and very successfully, she tried her hand at writing short stories. Then she went back to Hollywood and wrote scripts for the movies, also successfully.

"That Flanagan Girl" is that rare thing, a novel about Hollywood which doesn't try to get even with the place and its people by slamming it.

As for the other book, it's Elaine Sterne Carrington's "All Things Considered," a collection of short stories that have appeared in some of our best magazines. Mrs. Carrington made her name as a story writer and a playwright before she ever thought of writing for radio.

The life of Thomas Edison is now being turned into motion picture history. Two pictures based on it are being made—"Young Tom Edison," with Mickey Rooney, and "Edison the Man" with Spencer Tracy. Tracy took a trip East to familiarize himself with the famous inventor's background—he visited the Edison laboratory at Menlo Park, N. J., and then went to Washington to talk with Charles Edison, son of Thomas.

At last we have "Drums Along the Mohawk," and a swell picture it is, too. Plenty of thrills, plenty of Indians, lots of romance and humor. Maybe you read the book—if you did you won't be disappointed in the film version, which was ably directed by John Ford. It deals with an aspect of the Revolutionary war that is unfamiliar to many of us, showing settlers in the backwoods region of New York fighting a war without really knowing what they were fighting for.

The cast couldn't be better—Claudette Colbert, Henry Fonda, Edna May Oliver, Ward Bond, John Carradine.

After five years Freddie Bartholomew is off the Metro payroll. Remember when he came to these shores to play "David Copperfield" as a young boy? His last picture on the home lot was "Listen Darling," and at present he's working for RKO in "Swiss Family Robinson."

—*—

When you see the new "Hunchback of Notre Dame" pay some attention to Edmund O'Brien, if you want to see the kind of performance that picks up a contract for an actor. RKO just gave O'Brien one, which permits him to switch from screen to the stage and back again.

—*—

When the "Pretty Kitty Kelly" cast assembled recently they found a large sign on the studio wall. "This is NOT the Floyd Bennett Air Port!" it sternly announced. Seems that the boys and girls had been amusing themselves at rehearsals by making paper airplanes, flying them all over the place and then leaving them—also all over the place.

—*—

ODDS AND ENDS—Bob Hope and Bing Crosby livened up the luncheon hour on the Paramount lot the other day by riding around on bicycles, in black-face, and wearing turbans and baggy pantaloons . . . Mark Warnow, conductor on the Hit Parade, used to play the violin in a street corner band . . . And by the way, his pet baton was whittled from a bat used by Babe Ruth in the 1932 world series . . . Irene Dunne and Cary Grant will appear together again, this time in "Passport to Life."

SPREADING THE GOOD NEWS

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 10:24-39.
GOLDEN TEXT—Let him that heareth say, Come.—Revelation 22:17.

"Bewilderment." That is the word which the president of a great American university recently said accurately described the present condition of the minds of men. Little wonder that the men of the world are bewildered, for they are like mariners who sail an unknown sea after having thrown away map and compass. Without Christ and without God's Word men cannot be anything but bewildered.

That which gives us even greater concern is that many who are Christians, who really know the Guide and who have the Guidebook, are also declaring themselves to be utterly bewildered. What is the reason? Obviously that they have not read the Book and have not talked with their Lord.

Our lesson for the coming Lord's Day touches on one of the problems which causes many Christians to question God's love and care. They find that their efforts to testify for Him by word or life meet with a violent reaction from a bitter world, and they discover that such a life involves personal sacrifice and frequently results in even the members of their own families turning against them. Can this be God's way of dealing with His people? The answer is found in His Word. The Christian is to be

I. Fearless in a Hostile World (vv. 24-28, 32, 33).

Note carefully that he is not to be silent (vv. 32, 33). We deny our Lord when we fail to speak for Him when we ought to do so. Christianity is not something to be hidden in one's own bosom, a fire to warm one's own soul. It is good news which is to be proclaimed even from the housetops.

But, someone will say, when I do speak there is opposition; they call me names, they threaten to kill me. Yes, and what of it? "The disciple is not above his master, nor the servant above his Lord" (v. 24). They called Jesus a devil. They even crucified Him. Should we then expect to be borne to glory on flowery beds of ease? God knows all about this, yes, even about the hidden and whispered plottings of evil men (v. 26). He will deal with them and judge them in due season.

We need not fear men. The most they can do is to kill the body. Let us consider the eternal God, who not only may take the life out of the body, but is also able to cast both soul and body into hell (v. 28). God is not as a theory, a bit of pious imagination. He is real, He is all-powerful. Why then should we be fearful if we serve Him in faithful devotion?

II. Fearless in Personal Life (vv. 29-31).

It is one thing to be bold in the midst of battle. It is quite another thing to be fearless in the quiet of one's own room, or of one's own heart. Satan is expert at that point. He comes to us with his humiliating accusations of our unworthiness, yes, of our worthlessness. Sadly enough our own knowledge of ourselves confirms his dismal judgment.

But wait! If we are Christians we are not our own. We are bought with a price, the precious blood of Christ. We belong to Him. He is our advocate with the Father. Let Him meet our accuser. What does He say? He tells us that He has numbered the very hairs of our head (v. 30), that even a dying sparrow concerns Him, and that we are worth more than many sparrows (v. 31). We are His and He is our Saviour, Friend and Brother. Let us look up and be without fear.

III. Fearless in the Family Circle (vv. 34-39).

Here, after all, is the acid test of discipleship.

Christ did not come in order to stir up needless strife between members of the family, but He well knew that divisions would come as the result of true discipleship. Men who are ordinarily kind and cultured in their dealings with their friends and families but who do not know Christ, can become like veritable demons against any one in that circle who hears the call of Christ and follows Him.

No human tie, no matter how intimate or precious, is to be permitted to stand between the individual and his devotion to Christ. If it does, Christ is evidently no longer first. He is no longer Lord of all in the life, and if He is not Lord of all, He is not Lord at all.

While it seems almost paradoxical to say it, Scripture teaches and experience demonstrates that if you keep your life for yourself and your own interests, it will die in your very hands and you will lose it. If you give your life in glad abandon to God, on the other hand, you will receive it back from Him transformed, enriched, and glorified by His grace and blessing.

Gay Scottie Pattern For Pillow or Toy

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

BY FAR the most admired toy in a gay and modern nursery was a red and black striped Scottie with a gleam in his button eye. This pattern was used for an applique for Sonny's pillow which met with enthusiastic approval.

By this time it seemed obvious that a Scottie might solve the Christmas gift problem for any number of people. So here he is. You can make a pattern for him yourself by following the diagram.

A wealthy banker once told me the secret of his success. It was very simple and very obvious, and yet so few people follow the recipe. It was: "Buy when everyone else is selling; sell when everyone else is buying." Did you ever stop to think that this applies very pointedly to land and city property.

There are unmistakable signs that point to 1939 as a year in which a great amount of home buying and investing will be done.From many points of the country come reports that both farm lands and city properties have been almost at a standstill until recently.

This is the time to buy a home or investment, while prices are still lower than in good buying times. Freeman and Kenyon has choice farms, city properties and Lake Side Cottages listed that are real values, and can be handled on reasonable terms, and will prove good investments. Now is the time to invest with safety. "There is no safer investment on earth than the earth itself." For quick action list your property with Freeman & Kenyon at Clear Lake.

Many of the largest catastrophies resulting from fires throughout the country have shown plainly that such homes and buildings which withstood the effects were made of clay blocks and tile

Thus we cannot help but wonder how many of our readers are protected against fire For the benefit of persons who are preparing to build, this company is prepared to make a valuable suggestion, which will not only safeguard, but will go a long way toward reducing the cost of insurance

The thousands of buildings that we see throughout our travels show that they stand only because of the materials that have been built into them You cannot imagine a skyscraper made out of wood but we do understand the lasting qualities of brick and tile Their permanence as durable building material has never been equalled Brick and tile do not decay, shrink or warp Buy your drain tile and brick tile here They are located to your advantage.

AT THE COUNTY FAIR

People come from far and near
To see the County Fair,
To pick the best in species,
Of every thing that's there.

There are countless birds and chickens,
Displayed with all the rest,
And horses, cows, and piggies
Wearing ribbons of the best

Oh! yes, there's music in the air
No sweeter could it be,
While people stand amazed and gaze
While acts are given free.

There are peanuts, popcorn, candies,
Hot dogs a whole foot long,
While bands are playing "Ioway"
With gestures true and strong.

The children's anxious little feet,
Are moving towards the stands,
While Papa is unconscious
With the music of the bands.

The sky is getting over cast
And covering up the blue
Oh! now the rain begins to fall
Our day at the Fair is through.

MUSIC HIGHLIGHTS

The "pep" band played a number of snappy pieces for the jamboree, last Wednesday night.

The girl's glee club has had a very good attendance so far this year, and we hope it will continue

SPORTS

During the past week, the Klemme squad took part in the Jamboree and also traveled to Swaledale, where they played Thursday night. Everyone who saw the Jamboree said it was very interesting. Of the three games Klemme played, they won one and lost two After the Swaledale game the boys think they would sooner play one game four quarters, than play three teams for one quarter each, as was done in the Jamboree

Those who traveled to Swaledale to see Klemme play, got in on another treat by seeing Hamilton School of Commerce, from Mason City, play the Swaledale girl's team. The Swaledale team finally edged out Hamilton by a 2 point margin.

AROUND K. H. S.

We elected our cheer leaders last week. They are getting organized and finding a snazzy bunch of yells for us. Dwaine Johnson, Marie Schmidt, and Marian Waterman were elected and Shirley Johnson will be their assistant. We know they will be good cheer leaders and that Klemme will have a real peppy cheering section at every ball game.

The senior home economics girls had a style show last Wednesday with Mr Galbreth as their audience We modeled our woolen dresses. We studied the preparation of meats the past week. We studied broiling, braising, stewing, roasting, pan broiling, pan frying, and boiling. So if there are any delightful aromas floating around the school building soon you will know that the home economics girls are trying their luck at preparing meats.

Found The Birds.

Game wardens at Eagle Grove knew that some duck hunters had been shooting pheasants but searched the car thoroughly without results. Perplexed, they thought of one more possible hiding place. "Take off your boots," they requested, and found the pheasants tucked into the rubber wading boots of the suspects. $25 per bird was the prevailing rate for preseason pheasantry.

Grade School News

KINDERGARTEN, GRADES 1and 2

Delores Thiemann entered the kindergarten this week. Now we have seven in the kindergarten This makes twenty-one in our room.

The first grade made up a story about Thanksgiving, They call it "Thanksgiving Day". This is the story "Thanksgiving day is next week It is on Thursday. We do not come to school. We give thanks on Thanksgiving Day"

We made Thanksgiving booklets. We drew pictures of the Mayflower, waves, the rocky shore, trees, log cabin houses, the Pilgrims and a church. We know a Pilgrim finger play.

GRADES 3 and 4

Rose Schaefer was the only one absent from our room this week

One of our goldfish died. Now we have two left.

We have been studying about the Pilgrims. We wrote stories and made free-hand pictures of them.

Those who had 100% in spelling this week are: Edward Grosshuesch, Esther Hartbeck, Delores Kaduce, Irene Netland, Rose Schaefer, Iris Rosendahl, Isabelle Gibbs and Marjorie au.

We took our fourth number drill in grade 4 We had an average score William Montgomery and Donald Kimball had a score of excellent.

We helped Iris Risendahl celerate her 8th birthday Friday She treated us all to big candy bars

Shirley Stille's birthday was Saturday, but we celebrated it Friday, too She treated us to candy bars too.

GRADES 5 and 6

We have started our remedial reading Some of us took turns being collectors and markers. Ruth Bell was our file clerk and Ronald Brinkman was our recordder. We like to do this reading.

We have used our microphone quite often. We give news over it each morning. In science class we gave our bird reports using it.

The people receiving perfect spelling scores were: Phyllis, Ruth Smith, and Ruth Bell.

Ruth Bell was our news reporter this week.

GRADES 7 and 8

Edna Mae Edmunson and Herbert Schwartz have new reading positions in our remedial reading program.

In geography we have been studying Brazil. Everyone has done some outside reading on coffee and rubber plantations.

Junior Roths, Eunice Larson, and Patricia Kudje received a perfect score in their six weeks spelling test.

We finished reading "The Secret of Hallem House".

Live Wire.

Prompt action of fellow workmen probably saved the life of Morris Marshall, power plant employee at Davenport. When he slipped and fell against a live wire, another workman climbed the pole and pushed him away from the hot wire and summoned aid to lower him to the ground. Marshall's left arm was burned to the bone from elbow to shoulder.

Farm Jinxed.

When Richard Rolfs, 40, was found dead under a tractor and plow at the Nelson farm in Winneshiek county last week, it was the second time in four years that a fatality of this sort had occurred on the same farm. Four years ago, Peter Surly met death in a tractor accident there.

You Never Knom

The most dangerous place in the world, statistics show, is Home Sweet Home. Robert Kirchner, 51, prominent Lee county farmer proved no exception to the rule After living all his life in the same house, stumbled on the basement steps last week, fell, received injuries which resulted in his death.

Bald Eagle.

A young bald eagle, with a wing spread of over six feet, was turned to the state conservation commission last week by Joe Casey and Will Whitmore of Dysart. The two men saw the bird on the ground, drove it into a fence corner and captured it. It appeared to be exhausted, flying only for short distances before its capture. At Knoxville, a bald eagle was not so fortunate, being shot down by a curious hunter who was reprimanded by Game Warden Don Nichols.

'TEEN-AGE GIRLS ENJOY MAKING HOMEMADE BREADS

Homemade Breads—Hot and Cold

Yes, even girls in the 'teen age or younger enjoy making homemade breads of various types and who in all the world does not enjoy eating them? Bread after all is still very much the staff of life and fortunately our modern up-to-date experimental food kitchens are constantly developing for all of us a large number of brand new—good-to-eat, hot or cold, bread recipes of the broadest possible variety.

The making of yeast breads the modern simplified way is certainly a far cry from some of the difficulties that our grandmothers or even our mothers may have experienced when they made it regularly—years ago.

In the first place, yeast is now readily obtainable both in moist or dry form. Furthermore we now know that we can help to regulate the rapidity with which the whole bread-making process can proceed by adding more or less yeast—more if we want to hurry the rising—less if there is no particular reason for speed.

Then too, we have learned to watch the temperature of the dough a little more carefully and we know that if kept at the just right temperature, neither too hot nor too cold, the bread can be trusted to rise as it should and to develop, while rising, the best possible homemade bread flavor.

Then we have learned some modern recipe adaptations of those never-to-be-forgotten butterscotch rolls, parker house rolls and coffee kuchens that our mothers used to make. All of which brings me to sharing with you now some of my favorite yeast and baking powder, hot and cold bread recipes. Here they are:

Yeast Bread.
(Makes 3 medium loaves)

2 cups milk
1½ teaspoons salt
1½ tablespoons sugar
2 tablespoons shortening
2 cakes compressed yeast
⅓ cup lukewarm water
⅛ cup bread flour

Scald milk and to it add the salt, sugar, and shortening. Cool until lukewarm. Soften yeast in warm water and add to the scalded milk mixture. Add just enough flour to make a stiff batter and beat well. Then add enough more flour to make a firm but soft dough. Mix well, turn out on a floured board, and knead until the dough is smooth and elastic and until small blisters form on the dough itself. Place in a well-greased bowl and brush with melted fat. Cover and place in a warm (not hot) place to rise. When dough has a little more than doubled in bulk, knead it down lightly and let it rise again. When light again, shape into loaves and place in well-greased bread tins. Grease top of loaves with melted fat. Let rise until bread has again doubled in volume. Bake 40-45 minutes in a hot oven (425 degrees).

Miracle Rolls.

2 cups boiling water
⅓ cup and 1 teaspoon sugar
1 tablespoon salt
⅓ cup fat
2 cakes yeast
¼ cup lukewarm water
2 eggs
8 cups bread flour

Mix together boiling water, ⅓ cup sugar, salt, and fat and stir until dissolved. Cool until mixture is lukewarm. Dissolve yeast and remaining 1 teaspoon sugar in the lukewarm water and add to first mixture. Add eggs and one-half of the flour; beat thoroughly. Then add remaining 4 cups of flour. Mix well. Place in refrigerator. When ready to bake, make into rolls and allow to rise in a warm place about 1 hour or until doubled in size. Bake in hot oven (400 degrees) approximately 20 minutes.

Bishop's Bread.
(Makes 1 loaf)

½ cup shortening
1 cup brown sugar
2½ cups bread flour
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 egg
¾ cup sour milk

Cream shortening and slowly add the sugar, flour, and salt, mixing very thoroughly. Reserve ½ cup of this mixture for top crumbs to be used on bread while baking. To the remainder, add the soda, baking powder, egg and sour milk and beat until batter is smooth. Pour into well-greased loaf pan, sprinkle sugar and flour mixture on top and bake 25 minutes in a hot oven (400 degrees). Raisins and nuts may be added if desired.

Hot Cinnamon Rolls.
(Makes 18 rolls)

1 cup milk (scalded)
2 tablespoons sugar
½ teaspoon salt
¼ cup fat
1 yeast cake
¼ cup warm water
3 to 4 cups general purpose flour
Melted butter
Granulated sugar
Cinnamon

Scald milk and add to it the sugar, salt, and fat. Cool until luke-warm and add yeast which has been softened in the warm water. Add a sufficient amount of flour to enable handling as a dough. Knead thoroughly, and allow dough to rise until it doubles in volume. Knead lightly, and allow the dough to double in bulk a second time. Then knead lightly and roll dough into a sheet—½-inch thick. Spread with melted butter and sprinkle with cinnamon and granulated sugar. Roll like a jelly roll and cut in slices one inch thick. Place on a well-greased baking sheet and allow to rise until light. Bake in a hot oven (400 degrees) approximately 20 minutes. This basic recipe may be used to make any kind of coffee cake or sweet roll.

Pecan Muffins.
(Makes 12 medium-sized muffins)

½ cup light brown sugar
1 cup graham flour
1 cup general purpose flour
½ teaspoon salt
4 teaspoons baking powder
1 cup milk
2 eggs
⅓ cup shortening (melted)
½ cup pecan nut meats (chopped)

Place brown sugar and graham flour in a mixing bowl and mix thoroughly. Mix and sift general purpose flour, salt, and baking powder and add to the brown sugar mixture. Beat milk and eggs together and to them add the melted shortening. Pour this liquid mixture into the dry ingredients and mix as gently as possible with a fork. Do not stir or beat. Add nut meats. Place in well-greased muffin tins and bake in a very hot oven (475 degrees) for approximately 15 minutes.

Better Baking.

This cook book contains an excellent collection of good-to-eat, new and different, yet easy to make, inexpensive recipes.

LOS ANGELES. — Late one afternoon the news sped out of Washington that congress had lifted the arms embargo. Next day President Roosevelt's proclamation placed "cash-and-carry" in effect. Within a few minutes huge bombers were moving on barges from New York's North Beach airport to waiting freighters which would carry them through war-infested waters to Great Britain.

This was the "gunning" signal for American aviation, but it was not unexpected. Early this year France and Britain began buying war planes from firms like Lockheed, Douglas, Vultee, Ryan and Consolidated. In fact those were nine American-made French planes which engaged 27 Nazi craft in the first dog-fight of World War II a few days ago.

Airplane manufacturers aren't going off half-cocked just because the arms embargo has been lifted. Nor is their expansion during 1939 being based on a wild hope for war profits. But Uncle Sam has placed enough orders with them to bring his air force to something like 5,500 planes by 1941, and this, coupled with commercial orders and those from abroad, has changed the industry from a starving infant into a strapping youngster.

Many Foreign Orders.

Lockheed is a good example of the seven major plane factories scattered up and down our Pacific coast. Lockheed is located at Burbank and as you approach from the air it looks like a giant factory whose walls have been knocked out by the pressure of expansion from within. Which is just about the case.

Lockheed has completed most of the 250 big bombers ordered by Britain before the war started and is starting on an order of 80 similar planes for the Australian government. In addition the plant is turning out about 10 commercial transports each month. A year ago last month Lockheed had 2,700 employees. Last March there were 4,500 and this fall it was stepped up to 6,700, with a monthly payroll exceeding a million dollars.

A peek inside the North American Aviation, Inc., plant at Inglewood, Calif., subsidiary of General Motors and one of the nation's leading concerns. Being built here are basic combat and O-47 observation ships. Wings of O-47 planes are seen in the foreground.

U. S. Orders Come First.

Lockheed's military "backlog" of orders last month stood at about $7,025,000, including quite a few of the XP-38 interceptor pursuit planes which the United States army has ordered. American army and naval aircraft, manufacturers are careful to point out, is not being given second position to foreign orders. A meticulous group of government inspectors is on hand in each factory, keeping things moving and —equally important—keeping them secret.

Lockheed's physical problem is typical. Her 523,000 square feet of floor space is double the capacity of last year, but there still isn't enough room. But the plane manufacturers are wise enough to look forward a few years. They'd rather put on the finishing touches outdoors than invest in new factories which a few years hence might be ghosts.

Down south, at San Diego you'll find the same bustling at Ryan and Consolidated factories. Ryan, which got its start in 1926 when a slim young fellow named Lindbergh asked for a plane capable of flying 3,000 miles, specializes in teaching pilots and building training planes.

Ships Get Bigger, Too.

Consolidated, right next door to Ryan, and Boeing up in Seattle are building most of Uncle Sam's mammoth planes. In side-by-side assembly lines at Consolidated you'll find army and navy bombers almost as big as the Yankee Clipper. The army plane has wheels that stand 4½ feet high—the largest ever used on a ship.

Those "flying fortresses" you've read about come from Boeing, which also builds Pan American clippers and "stratoliners." Up Seattle way they used to make great ado about christening new ships and watching them take the air for the first time. But nowadays it's mere routine.

Boeing has 39 flying fortresses of the B-17-B type to turn out for the army, about one-third of which are already finished. They'll soon start on an $8,000,000 order for more fortresses of the B-17-C type. Sandwiched in are nine stratoliners at $350,000 a copy (minus the engines) and six more clippers for Pan-America at a total cost of $3,000,000.

The manufacturers themselves, taking the entire matter in stride, are inclined to lean back in their chairs and talk about the effect it will have on aviation's future. A few years ago, they point out, the industry was just limping along without money for experimentation and new developments. Then look what happened—along came Uncle Sam with a lot of new ideas and a fetish for making his air force the world's best. Today everybody's air-minded from the kids in college to their grandmothers. You can't stop a boom like that.

WILHELMINA

Dutch Queen Works for Peace But Shuns Red Tape Diplomacy

"IT WILL be my life's endeavor to reign as is expected from a queen of the House of Orange. Faithful to the constitution, I wish to enhance the respect of the name and flag of the Netherlands. I wish to be a just ruler over the possessions and colonies . . . and to contribute to your personal and spiritual welfare to the best of my ability. Trusting in God and praying that He will strengthen me, I take the reins of government."

Forty-one years ago a handsome lass of 18 stood on the royal balcony in Amsterdam and gave her pledge to the 8,500,000 subjects who dwell in a nation no larger than Maryland, and to 64,000,000 subjects in the Dutch East Indies.

Today 59-year-old Queen Wilhelmina faces a more desperate international situation with the same pledge, hoping to escape invasion by the French, British or Germans.

Knows Her People.

The queen popped into headlines recently when she joined King Leopold of Belgium in offering her mediation services to the warring nations. The offer was refused and a few days later a border clash occurred between Dutch and Nazi nationals—strongly reminiscent of the disputes leading to Poland's invasion.

WILHELMINA — Plain, unassuming, the Dutch queen's social consciousness is her greatest asset in preserving the Netherlands' neutrality. She has few troubles on her frontiers.

Through this crisis, as in 1914, Wilhelmina has stood firm knowing that no aggressor could expect any help from factions within the Dutch frontiers. Her subjects know her as a "housewifely queen" who, in 1918, was clever enough to turn a threatened revolution into a love feast. The day her socialist subjects planned to revolt, she issued a proclamation announcing important social and economic reforms.

As a result the Netherlands now has a successful system of poor relief and workmen's compensation. The Zuider Zee has been reclaimed until the Dutch have a new province.

She has held her throne longer than any other European ruler. Known as the "Dutch Victoria," she takes her place as the only woman to sit around the continent's table. This is a signal success for the inexperienced ruler of 41 years ago who took charge of a nation where monarchy was on the wane.

'You Belong to Them.'

Wilhelmina got her first taste of royal life when still a wee child. Led to the palace balcony by her mother, she looked down on a sea of subjects and asked, "Mama, do all those people belong to me?" Her mother replied quietly, "No, dear, you belong to them."

Wilhelmina's father, William III, was the son of a Russian princess. Willful like all Romanoffs, he became discouraged when he could not conquer the indomitable spirit of his Dutch subjects. Broken, he withdrew from active governmental participation and lived abroad many of his later years. The dowager Queen Emma retrieved much of the Orange popularity after his death, but it was Wilhelmina's task to stem the upsurge of revolution.

One reason for her popularity is a complete scorn of the hidebound customs of royalty. Wilhelmina rides a bicycle, dresses plainly and vacations informally—not as queen of the Netherlands but as the Countess van Buren. She occasionally visits Switzerland, Norway and England but her calls are seldom of the "state" variety and she discourages return visits from other rulers unless they have business to discuss. Her reason is that state visits cost too much.

Rejected Nazi Protest.

Wilhelmina's neutrality wasn't even jarred by the marriage of her daughter, Princess Juliana, to Germany's Prince Bernhard zu Lippe-Biesterfeld. When the Nazis objected to her demanding passports of German guests at the wedding she answered coldly: "This is the marriage of my daughter to the man she loves; it is not the marriage of Holland and Germany."

Experienced 'Exile' Heads Polish State Founded in France

PARIS. — A life of exile is nothing new to the new president of Poland in exile —that chap with the tongue-twisting name of Wladyslaw Raczkiewicz.

When the Polish governmen fled bombarded Warsaw and established its new headquarters in the Paris embassy, Raczkiewicz was a good choice to lead this homeless state. He knows what it's like to be a man without a country; he was even born in exile.

Raczkiewicz

His name is pronounced "Ratch-kye-veech" with accent on the middle syllable. He was born in an outpost of Russia called Kutais, where his father, a Polish nobleman, had been sent by the tsar for political activity.

Raczkiewicz is very familiar with his homeland's Russian conquerers. He learned law at the University of Dorpat, practiced two years in Minsk, and entered the Russian army as a reserve officer in 1914.

He was among the first Poles to see a chance for freedom when the Russian revolution broke in 1917. Throwing himself into a combined political-military activity, he organized a secret Polish military force on Russian soil. This group paved the way for organized resistance to the Soviet in eastern Poland.

Proposed Memorial to Annie Oakley Fails but She Remains Enshrined in Hearts of Thousands of Americans

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union)

PRESS dispatches recently carried the news of an unsuccessful effort by the Greenville (Ohio) Historical society to convert the early home of Annie Oakley into a shrine in her memory. The place, a 10-acre farm near Greenville, was lost through lack of funds and has now become private property. But even though the plan to make a public shrine of this home failed, it will make no difference so far as the preservation of the memory of Annie Oakley is concerned.

For long ago she was enshrined in the hearts of innumerable Americans and her place there is secure. Long before the movies made Mary Pickford "America's Sweetheart," that title had been won by Annie Oakley and in the minds of many she never surrendered it to any successor.

Born on August 13, 1866, in Patterson township, Darke county, Ohio, a short distance from the village once known as Woodland but now called Willowdell, she was christened Phoebe Anne Oakley Mozee but she was destined to make the shortened form of her name, "Annie Oakley," known throughout the world. For she became "Little Miss Sure Shot," undoubtedly the greatest markswoman in history.

A Modern Cinderella.

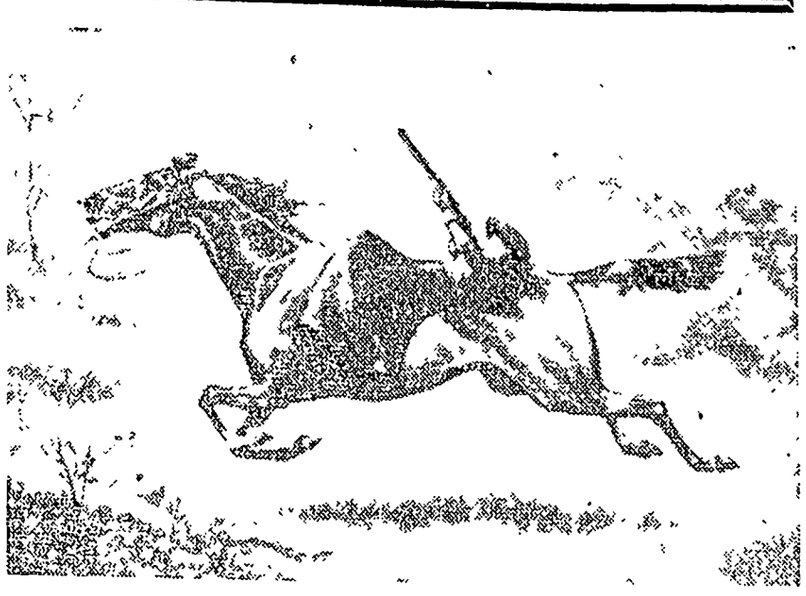
But there was more to her fame than her skill with a rifle to give her the place in the hearts of Young America which she once held. Her life story was a combination Cinderella fairy story, frontier melodrama—but a clean melodrama—and a sort of female Horatio Alger-rise-to-fame yarn. The Cinderella part of it began in that little log cabin in Darke county where lived Jake Mozee and his wife, whom, as a 12-year-old child he had rescued from a brutal stepfather in Pennsylvania. He had given her a home with his sister and, after marrying her when she was 15, set out with her to make a new home in the Ohio country. In this new home Mozee and his wife fought a constant battle with privation and poverty. Then Mozee, returning from the mill, was frozen to death in a blizzard and upon the mother fell the whole task of providing for her seven children.

At the age of six Annie began helping fill the family larder by trapping quail and a few years later she had made the first start on the rifle career that was to make her famous. One of the few possessions which Jake Mozee had brought with him from Pennsylvania was a 40-inch cap and ball Kentucky rifle, which hung over the fireplace, but which had never been used because Mozee was a Quaker with the Quaker prejudice against firearms. The tomboy Annie, however, did not share that prejudice. She saw in the weapon an instrument for getting more food for her brothers and sisters, and finally gained her mother's reluctant consent.

But the beginning of her career as a markswoman was soon interrupted. She went to the county infirmary to get the chance to attend school, and while there a stranger appeared and offered to take one of the girls at the infirmary to work for her "board and keep." Annie was the girl selected and in the home of this man began her Cinderella existence. The man was a brute and his wife a virago. Annie was held as a virtual slave subjected to all sorts of cruel treatment. Once when she fell asleep over a basket of mending the woman threw her out into a snowstorm half-naked. After two years of this existence she finally escaped and returned home.

There she continued her former role of provider for the family with the rifle and thus laid the foundation for the marvelous skill which was to make her world famous. News of her skill spread throughout Darke county and even to Cincinnati where hotel keepers had been buying the game which she killed. When Annie was 15 there came to Cincinnati the "far-famed team of Butler and company, performing deeds of daring and dexterity with firearms, seldom exhibited before the eyes of an audience." As a publicity stunt, Frank E. Butler was accustomed to issue a challenge to all comers to a shooting match. The challenge was taken up by one of Annie's hotelkeeping patrons who prevailed upon her to shoot against the professional.



Annie Oakley in action as sharpshooter.

The girl not only won the match, but also won the heart of Frank Butler and a year or so later they were married. She began taking part in her husband's act and for some time they were billed as "Butler and Oakley." Then Butler, who was a skillful showman, began giving his wife more and more of the limelight and pushing himself more and more into the background. Within a short time she was a noted figure in the eastern theaters.

At one time while they were playing in St. Paul a delegation of Sioux Indians, who were on their way to Washington for a conference with the "Great White Father," attended the theater where Butler and Oakley were presenting their act. One of the delegation was the famous Sitting Bull, who gave evidence of his approval of the girl's marksmanship with many a "Waste!" (Good). Finally as she performed her most difficult feat, that of shooting the end from a cigarette held between the teeth of her husband, Sitting Bull arose in great excitement shouting "Watanya Cicilia!" (Little Sure Shot). Little Sure Shot was the name of one of his daughters who had died, and so greatly was he impressed with Annie Oakley's prowess that he sent an interpreter to her after the show and asked permission to adopt her as his daughter. She consented and the ceremony took place at the hotel. After that managers were more eager than ever to book the act of Sitting Bull's adopted daughter.

In the meantime Col. W. F. Cody, "Buffalo Bill," had organized his Wild West show, but the first year had been almost a failure. While it was playing in New Orleans, Frank Butler and Annie Oakley, who were then traveling with a circus, visited the show and decided that they would prefer being a part of this outfit than of the circus Cody could not afford to pay the salary that Butler asked so nothing came of it at the time. But the next year their trails crossed again at Louisville, Ky., and Nate Salsbury, Buffalo Bill's partner, who happened to be passing by while Annie and her husband were rehearsing their act, was so impressed by it and its possibilities as a part of his show that he hired them on the spot. So in the year 1885 Annie Oakley joined the Buffalo Bill Wild West show and there began that series of amazing triumphs which this former Ohio waif was to share with one of the greatest figures the show world has ever known.

It was through her influence that another feature was added to the show which greatly enhanced its popularity. For some time Buffalo Bill had been trying to induce Sitting Bull to join his company. But the old Sioux leader steadfastly refused. After Annie joined the show Cody tried again. He sent an interpreter to Sitting Bull with the word that "Watanya Cicilia" was with his show and wanted Sitting Bull to join also. There was no further argument. Sitting Bull came forthwith! And the crowds which turned out to see the reputed leader of the Indians at the Custer battle, the great buffalo hunter and the great markswoman increased at every city in which the show appeared.

After a successful season of 1886 on Staten island and in Madison Square garden, New York, Buffalo Bill began looking around for new worlds to conquer. He found it first in England where he took his show on the occasion of Queen Victoria's jubilee in London. It was during this engagement that Annie won her famous shooting match with the Grand Duke Michael of Russia, a match which had been arranged by the prince of Wales (later Edward VII).

Two years later Buffalo Bill's Wild West show was showing in Paris. Cody had met with financial reverses and he hoped to recoup his losses in the French capital. But on the grand opening day, with the president of France and other high officials present, it soon became apparent that the show was doomed to be a "flop." The French simply couldn't "get" the meaning of it all—the bucking horses, the mimic warfare between the cowboys and the Indians, whom, incidentally, they thought were fakes.

But when Annie Oakley gave her exhibition of marksmanship —then it was different. Here was something they could understand, and she was given an ovation that a queen might be thrilled over. For the French had never seen such shooting as this. Here are a few of the stunts that she performed: In shooting clay pigeons, she stood 20 feet back of the traps, started with the pulling of the trap, ran the 20 feet, picked up her gun and broke the pigeon while it was still in the air. Using three double-barreled shotguns she broke six glass balls thrown into the air at once. She shot a dime from between her husband's thumb and forefinger at 30 paces. Perhaps the most famous of her stunts was that of shooting the ashes from a cigarette in the mouth of Kaiser Wilhelm, then the crown prince of Germany. Had her aim been a little less true, the World war might never have been fought!

Tragedy Comes Again.

Annie Oakley ended her career with the Buffalo Bill show in 1901. Then tragedy came into her life again. On the last journey of the season the show train was wrecked in North Carolina. Annie Oakley was desperately injured. But the same courage that had always carried her through every emergency carried her through five operations and years of agony. Although the doctors had said she could never handle a gun again, she staged a "comeback," and at Pinehurst, N. C., in April, 1922, she broke 100 clay targets straight, shooting from 16 yards.

Annie Oakley had many other interests besides her shooting. She was probably the first advocate of the one-piece bathing suit for women, coming out for it as early as 1894. Although at one time she was making $1,000 a week—a large salary in those days—her estate at the time of her death was comparatively small. Perhaps the fact that she supported and educated an adopted family of 18 children, as well as giving generously to many charities, had something to do with the smallness of her estate!

She died in the home of friends in Greenville on November 3, 1926. Her husband, Frank Butler, was seriously ill in a hospital in Detroit at the time and he died 20 days later. They are both buried in a cemetery near Brock, Ohio, where stands a simple monument with this inscription: "Annie Oakley—1926—At Rest."

Reference has already been made in this article to Annie Oakley's famous shooting match with the Grand Duke Michael of Russia, one of the outstanding events in her career. The match was arranged by the prince of Wales (later Edward VII) during Queen Victoria's jubilee in 1887. The story of that match, which, as it turned out, had political results of considerable importance, is told in considerable detail by her biographer, Courtney Ryley Cooper, whose book, "Annie Oakley—Woman at Arms," published by Duffield and Company of New York the year after her death, was the first accurate account of her career, minus the embroidery of legends fostered by imaginative press agents. Cooper's version of the shooting match follows:

"The request of the Prince of Wales brought consternation—and much argument to the camp of the Buffalo Bill Wild West.

"'Go on!' said Nate Salsbury, you can beat him!'

"'Hold on there!' Buffalo Bill broke in, 'there's just this hitch. She shouldn't beat the Grand Duke. That'd be terrible.'

"Thus the argument went on; Cody, the showman, believing that one should do the proper thing at all times—especially when a Grand Duke of Russia believed himself a good shot. But Annie Oakley and her husband had a different idea.

Annie Oakley at the height of her career, wearing some of the medals she won in shooting matches.

"'If what we hear of him is true,' said Miss Oakley, 'I wouldn't have to let him beat me. I'll have to do my best shooting to even tie him.'

"'Shoot him off his feet!" said Nate Salsbury, while the be-whiskered Maj. Burke, press agent extraordinary, all but wept. To be so unkind to royalty!

"The conference at last was over, and Frank Butler and his wife went into the arena where the contest was to be held. There they made use of a little private information. The Grand Duke bore the reputation of being one of the best shots in Russia. But from what Annie Oakley and her husband had heard of him, he got his best results on clay birds, which flew about 40 yards from the trap, a slower flight than Annie Oakley prepared for him on that day of their private match.

"'We'll just make it a good test,' she said, and ordered the traps to be screwed down to 65 yards. "That'll be something to shoot at.'

"Promptly at 10:30 o'clock, according to Annie Oakley's recital, four carriages rolled into the Wild West grounds. They contained Edward, the Prince of Wales, Alexandra, the Princess of Wales, the Duke of Clarence, George, now king of England, the grand Duke Michael of Russia and his suite, the Princess Louise, the Princess Maude and one very important personage in the eyes of the Grand Duke Michael, the Princess Victoria. The English papers had not been at all hesitant about stating that Michael was in England upon a special mission, that of uniting the two countries by proposing a marriage in which the Princess Victoria and himself were to be the principals. Some opposed the marriage; others were in favor of it.

"The contest began . . . while the royal party assembled in the boxes to watch the battle . . . And when the end of the match arrived, it brought a result by which Annie Oakley had missed only three targets out of fifty, while the Grand Duke of Russia had failed on fourteen.

"Then began a perfect torrent of lampooning in those papers unfavorable to the Grand Duke's alleged mission.

"'It was the most amazing and unexpected publicity I ever experienced,' said Annie Oakley in later years as she jotted down notes of her memories. 'The papers that were against his courting expedition were pink with sarcastic accounts of this dashing cavalier who was outdone at his own game by a little girl from America, of this Lochinvar who was no match for short dresses and whose warlike career faded before the onset of the American kindergarten. Whether this had anything to do with what followed, I of course can only guess. But about that time the engagement was broken off . . .'"

July celebration at Garner. She and her girl friends had been in company with others at Clear Lake earlier in the day and Henry took her home from Garner.

"This friendship and courtship grew. At one time Henry went down to Belmond to take some treatments from Dr. Dietz. His treatments did wonders for him and the nurse who assisted was swepted off her feet by this dashing young Romeo from Klemme.

"While he was there he engaged in the ancient game of poker, then called "Hook" The news traveled back to Klemme and Henry shortly received a letter from his girl, Rose. She was not so well versed in the men's games, but believed that it was something that he shouldn't do; so wrote him--"No More Hoop."

Good Food Aided Iowa Heroes!

M-M-M-M-M! There you have it—the Iowa's grid stars' signal for food at the training table! Juicy steak . . . fresh green vegetables . . . plenty of wholesome milk . . . and other stamina-providing foods topped with delicious, energy-giving ice cream made up the menu of "Iowa's Iron Men" who consistently made it a point to crash the Saturday headlines from coast-to-coast.

Back of their gridiron achievements was a mealtime program—one of right diet for physical fitness. All of it is part of Dr. Eddie Anderson's formula for developing wide-awake, stalwart athletes. A graduate of Notre Dame and of Rush Medical College, Doctor Anderson, "the coach of the year," says that timing, speed and co-ordination depend on a man's physical condition. He believes that proper diet including plenty of milk, green vegetables, rare beef and ice cream for dessert, is important in maintaining sound bodies—the mainspring of speed and stamina.

Coach Anderson

Saturday after Saturday, evidence of Coach Anderson's sound thinking was revealed as Nile Kinnick, Erwin Prasse, Mike Enich, Dick Evans, Al Couppee and their teammates played every minute of the game. They had the condition . . . the energy . . . the stamina to stand the stress and strain of the game. No wonder the nation soon proclaimed them "the Iron Men of Iowa."

In the above picture can be seen how some of the Iowa gridiron heroes took to their food. They knew its importance—and they liked what was good for them?

Coach Anderson believes in small servings of nourishing foods with milk to drink for the final lunch before a game. He has the theory that if milk is good all the time—it is good just before the game. And when it comes to dessert before game, Doctor Anderson says: "We always serve ice cream—the boys like it and I think it is good for them."

You Needn't Be Old to Raise Cattle; 'Child Menace' Hits Livestock Show

Youngsters Have Won Four Championships in Ten Years.

By ARNOLD PATTEN
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

CHICAGO. — Once upon a time you had to be a graybeard cattleman or your entry didn't stand a chance of winning the top honor at Chicago's International Livestock exposition—the grand champion steer award.

Nowadays you've got to be a youngster, and probably a girl at that. For if recent experience is any criterion, the grand award at this year's show—December 2 to 9—may very likely go to a beardless youth who will thereby prove that modern scientific cattle raising can compete any day with the old fashioned rough-and-ready tactics.

Four times in the past 10 years the championship has gone to animals shown by youngsters, who in earlier years were politely tolerated by the adult showmen. It's quite an honor, too, because the winning steer is selected from among two or three thousand of the finest beef animals North America can produce.

Dropped Barriers in 1916.

The child menace began in 1916, when a special competition was introduced for steers, lambs and pigs owned and exhibited by farm boys and girls between the ages of 10 and 20. A few years later—and oldsters still rue the day—top winners of the junior contest were permitted to compete in open classes.

Despite a bit of jealousy, these veterans were a little proud of farm youth on that dramatic day in 1928 when 12-year-old Clarence Goecke, a 4-H clubber from Iowa, trudged into the ring and defeated all contenders with his Hereford baby beef, "Dick."

Like all winners, "Dick" was auctioned off at premium prices to a hotel or railroad, or maybe it was a steamship line. Anyway, he brought a new all-time record of $7 for each of his 1,150 pounds! That meant $8,050, and the proceeds were used to found a Hereford herd on the Goecke farm out in Marshall county, and to provide for the education of Clarence, his brothers and sisters.

Today all Iowa farm folks know Clarence as a member of the Goecke family firm, successful cattle feeders.

Brown Wins Next Year.

The same year young Goecke won the championship, a reserve champion ribbon in the junior classes went to another Iowa strapling, Elliott Brown. Next year Elliott came back and won the grand championship with an Angus steer, "Lucky Strike." This steer brought even a better price—$8.25 a pound, which is still a record. Today young Brown has a purebred Aberdeen-Angus herd.

Not until 1935 did another youth come through. At that year's show 19-year-old Cleo E. Yoder, also from Iowa, took the grand championship with "Pat's Blue Ribbon." Yoder is now farming in partnership with his brother, and they're building up a herd of purebred beef cattle from the head start they had in 4-H projects.

Just to prove that beef cattle raising is becoming a sissy business, the 1938 championship went to—of all things—a 14-year-old girl! Men and boys alike hung their heads in shame when Irene Brown, an Illinois lassie, paraded her 1,130-pound Angus steer around the ring. Later he was sold for $3,785.50. The only proud male in the stands was D. A. Brown, Irene's father, who runs a 400-acre farm in Mercer county and maintains a purebred Angus herd.

Break Record This Year.

This year, according to the exposition's management, young America is coming back stronger than ever. Boys and girls from 13 states have listed entries for 480 baby beeves which they will exhibit in the junior contest. Most youngsters come from midwest states, and others from Montana, New York, Oklahoma and Texas.

The graybeards won't really be too angry if another 'teen-age exhibitor wins this year. Get them off in a corner, away from the huff and bluff of the show ring and they're apt to be pretty happy about the whole thing. Tomorrow's farmers are starting young, you see, and what father doesn't hope his son will be a better man than he was?

Solons Find New Interest — the Motorist

10,000 Bills Introduced This Year, but Only 1,200 Are Passed.

NEW YORK. — The hard-pressed American motorist has supplanted the equally as hard-pressed farmer as the favorite topic of the nation's law-makers, it is revealed in a survey of motor vehicle laws considered by state legislatures which have been in session this year.

More than 10,000 bills affecting motorists in one way or another were introduced in the 44 state legislatures which convened this year. Of these, more than 1,200 were written into law, placing the automobile owner far ahead of the farmer and even the relief client as the "most legislatively discussed" single class of persons in the United States.

From the standpoint of motorists who have campaigned for reduced taxation and more simplified and uniform regulations, most of the new laws are good but a large number are of doubtful benefit.

Speed Laws Changed.

With solons largely indisposed to lift any considerable amount of the $1,549,000,000 tax burden carried by motor vehicles, automobile owners can derive a modicum of satisfaction from the liberalization of speed laws in a number of states. Limits which were ridiculously low against the background of automotive development have been stepped up to as high as a legal 50 and even 60 miles an hour for daylight driving in several states. Several other commonwealths followed the lead of Tennessee by avoiding a definite limit and simply warning motorists to "Be Reasonable."

Dozens of bills reinforced and redefined existing legislation. A notable example was set by Pennsylvania which gained national praise several years ago by enacting a 50-mile speed limit and conducting a state-wide personal pledge campaign among drivers to insure better observance. Recognizing that more liberal speed limits and continued running at high speeds require that cars and equipment be in good condition, the Keystone state solons made it unlawful for any person to drive motor vehicles with a tire worn down to the fabric or showing breaker strip or cushion gum. The new law, which went into effect September 1, is expected to bring about a marked increase in highway safety as it eliminates one of the principal causes of skids and blowouts—the use of smooth tires—a hazard which menaces not only those riding in vehicles equipped with worn-out casings but also occupants of other cars which might be sideswiped or struck when such a tire failure occurs.

BLOW FOR DRUNKEN DRIVers—Coming into popularity is the "balloon test" for allegedly intoxicated drivers. As demonstrated above, the "drunk" blows into the balloon, and by analyzing his breath in the portable machine the officer gets a positive analysis of the amount of liquor behind it.

Campaigns Underway.

This bill, which coincides with safety and non-skid campaigns conducted over a period of years by such outstanding organizations and private companies as the National Safety council, Automotive Safety foundation, the B. F. Goodrich Co., and the Travellers Insurance company, has been called to the attention of state motor vehicle commissioners and highway safety authorities by a number of organizations, and similar legislation is expected to be introduced at next sessions of other state law-making bodies.

Speed Laws Eased in Many States; Some Remove Limit.

Every state in the Union now has highway safety patrols, Florida having authorized the creation of a corps of state troopers. Florida also enacted the uniform driver's license law also sponsored by leading safety organizations. Forty-five states now require operator's licenses, Wyoming, Louisiana and South Dakota being the exceptions.

Inspection Laws Killed.

Advocates of laws requiring compulsory periodic inspection of brakes, tires, lights and other equipment were set back in Nebraska and Arkansas where inspection laws were wiped off the books. A similar bill was vetoed in Oregon by the chief executive, while Nevada, California, Wisconsin and Rhode Island failed to pass inspection laws which were introduced. State-owned inspection stations were disapproved by the governor of Maryland. However, South Carolina brought private automobiles under a previously enacted inspection law affecting trucks and busses, while West Virginia enacted a periodic check-up bill.

Scores of bills directed at drunken driving were enacted, Maine taking the lead with a law providing for an alcohol, blood test for drivers who are involved in accidents.

With Washington, North Dakota, Kansas and Idaho writing uniform financial responsibility laws for all vehicles on the statute books, 31 states now require this protection for persons and property injured by motorists. No state has yet followed the lead of Massachusetts, however, in requiring compulsory insurance for all vehicles. Eight states rejected compulsory insurance proposals during sessions this year.

Remove 'Trade Barrier.'

Of particular interest to operators of farm vehicles was the repeal of an "artificial trade barrier" law by Oklahoma. Truckers and others have been hampered seriously by the enactment in 15 states of "port of entry" and other laws which restricted free travel. This year "port of entry" bills were defeated in Arkansas and Nevada, to apparently reverse a trend toward what Gov. Lloyd C. Stark of Missouri has branded the "balkanization" of trade in America.

SPAGHETTI WITH CHIPPED BEEF
(Recipes Below.)

Old Fashioned Hospitality

With Thanksgiving back of us and winter ahead perhaps this is an excellent time to ask ourselves some searching questions—to be answered just by ourselves.

Do we as homemakers really enjoy neighbors and friends? As they pass our house on our street do they think of us with a friendly warmth? Or have we, perhaps unknowingly, allowed ourselves to be so busy, so concerned about the tasks of the day that we have forgotten that after all the biggest joy in living comes because it is the privilege of each one to "live in my house by the side of the road and be a friend to man."

Let's entertain then, but let's entertain simply, informally, inexpensively. And thinking that you might like to do just this, I have collected for you this week a number of my favorite recipes for just such easy entertaining. Please note the little hints that are attached to each of the recipes.

Spaghetti With Chipped Beef.
(Serves 4)

This recipe is particularly nice for a one-dish meal when guests arrive unexpectedly.

1 large (24-ounce) can cooked spaghetti in tomato sauce
1 5-ounce jar chipped beef
1 cup fat

Heat spaghetti. Frizzle the chipped beef in the fat until crisp and brown. Then place the chipped beef in a border around the platter and pour the spaghetti in the center. Garnish with parsley or watercress.

Oven Fried Chicken.
(Serves 4)

Oven fried chicken is one of the dishes that is particularly simple to prepare. After the preliminary browning, all that remains to be done is simply to put the chicken in the oven where it takes care of itself and cooks beautifully until you are ready to serve it.

1 2 or 3 pound chicken, cut for frying
1 cup flour
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
2 eggs
¼ cup water
1 cup fine cracker crumbs
Fat for frying
1 onion, chopped fine
1 cup cream

Dip pieces of chicken in flour to which salt and pepper have been added; then dip in beaten egg to which water has been added and finally roll in cracker crumbs. Brown in hot fat (1 inch in depth). Place in baking pan, sprinkle with onion, and top with cream. Cover and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) until tender, approximately 1½ hours.

Baked Stuffed Pork Chops.

These baked stuffed pork chops are a favorite with any man. Try them.

Purchase thick pork chops and cut a slit in them from the fat side of the chop through to the bone. Spread inside surface of chop with prepared mustard and fill with any desired bread dressing. Brown lightly in hot fat in a frying pan. Remove to greased baking pan. Bake slowly in a moderate oven, (350 degrees) for approximately 2 hours, or until meat is tender.

Hasty Oven Baked Beans.
(Serves 6)

And as for baked beans—try this 30-minute method and if you don't confess, I defy the guests to guess that they are not home baked beans.

1 large can baked beans
¼ pound bacon
¼ cup light brown sugar
2 tablespoons tomato catsup

Pour ½ can of baked beans into greased baking casserole. Dice 2 or 3 slices bacon and sprinkle over the beans. Add catsup, and then cover with remainder of baked beans. Sprinkle with brown sugar, and top with bacon strips. Bake in hot oven, (400 degrees) for 30 minutes. Serve at once.

Escalloped Potatoes and Ham.

Guests or no guests this escalloped potatoes and ham dish is deliciously simple and simply delicious.

Slice potatoes very thin and place layer by layer in a buttered baking casserole. Dot each layer with butter and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Add milk, sufficient in quantity to just cover the potatoes. Top with a one-inch slice of ham. Bake in a slow oven, (325 degrees) until both the ham and the potatoes are baked to a stage of perfect doneness, approximately 1 hour and 15 minutes.

My Best Chocolate Cake.

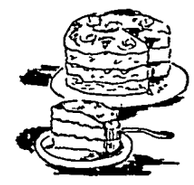
All the world loves a chocolate cake and I suppose there are almost as many recipes for chocolate cake as there are women who make them. This recipe, however, remains my favorite.

2 ounces bitter chocolate
⅔ cup butter
1½ cups sugar
3 eggs
2½ cups cake flour
½ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla extract

Melt chocolate carefully over warm water. Cream butter thoroughly and add sugar slowly. Separate eggs, beat egg yolks, and add to butter and sugar mixture. Add the melted chocolate.



Mix and sift together the flour, salt, and baking powder and add alternately with the milk and vanilla extract. Beat egg whites until stiff and fold into the cake mixture.

Place in 2 well-greased, 8-inch layer cake pans. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for approximately 30 to 35 minutes.

Chocolate Cream Pie.

And speaking of chocolate—this chocolate cream pie has that just right combination of ingredients that makes it neither too thick nor too thin; too sweet nor not sweet enough. Furthermore, it is just as great a favorite with men as with women; with boys as with girls.

2 1-ounce squares unsweetened chocolate
2 cups milk
¾ cup granulated sugar
¼ cup cornstarch
½ teaspoon salt
2 egg yolks
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 baked pastry shell

Shave the chocolate and place it together with 1½ cups milk in top of double boiler; heat until chocolate is melted. Mix the sugar, cornstarch, and salt with the remaining ½ cup milk, and to it add the melted chocolate mixture. Return to double boiler and cook, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens. Then beat the egg yolks slightly and slowly pour the chocolate mixture over them. Return to double boiler and cook 2 minutes longer. Add vanilla extract and pour in baked pastry shell. Cool, and top with whipped cream to serve.

MORAL RE-ARMAMENT

The Newest Force at Work in the World Is Based on the Oldest Rule of Living

By Frank Parker Stockbridge
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

LIKE an army with banners marching to war, a company of men and women from every part of the nation and of the world has lately been moving across the length and breadth of the United States. Their banner bears a strange device, four straight lines tapering upward toward infinity, crossed with the letters "MRA." That striking symbol stands for "Moral Re-Armament."

I first encountered the new banner last spring in Washington, and later at a great meeting in Constitution hall. Senators, representatives and high officials of the federal government sat on the platform and in the audience and listened while Americans, Englishmen, Irish, Scots, Finns, Danes, Swedes, Norwegians, Netherlanders, French, Australian, Canadian, Japanese, Chinese, Burmese, Swiss, Indian, Egyptian and South African men and women told what MRA meant to them personally and to their countries.

I met this army in action in Madison Square Garden in New York under the same banner. I saw the flags of every nation paraded by the youth of those nations, young men and women dressed in their national costumes, singing their stirring call to human brotherhood, "Bridge Builders." Two special trains had brought Canadians to New York to take part.

After the Canadians had marched out of the hall and the audience had begun to disperse I tried to get up to the platform, seeking more information about MRA. A thousand others, it seemed, had the same idea at the same time. All around me men and women were asking eager questions of the hundred or more who had taken a leading part in the evening's ceremonies.

What Is MRA?

"You've got something that I haven't got," I heard on every side. "What is it? I want to know more about it. Where can I get more information about MRA?"

All they had heard from the platform had been a very simple message indeed. Only that if everybody lived honestly, decently, unselfishly and lovingly there would be an end to the world's troubles. Most of them had heard that simple program of living from their youth up. It had been preached at them from pulpits, taught them in Sunday school and at home. But here they had heard it in a way that made it sound not only true but possible. They had not been preached at, but had heard a score and more of men and women, upstanding, clear-eyed folk, some young, some with graying hair, tell simply, briefly and convincingly how they, each individual, had learned to live by the ancient, accepted code in which everybody believes for the other fellow but an appalling few adhere to for themselves.

But here were people of every land, intelligent people, many of them leaders in their respective spheres, giving tangible evidence of the fact that their lives had been changed by acceptance of the principles of MRA. There was nothing sanctimonious in their manner, no cant, no ranting; just straightforward recitals of personal relationships readjusted, of quarrels and distrust between employers and workers changed to mutual confidence and respect, of racial intolerances and hatreds laid to rest, of class antipathies vanishing, when the speakers had learned to be absolutely honest in all their human relations, to discover and admit their own failings before blaming their troubles on someone else, to accept all other human beings as brothers under the All-Father, and to strive as far as was humanly possible to lead personal lives under the direction of God.

And they were happy. It was that note of happiness, unmistakable and sincere, which impressed everybody who heard them, more than what they said. While the rest of us were vainly striving in the pursuit of happiness, these folk had found it. I wanted to know more about MRA. How did they do it? How did these people learn this new way of life? Could anybody do it? Did you have to join anything? How much did it cost? It occurred to me, as I approached the platform, that nobody had "passed the hat." I thought of a thousand questions, the sort of questions which naturally occur to a newspaper man, trained by temperament and experience to be suspicious of anything new which he does not understand, especially in a racket-minded age, to look for the concealed motives behind all human actions.

A Call to the Nations for Moral Re-Armament, Hollywood Bowl, Calif., July 19, 1939. The four beams of light behind the platform signify the four standards of MRA—Honesty, Unselfishness, Purity, Love.

Buchman the Dynamo.

When I finally caught the eye of the alert, vigorous-appearing man who had acted as master of ceremonies, though he let others do most of the talking, he greeted me as an old acquaintance. He was Dr. Frank N. D. Buchman, founder of the Oxford Group, the dynamo of Moral Re-Armament.

"I want to learn more about MRA and try to write the 'inside story' of it," I told him.

"Our next jump is to the Pacific coast," he replied. "Come out and join us there."

So, as soon as I could arrange it, I hopped a 'plane at New York one evening and landed in San Francisco the next morning. I traveled up and down the Pacific coast for a month with the MRA International Team of workers, sat in their inner councils, learned their inmost secrets, which turned out to be no secrets at all, and mingled with the thousands of Westerners who flocked to the dozens of public meetings, large and small, and came around afterwards to seek more light, to find guidance to enable them to live the happy, unworried lives which those who flew the MRA banner enjoyed.

The Hollywood Bowl holds 30,000 people. Forty thousand clamored for admission at the first MRA meeting in California. The San Francisco World's fair on Treasure Island set apart two days in August for special MRA gatherings. Monterey, Pasadena, a dozen smaller cities in the Golden State turned out thousands to hear the message. MRA was front-page news in the daily papers all up and down the coast from Seattle to southern California. Newspaper reporters who came to scoff returned to their offices to write sincerely enthusiastic articles about the movement and its people. The movie colony in Hollywood developed an amazing interest. The radio carried the story of MRA literally to the four corners of the earth; on one day from the World's fair grounds there was continuous broadcasting by short waves, with men speaking in their own languages to their compatriots across the seven seas.

DR. FRANK N. D. BUCHMAN

Change Your Own Life.

The public meetings of MRA, with their crowds and their pageantry, are all for the purpose of stimulating individual inquiries. The answer every inquirer receives is, in effect, precisely the answer which Peter and the other Apostles gave. Each one must first change his own life, by the grace of God; and there is a trained, willing worker ready to teach him or her how to seek and obtain the Divine guidance to bring about the change. There is nothing new about this. It is merely a return to the fundamental principles of Christianity and the ways of the first apostles.

And that, I learned, is the foundation of MRA.

It is not a new creed or a new religion. No one "joins" anything. It is not an organization but a fellowship of like-minded people. It is not an effort to take people away from their church relations, but rather to put more people into the churches and to help those now in the churches to live in their daily lives the teachings of the church. I met Catholics, Protestants of every denomination, Jews, even some Buddhists and Mohammedans as well as many with no church affiliation, among the hundreds of active workers and the thousands associated in the fellowship.

"How many people are there who have accepted the MRA way of life?" I asked Dr. Buchman.

"We have no record," he replied, "but the number is in the millions. We work in 60 nations, and in each country they know that the number is growing."

"Are there many backsliders? Do they all stick?"

One of the other workers answered. "There were twelve disciples and one went wrong. That's 8⅓ per cent. We have not heard of a higher percentage than that."

No Racial Distinctions.

I flew from San Francisco to Hollywood with Takasumi Mitsui, brother of the head of Japan's leading industrial family. He told me that not only himself but many other influential Japanese were living the new life of MRA. I met a considerable number of Chinese, men and women, who are giving their whole time to the promulgation of the teachings of MRA among their people. Titled men and women from a dozen European nations were working side by side in the International Team, on level terms with dockyard laborers, slum dwellers from East London, manual workers from Scandinavia, school teachers from Burma, and people from all walks of life in America. In MRA there are no racial, class, social or national distinctions. Its foundation stone is belief in the Brotherhood of Man under the Fatherhood of God.

I rode back from Hollywood to San Francisco with Bill Rowell and Tod Sloan, some of the workingmen who had been sent over by the sacrificial giving of their labor friends. Bill told me how the Hon. Miles Phillimore, young son of a British peer, had come to his house, because Bill was the most notorious revolutionary trouble-maker in the crowded slums of East London, and lived with him for three weeks, sleeping on chairs because there were not enough beds, until Bill had discovered the basic principle of MRA, that the troubles of the world begin with ourselves. When one changes his own life he begins to change the world. Bill changed, his neighbors were changed, and now the London police do not have to double their night patrol in West Ham. The city council found a new spirit, hundreds of families found a new unity, and the power to change others.

In Hollywood I met and got to know well such devoted workers for Moral Re-Armament as George Eastman, former president of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, one of those whose staff of employees are demonstrating the vital relation of MRA to the world of industry; John Jukes, president of the Vancouver Stock exchange; Gen. C. R. P. Winser of Great Britain, whose record in the Boer and World wars is well known; Ruth St. Denis, the celebrated dancer; Mildred Powell, city councillor of Seattle; Rev. Samuel M. Shoemaker, rector of Calvary church, New York; Wilber B. Huston, whom many will remember as having won the first Edison prize scholarship; H. W. ("Bunny") Austin, well-known British Davis cup player; and Marion Clayton, motion picture actress.

How It Began.

It has all come about because Frank Buchman, a Pennsylvanian, met some men in Oxford university in 1921, and was able to show them the way to put their lives under God's guidance. Some of them went out from Oxford to carry the message of this new way of life to young men in South Africa. They, in turn, sent some of their number to other countries. The movement snowballed. Leaders of many nations saw in it the solution of national problems, joined and encouraged it. I have seen thousands of letters, telegrams and cables from national leaders and heads of governments acclaiming MRA as the greatest force for good their nations had ever known.

President Roosevelt, Herbert Hoover, almost every governor, scores of senators, hundreds of representatives in congress, thousands of other Americans in public life have joined in endorsement of the efforts of MRA to bring back into American life the spiritual values and outlook upon which our nation was founded. On Frank Buchman's sixtieth birthday 45 members of the British parliament gave him a testimonial dinner, in appreciation of what MRA under his leadership had done for the nation.

Frank Buchman is still the acknowledged leader of the movement which he started, though he has dozens of able lieutenants ready to take over. He has no title. He draws no salary, nor does anybody else working with him; a bachelor, he has not had a home, an office or even a desk of his own for 15 years. He lives in suitcases, mobilized like hundreds of others in the MRA "teams," ready to jump to the ends of the earth at a moment's notice.

Source of Income.

Where does the money come from? Many have asked if there is not an "angel" somewhere in the background, putting up funds. I was convinced before I came back from California that there is no such angel, no pool of funds to be dipped into at will. When the call to service comes, those who have share with those who have not. Nobody active in the work of MRA is allowed to suffer for lack of immediate material necessities, but there is far more giving than receiving. Most of the International Team crossed the oceans in third-class and tourist and traveled across the continent in tourist trams or busses. Others, as occasion demanded, used airplanes and stopped at hotels according to their means.

I have been a newspaper man for 50 years, and have "covered" all the great social and revolutionary movements of my time. Take it from a veteran reporter who knows his way about, there has not been a movement which held so much hope for the future of the world and its peoples as MRA does, not since the Great Teacher laid down its fundamental precepts 2,000 years ago. It is leading more people than ever before to apply those precepts in their daily lives and to find happiness in their practice.

The Better Way to Correct Constipation

One way to treat constipation is to endure it first and cure it afterward. The other way is to avoid having it by getting at its cause. So why not save yourself those dull headachy days, plus the inevitable trips to the medicine chest, if you can do it by a simple common-sense "ounce of prevention"?

If your trouble, like that of millions, is due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, "the better way" is to eat Kellogg's All-Bran. This crunchy, toasted, ready-to-eat cereal has just the "bulk" you need. If you eat it every day—and drink plenty of water—you can not only get regular but keep regular, day after day and month after month! All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

Iowa Farmers Asked Not To Burn Fence Row Plant Growth

DES MOINES, (AP)—The Iowa conservation commission points ou the value of vegetative cover along fence rows, roads and railroad right-of-ways and asked farmers and landowners not to burn it over The cover provides food for wild life during winter months and also catches and holds snow.

"This vegetative cover is useful also in holding spring moisture", a commission announcement said "The top growth breaks down, forming a mulch which retains a great deal of moisture which otherwise would run off. If vegetative cover is burned off the winter runoff becomes excessive and may lead to rosion"

It is said the decaying vegetation is also useful in providing humus material essential to good soil.

HEALTH

Webster's interpretation of health is a sound state of the body or a body which is active and vigorous The majority of the people yearn for health but not all those who desire it are not fortunate enough to possess it Health and happiness go hand in hand therefore, if you wish to be happy you must be healthy The building of a perfect body crowned with a perfect brain is the greatest hope of a race Without health life is not life, it only a state of suffering--an image of death Take care of your health You have no right to neglect it, and thus become a burden to yourself and others also It is every one's moral and religious duty to preserve his health, which is the basis of all social virtues. If you eat simple foods take enough exercise, practice regularity of rising and retiring, and always be cheerful you can expect to be healthy Health is more valuable than money because it is with our health that we gain our money An old Arabian proverb is, "He who has health has hope and he who has hope has everything"

For dinner or daytime "dates" a pale pink silk chiffon over-blouse (the very new and smart type finished with band that fastens over the skirt belt line) is shown above to the right. A solid tucking back and front, together with gold embellished glass buttons, bespeak style for this dainty blouse. A rooster head in gay colors with coq feathers trim the pill-box hat, which is significant in that wing, feather and bird trimmings, milliners tell us, are quite the smart idea this season.

Regarding the blouse shown below to the right, the spontaneous impression one gets at first glance is the formal elegance of this model, and rightly so, for it is just that, elegant and formal. It glorifies a black velvet daytime suit. In the evening wear it with a copper-colored metal cloth skirt and you will be dressed to the queen's taste. It is made of sumptuous white satin, patterned with a delicate tracery done in copper. The perky bow ties, the long fitted sleeves and the deft use of shirred fullness are distinctive style touches.

In the panel to the left behold a costume of the present suit and blouse trend. The jacket and skirt are of black wool with nubby self-stripe. The blouse is of fine faille silk in the new blue that reminds of royal. It has a clever group-shirring down each side of the front stressing the current trend to achieve soft fullness through artful shirring.

New Jewelry Ideas Are Cropping Out

Gold jewelry accents on black are still the outstanding fashion. However, new jewelry trends are developing. One of which is the increasing favor expressed for silver necklaces, bracelets, clips, buttons, belt buckles and other gadgets. Huge silver-wrought lockets suspended from silver chains are especially good style.

There is also a tendency to wear white jewelry, moonstone settings being in high favor. Many style-alert women are wearing exquisite diamond or rhinestone pieces especially with black or the new rich wines and greens. As for pearls, they have held good right along and still remain first choice with women who dress quietly and with unfailing good taste.

★ That Awkward Gap
★ Greta Garbo Charms
★ Connie on Her Feet!

By Virginia Vale

THE bugaboo that haunts all child actors has swooped down on Bobby Breen—he has reached that in-between age when there's nothing to do but retire from the screen for a few years, until the awkward age is over. Young Breen's voice is changing, and Sol Lesser, who has him under contract, doesn't want to risk its being injured and has decreed a rest

So "Escape to Paradise," made for Principal Productions, may be his last picture for a while. He'll go to military school and study drama until he is ready to face the cameras again.

Sometimes the screen's young people bridge the gap from kid pictures to grown-up ones without taking time off Deanna Durbin did. "First Love" will show you how charming she is as a young—very young—lady In private life she's all set to marry Vaughn Paul as soon as she's legally of age. And Jane Withers and Edith Fellows kept right on acting, very successfully.

For those who don't do it, the awkward age is a tragedy. They have years of drawing down huge salaries, then suddenly the money stops, and all that they can do is to wait—and face the prospect of not being able to score a second success, when they are ready to work again.

Edward Small plans to bring to the screen a number of the world's greatest stories, but so far he seems to have found a gold mine in the works of Alexandre Dumas, and the other great writers will have to wait until he gets around to them. Small rang the bell with "The Count of Monte Cristo" and "The Man in the Iron Mask," and now he announces that he's going to screen "The Corsican Brothers," the principal characters of which are a pair of Siamese twins.

It seems safe to predict that even people who haven't liked Greta Garbo in her other pictures will be delighted with her in "Ninotchka" It's a delightful comedy, perfectly directed by Ernst Lubitsch, presenting a Garbo who is an enchanting comedienne Melvyn Douglas and Ina Claire give excellent performances, the rest of the cast is good.

It's grand news that Connie Boswell is walking once more. The gallant little star of radio and movies was crippled in an accident when she was a child, and for years she went everywhere in a wheel chair. People wanted to stand up and cheer when she arrived at a football game or a theater—it put new heart into them, to see how gallantly she carried on in spite of what, to most of us, would be an unconquerable handicap.

With her sisters, Martha and Vet, she made a name for herself on the stage and on the air. Since her sisters married, a few years ago, she has continued by herself, and has made a new record for a woman singer in the number of her recordings that have been sold.

She can walk now—only a few steps, it's true, but a few steps mean a lot when you haven't been walking at all. She can swim, and ride a horse. First thing you know, she'll be dancing

Arlene Harris, the "Human Chatterbox" of the air, had a handicap to overcome, too, but she was too young at the time to realize it. For the first three years of her life she didn't talk; when her parents consulted physicians they learned that she was deaf as well.

A trip to Vienna and an operation cured the deafness, and from then on she could talk. "I've been making up for lost time ever since," she says—and the way she chatters on the Al Pearce programs every Wednesday night proves it.

ODDS AND ENDS—Cal Tinney, producer of "Youth vs. Age," says that most of the applications to appear on his program come from elderly people . . . Felix Knight's November concerts took him to Virginia, Maine, Florida and Connecticut, with his Thursday night broadcasts from New York forcing him to hurry home between times.

REACTIONS TO THE GOOD NEWS

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 11:16-30
GOLDEN TEXT—Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me, for I am meek and lowly in heart and ye shall find rest unto your souls For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light.—Matthew 11 28-30.

The response which men and women make to the preaching of the gospel today determines their destiny for time and eternity, just as it did when Jesus was first sending out His disciples to preach.

How do you react to the gospel message? Indifference will keep a man from Christ just as effectively as open rejection A childlike faith, on the other hand, will bring a man into delightful fellowship with Him in both life and service. The Lord gives rest for the soul and companionship in the yokefellowship of Christian service.

I. Childish Dissatisfaction (vv. 16-19).

Jesus, who was skilled in the art of teaching, took a familiar scene from the daily life of the people to show how utterly childish was the criticism of His enemies. Children at play, trying to interest their companions, present a wedding scene of great joy with no response. They then try the opposite with no better result.

The enemies of Christ were just like such children, and His enemies are the same today. Opposition to the gospel likes to clothe itself in learned phraseology and express itself in the terms of dignified logic, but in fact it is but an expression of personal feelings encouraged by the devil and altogether like those of disgruntled children. Not often does it show its true nature in a forthright expression of unbelief and infidelity, for it prefers to hide behind some self-righteous criticism which it can level against Christian people or against their faith.

Why not be honest, unbeliever who reads these lines, and tell the truth about your reasons for failing to accept Christ. When you do that you will find that they are not reasons at all but only excuses, and there will then be hope for your repentance and conversion.

II. Deadly Indifference (vv. 20-24).

Rejection of Christ may be and all too often is simply indifference to His holy person and work. Jesus pronounced an awful judgment on the cities which had been honored by His presence and His great works, and which should have been awed by His message and power but which had passed Him by in bored indifference.

These again are typical of countless thousands who today comfort themselves by saying, "I do not oppose the Church; I'm not against Christianity. I just don't take any position either for or against." By so doing they have declared themselves to be against Christ. Jesus said, "He that is not with me is against me; and he that gathereth not with me scattereth abroad" (Matt. 12:30). Let not such think for a moment that their judgment shall be less severe than that of the cities of Chorazin and Bethsaida!

III. Childlike Faith (vv. 25, 26).

God the Father and our Lord Jesus Christ have a great and loving interest in the touching beauty of the faith of a child. The unquestioning dependence, the absolute assurance of the child heart, these are the things that receive an answer from the Almighty.

This is not intended to reflect in any way on those who may have learning, wisdom and power but who with all have maintained a childlike humility God knows them and honors and uses them. The point we do want to make is that all too often learning and standing in this world are a barrier between men and God simply because men put their trust in these things and not in Him. It is always a serious matter when a man permits his God-given ability to think, to come between him and God. What folly it is to expect the infinite and eternal God who made all things, including the brain of man, to in turn pass through the narrow compass of finite thinking.

IV. Restful Companionship (vv. 27-30).

A study of the theories and philosophies of this world leads only to unrest. Bewildered and unhappy is the man who puts his trust in them. But in Christ the weary and belabored human soul will find perfect and eternal rest. Why then does the mass of men reject Him to go on to wander in despair?

The rest which we find in Christ is not a useless and inactive repose. Far from it. It is a blessed yokefellowship with Christ in carrying forward His work. Here man finds his real usefulness, for only here is he liberated from the limitations of sin and self and joined in a yoke with the One in whom dwells all wisdom and power

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

New dining room curtains.

WITH the holidays almost at hand everyone seems to be giving curtains a thought. An enthusiastic reader of Sewing Book No. 3 writes, "I have a bay window in my dining room that has always been a problem to curtain. Right now I would like to make pinch pleated drapes of figured damask to hang from cranes to the floor. I would also like a valance." With this letter all the window dimensions were given.

The sketch at the lower right reveals the difficulty. The space between the top of the windows and the top of the bay made it impossible to hang the draperies as desired. A 1 by 2-inch strip of wood nailed next to the ceiling of the bay and extending 6 inches over the walls at the sides as illustrated will solve the problem.

The cranes for the side drapes may be screwed to this strip, and the rods for the pinch pleated valance fastened to it. The rods for the glass curtains may then be attached in the usual way to the tops of the window frames

NOTE Readers who are now using Sewing Books No 1, 2 and 3 will be happy to learn that No. 4 is ready for mailing; as well as the 10 cent editions of No. 1, 2 and 3 Mrs. Spears has just made quilt block patterns for three designs selected from her favorite Early American quilts. You may have these patterns FREE with your order for four books. Price of books—10 cents each postpaid. Set of three quilt block patterns without books—10 cents. Send orders to Mrs. Spears, Drawer 10, Bedford Hills, New York.

The monthly meeting of the Liberty Local of the Farmers Union was held Tuesday evening, Dec 5 at Madison No 1 school house

The Lord's Prayer was prayed in unison. Minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved as read

The Farmers' Washington Service letter by E. E. Kennedy was reported on A radio speech of the S Dak. Sec. of Agri., E. H Everson was read. The foregoing showed that the 1939 price of wheat, corn, oats, barley, rye, and potatoes are half as high as the 1938 prices. Articles studying the Cooperative Movement were read as follows To Abolish Farm Ownership --As James Warbasse, president of the Cooperative League of U S A says in his book "Cooperative Democracy" pp. 258-9 'The ultimate aim of the Consumers' Movement should be to purchase the land from the farmers and employ the latter as an agricultural worker." (Whereas the American aim is to see the agricultural worker purchase his own land and become a farmer.)

Several gave some short interesting talks, Suggesting that the lack of proper education was the difficulty of our situation today Children are not taught that the farmer must have Cost of Production to stay in business.

First Team Loses By One Point Margin While Reserves Pile Up Score.

The Klemme Shamrocks journeyed to Kanawha Friday night where the first string boys lost a thriller to the Bull Dogs by a one point margin as Kanawha stepped into the lead 21 to 20 when the final whistle ended the game

With the score tied 10-10 at the half, Kanawha came from behind in the final minutes of play with a basket and free throw by Lefty Berhow to win the game.

Thompson of Kanawha was high performer for the evening with 10 points, while Buseman of Klemme piled up six counters to lead the Shamrock attack.

In the reserves game the Little Shamrocks chalked up another victory for a clean slate by beating the Bull Pups 15 to 7.

Hayfield Wins Thriller

While the Shamrocks and Bull Dogs were putting on a good show, over at Hayfield the cash customers got more than their money's worth when the game went into an overtime period Hayfield broke the tie and emerged victor 31 to 29 over their visitors from Woden.

SHAMROCKS WIN CONFERENCE GAME FROM WODEN TUESDAY EVE

The Klemme Shamrocks chalked up two victories Tuesday night when the Shamrock reserves went on a scoring spree to win the opener 27 to 11. Three complete reserve teams saw service in the curtain riser The little Shamrocks have not been defeated this season.

The main feature game was close from start to finish with neither team at any time having a safe margin With one minute to play the visitors were leading the Shamrocks 19 to 18, but were not able to hold their one point lead and the game ended with the Shamrocks out in front 21 to 19

The Shamrocks were weakened somewhat as Grosshuesch, regular held down the bench most of the night because of illness and saw little activity on the court.

CRYSTAL LAKE CAGERS WILL PLAY SHAMROCKS HERE FRIDAY NIGHT

The next home game on the Shamrock schedule will be on Friday evening of this week when Crystal Lake comes to do battle in a double header game This should be a good attraction as the teams seem to be well matched, according to the games they have played wih other teams. This will be a Seven Eagles Conference tilt.

More Christmas Decorations Added To Klemme's Street Lighting Display

Lee Ridder, Chairman of the Civic Club decorating committee, has added more strings of colored lights to the Main Street decorating system, which adds greatly to the attractiveness of our street at night. A large lighted Christmas tree near the Rock Island depot greets visitors as they enter the town from the west. The Farmers Elevator got into the spirit of Christmas and mounted a beautiful colored lighted star on top of their building.

REMAKING THE HOME

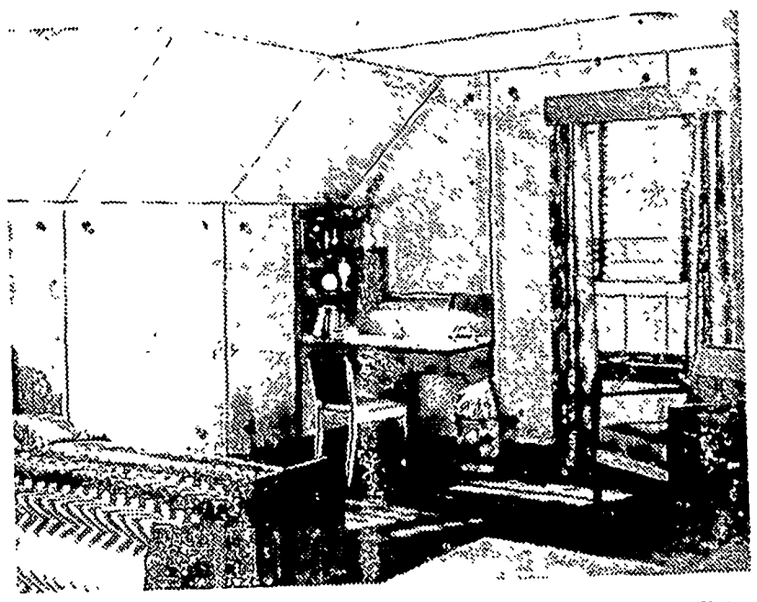
By JANNETT ALLEN



An extra room or guest room is waiting for you in your own home in that unfinished attic of yours.

All very well, you say, to have that extra space, but can you afford it? Oddly enough, you not only can afford it, but actually can save money by doing it in the proper way.

There is no mystery about the process. If your attic is properly refinished with a board that insulates as it builds, you will save about 50 per cent of the heat loss through your roof. Too many houses apparently are trying to heat the great outdoors by allowing their heat to leak out The roof area of the house is the main culprit in this respect.

By turning the attic into a finished room with insulation board walls, you thus obtain an extra room which will pay its own way and provide an annual dividend in fuel economy. The heat leakage which, with cold weather, takes big bites out of the family purse, will be reduced.

The extra room which will so cleverly add living space and cut fuel bills may take many forms, according to the needs and tastes of the family. I know one that was turned into a game room, another into a children's library, a third into a photography dark room.

The simpler the wall finish of the extra room, the better. Large sheets of cane fiber board lend themselves especially well to the attic finishing job, since they cover a lot of surface with little carpentry. Left in the natural tannish color the walls will make pleasing background for any sort of furnishings. If color is desired, paint may be used. Calcimines and water paints should be applied directly to unsized cane fiber board though, calcimine may be applied to the board over a varnish size to facilitate removal by washing. It should be sized before oil or varnish paints are applied.

COOKIES MAKE CHARMING CHRISTMAS GIFTS
(See Recipes Below)

Holiday Fruit Cakes And Cookies

Half the thrill of Christmas is in the pre-holiday preparations. Making cakes that are crammed with fruit and nuts, baking an endless variety of cookies to be frosted and "trimmed" in true holiday fashion, and packing gift boxes of Christmas confections, is as much fun as the great day itself!

Fruit cakes are a Christmas holiday tradition. The dark cakes do improve with age and should be made as early as possible. They won't mold or dry out if they're properly stored. Wrap the cooled cakes well in wax paper, then store in tightly covered cans. If you like, brandy or wine may be spooned over the cakes at two-week intervals during storage. White fruit cakes make a pretty contrast with the dark, but they dry out rather soon and should be eaten within a few weeks after baking.

Don't forget that fruit cakes, cookies, and small plum puddings make charming Christmas gifts, especially for the friends and relatives who'll be away from home on the holiday.

Christmas Fruit Cake.
(Makes 10 pounds)

- 1½ pounds currants
- 3 pounds seedless raisins
- 1 pound citron
- 1 pound mixed candied fruit
- 1 pound candied pineapple
- 1 pound candied cherries
- 1 cup butter
- 1 cup brown sugar
- 6 eggs
- 4 cups pastry flour
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- 1 tablespoon cinnamon
- 1 teaspoon allspice
- 1 teaspoon nutmeg
- ½ teaspoon cloves
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 cup fruit juice or wine

Cut fruits. Cream butter and add sugar. Add well-beaten egg yolks. Mix and sift dry ingredients and add alternately with fruit juice or wine to the butter mixture. Add fruit. Fold in beaten egg whites. Place in baking pans lined with wax paper. Cover pans with cheesecloth and steam 5 hours. Then bake one hour in a slow oven (275 degrees).

Glace Finish for Fruit Cakes.

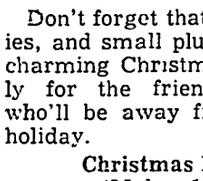
- 1½ cups water
- ¾ cup granulated sugar
- ¾ ounce Gum Arabic (4½ teaspoons)

Place sugar and water in a saucepan and boil to the thread stage (230 degrees). Add Gum Arabic and heat again just to the boiling point.



After fruit cake has been baked, remove from the oven and garnish with nuts and fruits as desired. Then pour the Gum Arabic mixture over the fruit cake in a thin stream, and manipulate as little as possible in order to avoid crystallization of the glace.

Plum Pudding.
(Serves 6)

- ½ cup milk
- 3½ cups soft bread crumbs
- ¼ pound suet (ground)
- ½ cup sugar
- 2 eggs (separated)
- ⅔ cup seedless raisins
- ¾ cup currants
- ¼ pound figs (cut fine)
- ⅓ cup citron (sliced thin)
- ½ teaspoon nutmeg
- ¼ teaspoon cinnamon
- ¼ teaspoon cloves
- ⅛ teaspoon mace
- ¾ teaspoon salt
- ¼ cup apple cider

Scald milk and pour over bread crumbs. Cool. Cream ground suet in warm bowl. Add sugar, cream together thoroughly, and add well-beaten egg yolks. Combine these two mixtures. Add cut fruits together with spices and salt. Add cider. Lastly, fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into well-greased pudding mold. Cover tightly and steam for 6 hours. Serve with hard sauce.

White Fruit Cake.
(Makes 5¾-pound fruit cake)

- ¾ cup butter
- 2 cups sugar
- 7 eggs (separated)
- 2½ cups flour
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 cup sweet milk
- 1 teaspoon lemon extract
- 1 pound white raisins
- ½ pound figs
- ½ pound blanched almonds
- ¼ pound citron
- ½ pound candied cherries
- ½ pound candied pineapple

Cream butter and add sugar. Separate eggs, beat egg yolks and add. Mix and sift together dry ingredients and add alternately with the milk. Add lemon extract. Cut fruits and add. Blend well and fold in well-beaten egg whites. Place in pans lined with wax paper and bake 1 hour in a very slow oven (275 degrees); then increase heat slightly (300 degrees) and bake 2 hours more.

Old Spice Wonder Fruit Cake.

- ½ cup butter
- 1 cup light brown sugar
- 2 eggs
- 2 cups cake flour
- ½ teaspoon soda
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- ½ teaspoon nutmeg
- 1 teaspoon allspice
- ¾ cup sour milk
- ½ cup citron (cut)
- 1 cup raisins
- 1 cup nut meats (broken)
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract

Cream butter, add sugar, and beat thoroughly. Add eggs (well beaten).

Mix and sift together all dry ingredients, reserving ¼ cup of flour. Add flour mixture and sour milk alternately—beginning with the flour mixture. Flour citron, raisins, and nuts with the ¼ cup of flour which was reserved and add to the cake mixture. Add vanilla extract. Place in well-greased, small tube pan. Bake 40 to 45 minutes in a moderate oven (350 degrees).

Rolled Orange Cookies.
(Makes about 8 dozen)

- ½ cup fat
- 1 cup sugar
- 1¼ teaspoon orange peel (grated)
- 1 egg (beaten)
- ½ cup orange juice
- 3 to 3½ cups flour (all purpose)
- 3 teaspoons baking powder
- ¼ teaspoon salt

Cream the fat. Gradually cream in the sugar. Add the grated orange peel and beaten egg, and gradually add the orange juice. Add the 3 cups flour, baking powder, and salt which have been sifted together. Mix m well, adding more flour if necessary to make dough just stiff enough to roll. Chill thoroughly. Place on lightly floured board and roll ⅛ inch thick. Cut, and place on greased baking sheet, and bake in a moderately hot oven (375 degrees) for 10 to 12 minutes.

Lemon Icing.

- 2 cups powdered sugar
- ¼ cup melted butter
- 3 tablespoons water
- 1½ tablespoons lemon juice
- ½ teaspoon lemon peel (grated)

Mix all together, stirring until creamy. Spread at once.

NO HAM AND EGGS?

Pension Sentiment Expected to Boom When Payments Start Next Month

By STEPHEN BRAINTREE
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

WASHINGTON. — Californians won't eat ham and eggs this winter, nor will Dr. Francis E. Townsend cash a $200-a-month pension check. Ohio has repudiated the Bigelow old age retirement plan, too, but the smart politicians aren't fooling themselves. The high pressure pension advocates will bust into full fury before 1940's elections have become history.

The ruffled gray hair of America's elders may be smoothed somewhat on January 1 when first benefits are paid under the federal old age retirement plan. A little is better than nothing, but it's only a drop in the bucket compared to the pensioneers' demands. Instead of placating the aging voters in a presidential election year, the small social security payments may well boomerang back to the White House. You can't taste cake without wanting more.

Pension Payments Costly.

It's no trifling sum that the social security administration will hand out to some 912,000 persons next year, congress having advanced the starting date of payments from 1942. An estimated $114,000,000 will be paid out starting January 1 to 485,000 primary beneficiaries, 125,000 wives and 20,000 widows over 65 years of age, to 78,000 young widows with dependent children, 194,000 dependent children, and 10,000 dependent parents.

This is entirely apart from social security's old age assistance program, already operative in 48 states, District of Columbia, Alaska and Hawaii. Under the latter plan, which distributed $36,750,000 to 1,897,400 recipients during November alone, the federal government matches state contributions up to $15 a month per beneficiary. Thus, if the state provides a cash allowance of $12.50 a month for old people in need, the U. S. will supply another $12.50.

PENSIONEERS—Ira Culp, right, 74-year-old Clevelander, and his companion (unidentified) both worked for the Bigelow plan which was defeated in Ohio last month. It would have paid $50 a month to all persons over 60, money to be raised by a state income tax and a special levy on high-priced land. But Ohio pensioneers, like those in California, aren't downhearted.

California Leads.

How this plan has mushroomed is shown in records of five states wherein more than 100,000 needy get monthly checks. There are 137,000 in Illinois and 136,000 in California. Ohio, Texas and New York are the others. California, home of the pension movement, heads the list in amount disbursed. In November that land of sunshine and honey handed out $4,413,000.

Pensioneers insist the nation can stand a large scale retirement program, but realists in the administration doubt that we can afford it. They regard the 1940 payments as a modest start and refuse to make any more concessions to hold the pension vote next year. Just a few weeks ago Security Administrator Paul McNutt emerged from a White House conference to tell reporters it would be unwise to predict any broad revisions in the present system. There has been talk of combatting the war-inspired merchant marine depression via social security, and of expanding the present plan to include self-employed persons, but the New Deal promises it will sponsor no increase in payments.

Pensions Go to Congress.

It's not expected that 1940 elections will make congress any more pension-minded than it was last June when the house voted down the Townsend plan 302 to 97. That plan would give a pension of $200 a month to all persons over 60 who retire from work, the money to come from a 2 per cent tax on all transactions.

Townsendites are fighting furiously with another group which wants the same general idea wrapped up in another package. This is the General Welfare federation, whose bill is now pending in the house. It would amend the social security act to give $30 to $60 a month to all persons over 60, the cost to be paid by a gross income tax of 2 per cent. Deductions would be permitted from gross income of the cost of materials used in the products of industry, and of the first $60 per month, or $720 per year, of gross income received.

Seek Early Vote.

The potency of this plan is shown by the fact that 130 house members have signed a petition to discharge the house ways and means committee, in whose hands the bill now rests, and bring it to the floor.

The old age retirement plan which goes in effect January 1 is figured this way.

Beneficiaries will receive a basic amount equal to 40 per cent of the first $50 of the average monthly wage plus 10 per cent of the next $200 of average monthly wages. To this is added 1 per cent of the basic amount for each year in which the individual earns at least $200 in covered employment.

Thus a worker whose average monthly income was $100 would receive monthly benefits of $25.75. If married, he would receive an additional $12.88 for his wife, if over 65, and $12.88 for each dependent child. On the same basis a widow's benefits would amount to $19.31 per month; a widow with one dependent child would get $32.19, and a widow with two dependent children, $45.06. No benefit may be less than $10 a month, and the highest will be $85.

The funds come from a social security tax of 1 per cent each assessed against employers and employees, covering all wages up to an annual total of $3,000.

Taxpayers Will Decide.

Rational and unbiased observers of the pension movement can see dangers on both sides. A citizen who's worked hard all his life and now faces indigent old age is apt to be a bit too demanding on his government. And youngsters, who fall heir to their elders' jobs and must foot the pension bill, aren't apt to be very sympathetic about large pensions. At the same time, however, youth is becoming more pension-conscious.

It won't be necessary to worry about alleged "crackpot" retirement schemes. On some not-too-distant day one of them may be legislated into being, but not for long. Eventually the electorate will decide how big a tax load it can carry.

Ciphered Messages Foil Enemy, But Sometimes They Backfire!

A'LISTENING—Operators in recording room of the British Broadcasting corporation, London, listening to stations throughout the world. When they strike an interesting or mysterious broadcast, it's switched to the recorder.

LONDON. — Two British secret service agents were arrested in Germany recently after the Nazis had intercepted their coded radio communications. Thus was completed a thrilling — if unsuccessful — chapter in wartime use of ciphered messages, a procedure developed during the World war and being used by all participants in the present war.

In London, Berlin, Paris and other key cities, code specialists are constantly scanning the ether for secret messages.

Phonograph Ran Down.

Clever tricks are often used to foil the enemy. During the World war the allies puzzled for months over fast, gibberish signals broadcast from the great German radio station at Nauen. Records were made and studied in the allied decoding rooms, but the mystery remained unsolved until one hot day on the Mediterranean when British naval officers were mixing cool drinks and listening to musical selections on their portable phonograph. Finally one officer said:

"Well, that's all the records, except for some of the Nauen lightning gibberish."

The record was started, but the first officer forgot to wind the phonograph and none of his companions bothered to stir in the heat. Suddenly an officer jumped to his feet. The "gibberish" on the slowly turning record took form in recognizable code groups, being a message from the German high command to an outpost in East Africa.

Blunder Cost a War.

A code blunder was responsible for Russia's defeat in the World war. Discarding its old cipher in favor of a previously planned new one, the Russians invaded East Prussia with two armies. Through error, only one of the commanding generals had been given the new code, so the field radio proved a boomerang. Neither army could read the other's code, consequently they resorted to "clear," or plain code which the Germans had no trouble intercepting. With this unexpected information, General Von Hindenburg surprised the Russians at Tannenburg on August 26, 1914, and massacred the enemy.

A few weeks later the Russian navy made up for the army's loss. Having sunk a German battleship in the Baltic, a Russian commander ordered that the German dead be picked out of the water and taken to land for a decent burial. One of the first things they found on the person of a dead officer was the lead binding of a code book. Dredging frantically, they soon discovered the book itself and thus acquired not only the code then in use, but the key to the whole system on which German naval codes were built.

Aided Prison Escape.

Codes have been used for centuries, according to "Secret and Urgent," a new Bobbs-Merrill book written by Fletcher Pratt. From ancient Greece until today, codes and ciphers have helped win and lose wars, have caused heads to roll and crowns to topple. One of the best such stories comes from the civil war between Charles I of England and his commons. Sir John Trevanion, locked in jail awaiting execution for participation in the quarrel, received a long letter of condolence from a friend a few hours before his scheduled death. That evening he asked to be taken to the chapel for solitary devotions. When the guards returned, Sir John was gone.

Had cryptographers examined the letter carefully, they would have discovered that by reading every third letter after each comma, the following message was found: "Panel at east end of chapel slides."

Toys for Christmas Made From Spools

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

SO MANY readers have asked for more spool ideas after seeing the directions for spool shelves in Sewing Book No. 3, that I know you will love making these amusing toys.

The two spools for the doll's arms are strung together with cord. Start with these, then bend the body wire over the center of the cord. Run both ends of the wire through the two body spools, then bend the wires and run them through the spools for the legs. Bend in flat loops for the feet. Twist wire around the bonnet spool and fasten to body tightly so the bonnet tips up at the back. Cut a face out of a fashion magazine or draw one and paste it on the front of the bonnet spool. The dress is of two straight pieces; the bright sash and bonnet ribbons match.

One end is cut off the spool for the dog's head. Bend the wire over the whiskers, then run both ends through the head and neck spools. Run one end through the two leg spools, then both through the body and one through the back spool. Twist together around the tail.

Four Score Years Have Passed Since John Brown Died on the Scaffold But His Renown "Goes Marching On"

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

FOR four score years the body of John Brown has lain "moldering in its grave" but his fame "goes marching on." The fires of the Civil war have long since died down but the song which once fanned its flames is still being sung by a generation of Americans to whom the story of this "martyr" (or "fanatic") is but a dimly-remembered legend.

They can, however, obtain a little clearer picture of what manner of man he was and why he was instrumental in setting millions of Americans at each other's throats if they read a book published recently by the Kansas Magazine Publishing company of Manhattan, Kan. Last year Kirke Mechem, secretary of the Kansas State Historical society wrote a play about John Brown. It won the 1938 Maxwell Anderson Award of Stanford university. It was published as a book on October 16 of this year—the anniversary of John Brown's famous raid on Harper's Ferry.

As December 2, 1939, approaches, it is appropriate to turn to the last two pages of this book and read there

ACT THREE
Scene III

SCENE: A hill overlooking a valley, December 2, 1859. At first dark, it slowly becomes lighter until the figures of Kagi and Oliver are visible, although indefinite.

(Note: John Henry Kagi, Brown's chief lieutenant, and his youngest son, Oliver, were killed during the fighting at Harper's Ferry.)

Oliver—Kagi! I see the scaffold.
Kagi—Yes, Oliver.
Oliver—But we are dead!
Kagi—Yes.
Oliver—But why are we so dim?
Kagi—Because our spirits were dim.
Oliver—Spirits? Ghosts, Kagi?
Kagi—Not heavenly ghosts or spirits, Oliver.
But now we live within the minds of men.
You are the Oliver the world remembers.
And I am Kagi, living as a spirit
In men's remembrance.
Oliver—Then as the world remembers us we live!
Kagi—Not by our earthly bodies, Oliver.
No, for most strangely, in the same degree
That men renounce their bodies do their spirits
Seem to have earthly life.
Oliver—As we renounced ours, then we live?
Kagi—Yes; somewhat dimly. Our renunciation
Was a little under protest.
Oliver—All the great spirits have renounced themselves.
Kagi—If not renounced, transcended, Oliver.
Oliver—Kagi! They're on the gallows!
Kagi—Yes, so they are.
Oliver—Kagi, Kagi! They're hanging him!
Kagi—Yes, Oliver, they think they're hanging him.
They have a scaffold and they have his body.
Yes, now — They hang him!
Now, John Brown is dead!
That fierce and passionate body, there it hangs!
They've strung him up between the earth and Heaven!
John Brown is dead! Now cut his body down.
Now, bury him. You cannot bury him!
He stands colossal on the blood-stained sod!
He springs a hundred-fold—
Oliver—Kagi! Look! Rising from the scaffold!
All white and shining!
Kagi—That is his spirit, Oliver!
Oliver—What's that?

(There is a sound of a distant cannon, then another.)

Kagi—A cannon in the distance.
Oliver—He's moving! Someone is with him. Soldiers!
Kagi—They're coming. Millions. Millions. Following him.

He was the first newspaper correspondent on the ground after John Brown's raid on Harper's Ferry began. He interviewed Brown after his capture, accompanied the "angry man of God" and his fellow raiders when they were moved to Charlestown and was present when Brown was placed on trial for his life. Here is Donovan's account of the execution of John Brown:

The air on the second day of December was crisp and sharp, such as we have in this latitude in early December when the weather is fine. Early in the morning there were fleecy clouds shrouding the sun, but by 10 o'clock these had dissipated and the sun shown brightly.

John Brown dressed for the execution when he rose from bed. About nine o'clock, bedizened with laces and cords and spangles, General Taliaferro, commandant of the 3,000 Virginia uniformed militia, called at John Brown's cell. The old hero was engaged in writing. As he looked up and recognized the general he said:

"What is the hour of execution?"

"Eleven o'clock," replied the general.

"I will have finished my correspondence before that hour," he replied as he resumed his pen.

Taliaferro stood for a moment and then turned on his heels and left the jail. He did not awe the old raider by his imposing presence and attitude.

At 11 o'clock a furniture wagon, with two horses attached, was drawn up in front of the jail. John Brown with Sheriff Campbell on one side and Jailer Avis on the other stepped from the jail. Unaided Captain Brown got into the wagon and took a seat on a box which contained his coffin. Jailer Avis sat at his side. On the driver's seat sat George W. Sadler, Massachusetts man, resident of Charlestown, who thought it necessary that he should drive John Brown to his death, that he might attest his loyalty to southern institutions. The Charlestown cadets, under command of Capt. W. W. Gallagher, formed around the wagon, and preceded by military and followed by military the line of march was taken up to the field of execution just beyond the town limits and to the south of it.

As Captain Brown filled his lungs with the crisp air he said to Mr. Sadler, "What a delicious atmosphere. It is very invigorating."

"Yes," replied Mr. Sadler. They reached a little knoll from which the open country could be seen.

"Why, Mr. Sadler, you have a lovely country surrounding you. I had no idea it was so lovely."

"Yes," replied Mr. Sadler.

Then the old man's eye caught the Blue Ridge mountains.

"Is the Blue Ridge always as beautiful as it is this morning?" he asked.

"Yes," replied Mr. Sadler, "always so on bright days. Captain Brown, you are more cheerful than I."

"Oh! yes, I should be."

And thus he proceeded to his death.

Reaching the field, he got from the wagon unaided and started for the steps of the scaffold. Of all the scenes in a life which has not been uneventful, that scene at the scaffold is most indelibly impressed upon my mind. Tonight, as on that cool December morning nearly a generation ago, it stands distinctly before me. I see him as he places his foot on the first step. No bravado, but a calm mien and exquisite poise, step after step he takes, as though he were ascending the stairs in a gentleman friend's home to a chamber in which he was to rest. Reaching the top, he steps forward on the trap, glances at the thousands of soldiers by whom he is surrounded and turns to Jailer Avis with,

"Where are your citizens?"

"Citizens are not allowed to be present," the jailer replies.

"That is a great mistake—a grave mistake. Your citizens should have witnessed this scene."

He throws his head back and looks at the rope which dangles above him. Then his eyes catch the Blue Ridge and he turns almost around grasping its beautiful sweep up the valley. A touch on his shoulder calls his attention, and, as he faces, the sheriff whispers to him. The old man reaches up and removes his old black felt hat, laying it at his feet; then runs his fingers through his hair, and then his arms are pinioned, his limbs are bound, the rope is adjusted and the white cap is drawn over his face.

Then an order is given to the military and it commences to maneuver. Charging and retreating, flying off at the flank and falling back on the center; 10 minutes are occupied in this barbarian behavior, and all the while the old man stands on the death trap without a tremor. Jailer Avis becomes impatient and says to Captain Brown,

"Aren't you getting tired, Captain?"

"No, but I do not see the necessity for keeping me waiting so long."

The military settle. The sheriff approaches the old man and touches his hand with a handkerchief with the remark:

"Drop this when you are ready."

"Oh, no! I do not need that. I am always ready."

In a few seconds the trap is sprung and in 15 minutes John Brown's soul is with his God.

Equally interesting is another eye-witness account. This is contained in a letter written on the day of the execution by an officer, on duty with the Virginia Military Institute cadets, to his wife in Lexington, Va. It was printed many years later—in the January 31, 1934, issue of the Lexington Gazette. It says in part:

By 10 o'clock all was arrayed. The general effect was most imposing, and at the same time picturesque. The cadets were immediately in the rear of the gallows, with a howitzer on the right and on the left, a little behind so as to sweep the field. The whole enclosure was lined by cavalry troops, posted as sentinels, with their officers continually dashing around the enclosure. Outside this enclosure were other companies acting as rangers and scouts.

Shortly after 11 o'clock the prisoner was taken from the jail and the funeral cortege was put in motion. First came three companies—then the criminal's wagon, drawn by two large white horses. John Brown was seated on his coffin, accompanied by the sheriff and two other persons. The wagon drove to the foot of the gallows, and Brown descended with alacrity, and without assistance, and ascended the steep steps to the platform. His demeanor was intrepid, without being braggart. He made no speech, whether he desired to make one or not, I do not know. His manner was free from trepidation, but his countenance was not without concern, and it seemed to me to have a little cast of wildness. He stood upon the scaffold but a short time, giving brief adieus to those about him, when he was properly pinioned, and the white cap drawn over his face, the noose adjusted and attached to the hook above, and he was moved blindfold a few steps forward. It was curious to note how the instincts of nature operated to make him careful in putting out his feet, as if he were afraid he would walk off the platform. The man who stood unblenched on the brink of eternity was afraid of falling a few feet to the ground!

He was now all ready. The sheriff asked him if he should give him a private signal, before the fatal moment. He replied in a voice which seemed to be unnaturally natural—so composed was its tone and so distinct its articulation—that "it did not matter to him, if only they would not keep him too long waiting." He was kept waiting, however. The troops that had formed his escort had to be put into their proper positions, and while this was going on he stood for 10 or 15 minutes blindfolded, the rope around his neck, and his feet on the treacherous platform, expecting instantly the fatal act. But he stood for this comparatively long time upright as a soldier in position, and motionless. I was close to him, and watched him narrowly, to see if I could see any sign of shrinking or trembling in his person. Once I thought I saw his knees tremble, but it was only the wind blowing his loose trousers. His firmness was subjected to still further trial by hearing Colonel Smith announce to the sheriff, "We are all ready, Mr. Campbell." The sheriff did not hear, or did not comprehend, and in a louder tone the announcement was made. But the culprit still stood steady, till the sheriff, descending the flight of steps, with a well-directed blow of a sharp hatchet, severed the rope that held up the trap-door, which instantly sank sheer beneath him, and he fell about three feet. And the man of strong and bloody hand, of fierce passions, of iron will, of wonderful vicissitudes—the terrible partisan of Kansas—the capturer of the United States arsenal at Harper's Ferry—the would-be Cataline of the South—the demi-god of the Abolitionists—the man execrated and lauded—damned and prayed for—the man who in his motives, his means, his plans, and his successes must ever be a wonder, a puzzle, and a mystery—John Brown was hanging between heaven and earth.

The No. 10-C Hammer Mill with feed conveyor. Note the adjustable gate at the feed throat of the conveyor

● Name any grain or roughage you like . . . it's pretty certain you can grind it just the way you want it in the new McCormick-Deering Hammer Mills No. 10 and No. 10-C. These two mills are easy to adjust, simple to operate, and they grind at the exact degree of fineness you want.

Come in and see them at our store. The No. 10 has a large-capacity gravity-feed hopper; the No. 10-C is equipped with feed conveyor. By removing screens and hammers in the No. 10-C, you can use it as an ensilage cutter—a feature many livestock feeders and dairymen will like.

The McCormick-Deering line is the complete line of feed-grinding equipment. Besides these two mills, we have the new No. 5 Hammer Mill (slightly smaller capacity than the No. 10 and No. 10-C), the No 2 Roughage Mill, and a complete line of plate-type Feed Grinders.

Cooperation is the basis on which all good and worth while things develop The success and happiness of any individual depends primarily on how willing he is to cooperate This is why the high ideas of many fade instead of develop If there were cooperation in Europe today, it would not be the chaotic Europe it is today I do not mean that any country should be willing to surrender to another country, but that the people of Europe should cooperate in doing what is right and destroy all kinds of tyranny Cooperation stimulates the interests of the people and serves as a mediation in times of distress and is essential to the success of any type of government

TRY ANYTHING ONCE

A butcher in Ohio received from a friend in Florida several small alligators, which he proudly displayed in a small tank at his store, so as to arouse public interest. One of his best customers came into the shop that afternoon. He noticed the alligators and looked at them quite a long time.

Then he said to the butcher: "I suppose a person might as well be dead as to be out of style. I've never eaten them before, but you can give me a couple of pounds of alligator. What's the best way to cook 'em?"

...e Associates With Fabric In Current Costume Fashions

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

...TEST style reports bring the ...nteresting news that lace, that ...l flatterer of womankind, has ...into partnership with fabric. ...ll love the new dresses that are ...being fashioned part of lace ...part of fabric. You will be ...ed at the multitudinous ways ...ich this idea is being worked ... In fact designers have seized ...opportunity to create fashions ...this line with such keen en...asm the movement has become ...emendous influence throughout ...me design.

...omen who aspire to dress be...ngly and in perfect taste with...how or ostentation will find that ...one of the three lace-with-fab...owns pictured will prove exact... their liking. The model shown ...red in the picture combines ... with sheer wool. The lace ... drapes softly to meet the V- ...of the wide corselet inset mid... to give the new narrowed-in ...tline. The gored skirt and flar... hemline give fashion's pet sil...ette.

...e soft graceful lines of the dress ...e left in the group have a de...ful knack of slimming the fig... Lace is used around the neck... and up on the new below-elbow ...res. Gleaming buttons set off ...shirred bodice. Here is the sort ...ress that "prettifys" you every ...e you wear it. Being conserva...y styled it is not too dressy for ...ume affairs yet it is dressy ...gh to tune to occasion of after...n tea, bridge party or the ...nee.

...the charming gown to the right ...popular contrast-bodice-and-skirt ...me is carried out beautifully with ... crepe for the skirt and lace for the blouse top. The soft draped lace bodice is lined throughout and the skirt is gored for smart and becoming fullness. The self-fabric frogs that fasten it are centered with rhinestone clasps.

Choose any of the three dresses illustrated and you will be showing fine judgment. Regarded as foundation dresses to serve as background for resplendent jewelry accents you will find them of the type that is indispensable in the properly selected wardrobe. Granted that black is always a safe, and for the most part, first choice, yet when it comes to color one cannot but find that the lace-plus-fabric gown carried out in monotone blackberry hue, or tulip black, or in wine, in deep forest green or the new grayed blues or greens, presents a very persuasive argument.

There is another lace-and-fabric idea that is simply taking the fashion world by storm. It is that of the simple black sheer wool or crepe afternoon frock that is trimmed with narrow black lace frilled about the neckline and sleeves, also about the wide-flaring skirt hemline. If there be a bustle-back sash of self-dress fabric, it too will be edged with wee lace frills. It is a catchy theme, we can assure you.

One cannot too urgently stress the use of black lace. Perhaps the Spanish influence in fashions has brought about the present black lace craze but whatever the cause the fact remains that designers are turning out an endless array of dresses, blouses, jackets, even hats and bags made of lace. A clever fantasy is the huge black lace butterfly bow worn at the decollette neckline of the black velvet or crepe dinner or formal evening gown, caught with a glittering jeweled clip or brooch.

Ornate Sweaters For Evening Wear

Very fashionable is the formal two-piece evening dress that tops a floor-length skirt of black velvet or stiff silk with a sweater sparkling with sequin or crystal embroidery or with a basque jacket of rich brocade or sumptuous metal cloth. The sweaters may be as simple or as elaborate as you wish. Some are fashioned with low decollete necklines, others button up close to the throat. They may glitter all over with sequin embroidery and such, or they are made to take on the formal look via a row of brilliant rhinestone buttons that fasten close up to the neckline where they are met with a cunning little turnover collar made all of sequins and rhinestone and metal threads.

Peg-Top Pockets Hark Back to 1914

The peg-top silhouette, so reminiscent of the 1914 era, is being modified to very wearable lines in daytime wools and afternoon crepes of silk, with the peg-top look created by the proper placement of pockets. Back fullness, which caused such a lot of conversation only a little while ago, has simmered down to a very pleasant new silhouette movement confined to cluster pleats, a flat bow or shirring carefully placed.

Today's civilization-on-wheels has revolutionized the Twentieth century toy industry. Several decades ago children played with paint sets and cut-out dolls. Now girls and boys want wheel goods. Velocipedes must be streamlined, scooters must have pneumatic tires, and doll carriages must be of the latest baby buggy designs.

PARABLES OF THE KINGDOM

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 13:3-8, 31-33, 44-46.

GOLDEN TEXT—Incline your ear, and come unto me: hear, and your soul shall live.—Isaiah 55:3.

Teaching by parable, a method so often used by our Lord Jesus Christ, has many advantages. A parable (which is a story relating events in common life to teach or illustrate spiritual truth) is useful in stimulating interest and attention, in making the truth clear, in fixing it in the hearer's memory, and in attracting for further instruction those who are interested even as it eliminates those who make no response. Jesus was the master of this art of teaching. Others have learned from Him.

The interpretation of the parables of Jesus has brought forth much difference of opinion. The important point to bear in mind is that the interpretation must be one consistent with other scripture, as well as with our Lord's own revelation of its meaning when given. We have His own interpretation of the parable of the Sower (Matt. 13:18-23), but He did not interpret the other parables of our lesson, leaving it for us to carefully seek their meaning and gladly receive their instruction.

I. Take Heed How You Hear (vv. 3-8).

This parable is rightly called the parable of the Sower for our Lord so named it (v. 18), but as we read it we see that the lesson it teaches relates primarily to the four kinds of hearers of the Word of God.

There are some who hear and their hearts and minds have so long been the common road over which every worldly influence has passed, that it has become so hard the Word of God finds no lodgment, but is quickly carried away by the birds, which are the "vultures of worldliness" and wickedness (see v. 19). Reader, if your heart is like that, ask God to break it up. Let us all shun those hardening influences which destroy our susceptibility to God's Word.

Others there are who hear and the seed takes root, but the soil is so shallow that it has only a quick growth which soon withers. These are those whose life is largely emotional, thrilling to a new experience, but not ready to face trials and the responsibilities of life (v. 21). As long as the Christian life looks attractive such shallow folk want to be counted in, but when they learn that it involves sacrifice, they are gone. Shallow souls, pray God to give your life depth and real meaning and worth.

Others hear and receive the truth, but soon permit the cares of life to choke and destroy it (see v. 22). This pictures modern life so aptly that one could dwell with profit on the vital lessons here taught.

Thank God, some of the seed brings forth a rich harvest! There is encouragement for every teacher and preacher of the Word of God. Notice (vv. 8, 23) that if we should bring forth a hundred-fold it would be tragic to bear only thirty or sixty.

II. Beware of the Power of Evil (vv. 31-33).

Just as the mustard plant was never intended to grow into a tree in which the birds would dwell, so Christianity was never intended to be a nominally Christianized world empire in which ungodly men, the dark birds of the evil one (v. 19), should find comfortable lodgment. Unfortunately, that is what much of professing Christianity has become. Let those of us who love the Lord beware that we are not misled by it.

The parable of the leaven teaches the same lesson. Always in the New Testament leaven stands for evil (see such passages as Matt. 22:16-21, 23, 29; 23:14, 16; I Cor. 5:6-8; Gal. 5:9). It is any influence that weakens testimony, encourages hypocrisy, formalism or worldliness. Who can deny that this leaven has spread throughout the Church? The Evil One is powerful. Let us beware of his power and of his leaven.

III. Value Redemption Aright (vv. 44-46).

In interpreting this parable we observe that obviously the sinner had nothing to sell with which to buy salvation, even if it were to be bought, which we know it is not (Eph. 2:8). We do give up some things to follow Christ, but are they not the worthless and degrading things? On the other hand, He gave us His all, even to the shameful death of the cross. This He did for His own people, Israel, and what we are even more interested in, for the Church.

Let us value our redemption highly. We have been purchased with the unspeakable price, the blood of our Lord Jesus Christ. Let us then heed the admonition of the apostle Paul, "Ye are bought with a price, therefore glorify God in your body and in your spirit, which are God's" (I Cor. 6:20).

They discovered that the person who called was two blocks east of the church and that from that point where the call was made it did appear that the church was on fire. Smoke from a chimney was wafted upward from the church steeple and against the sunset made it appear like fire.

If Every One...

If every one who drives a car could lie a month in bed,
With broken bones and stitched-up wounds, or fractures of the head,
And there endured the agonies that many people do,
They'd never need preach safety any more to me or you.

If every one could stand beside the bed of some close friend,
And hear the doctor say "no hope" before that fatal end,
And see him there unconscious, never knowing what took place,
The laws and rules of traffic I am sure we'd soon embrace.

If every one could meet the wife and children left behind
And step into the darkened home where once the sunlight shined,
And look upon "The Vacant Chair" where Daddy used to sit,
I'm sure each reckless driver would be forced to think a bit.

If every one who takes the wheel would say a little prayer,
And keep in mind those in the car depending on his care,
And make a vow and pledge himself to never take a chance,
The great crusade for safety then would sudden advance

STANDARD BEARER NEWS

The local Standard Bearers held their meeting Tuesday, Dec 13, at the home of Mrs. E. G. Schaeffer Christmas carols were sung until all were present. After the business meeting reports were given by Ruth Stille, Doris Johnson, Ardella Nelson, Shirley Johnson, and Miss Potter concerning the present day Lah Bagh school. Miss Michalek gave the sixth chapter of "The Garden of Jewels" This is a continued story and is most interesting now because a treasure is about to be found Mrs. Elder led the devotions. The ten points of the Golden Circle were used as the topic A lovely lunch was served.

Knowledge of these three facts --that tuberculosis is an infectious disease, that you must isolate infectious diseases; that all diseases are less serious if discovered and treated early-is the common property of all intelligent people. It is the spread of this knowledge among all classes of the population that has enabled the public health service, the doctors and the sanatoria to cut down the death rate from tuberculosis progessively over the past half century One of the most difficult hurdles in the fight has been jumped. Today, instead of a small number of professionally trained people working alone, the whole body of citizens is becoming aroused. More and more they are participating in the fight. When we get a genuinely united front against our diminutive, but most persistent enemy, his fate is sealed.

U. S. FARMERS GAINED $25,000,000 BY NOT SELLING GRAIN HOLDINGS

CHICAGO—A paper profit of approximately $25,000,000, less interest and storage charges, has accrued to the account of American farmers who are holding wheat off the market under government loans, grain men estimated Tuesday. A sharp upturn in the price of wheat the past two weeks has lifted market quotations 10 to 20 cents above rates at which the government has lent $112,000,000 on 161,000,000 bushels stored on farms and in warehouses. If producers wish, they can redeem this wheat by paying off the loans, interest and storage charges. Then they can sell at market.

XMAS SEALS

A goal of $727 52 has been set for Hancock county in the 1939 sale of Christmas seals, Miss Christyna Callison, general chairman, announces.

The sum means an increase of $44 40 over 1938, when total proceeds were $683.12. In terms of seals per capita, the 1939 objective represents an improvement of one-third cent, or a sale of 4.9 seals per capita

"This goal has been set with the object of extending to more people work now being done to instruct adults and children about tuberculosis, to hunt out cases of the disease, and to obtain necessary treatment for patients," Miss Callison declared.

"People need no longer die of tuberculosis The means of saving life are known Our goal of a third of a cent per capita increase is small, but it means that the benefits of this life-saving campaign will be brought to many people who now cannot be reached."

LAKERS TAKE TWO CLOSE GAMES FROM SHAMROCKS FRIDAY NIGHT

The Little Shamrocks Suffer Their First Defeat Of The Season

In one of the best played games seen on the Klemme hardwood this year, the Klemme Shamrocks lost two close games to Crystal Lake Friday evening, as the first team was defeated 30 to 27, and the Little Shamrocks lost by the score of 12 to 10.

Crystal Lake and Klemme played a heads-up game for the first three quarters after which the Shamrock attack bogged down at a critical stage giving the Lakers an opportunity to forge ahead At the half the Shamrocks had the situation well in hand and were out in front 13 to 7 They continued their advantage and at the end of the third quarter were still holding a safe margin of 24 to 21. but from that point on Curt Jenson of the Lakers did a bit of fancy basket shooting to forge his team ahead and the game ended 30 to 27

It was Klemme's forwards Barz and Grosshuesch, who broke past the Crystal Lake defense time and again in the early stages of the game to build up a 13 to 7 half time lead and collect themselves a total of ten points each for the evening They had plenty of support from their teammates as Stille played a bang-up game at center and Grange and Buseman patrolled the back court in admirable fashion The latter two collected the other seven points for Klemme

Local fans left the game feeling that the showing against the strong undefeated Crystal Lake team was a moral victory in spite of the score and are confident that Coach Bowles' warriors are going places before the season is over

Jenson and Christianson for Crystal Lake, and Grosshuesch and Barz for Klemme found the basket the most times to lead their teams in the battle.

The Little Shamrocks were set back for the first time this season season in their game Friday night

Brinkman and Zabilka led the local scoring in the Little Shamrock game with five and four points respectively

Play Hayfield Wednesday Night

There's a Good Reason You're Constipated!

When there's something wrong with you, the first rule is: get at the cause. If you are constipated, don't endure it first and cure it afterward. Find out what's giving you the trouble.

Chances are it's simple if you eat the super-refined foods most people do: meat, white bread, potatoes. It's likely you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It's a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps a bowel movement.

If this is your trouble, you should eat a natural "bulk" producing food—such a one as the crunchy, toasted, ready-to-eat cereal—Kellogg's All-Bran. All-Bran is the ounce of prevention that's worth a pound of emergency relief. Eat it every day, drink plenty of water, and "Join the Regulars." All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek.

Furs Make a Gorgeous Showing Especially Hat and Muff Sets

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

GET out your furs! Your most sumptuous furs, if you please, for it's a veritable extravaganza of furs, and nothing less, that fashion proposes to stage this winter. No matter how much economy you may have to practice on other items of dress, when it comes to furs you cannot afford to stint if you would move and have your being as a shining light in the pageantry that illumines the winter style horizon.

It's not alone that this season's furs are sounding the luxury note in accents loud and clear, but the fact that fur treatments are so excitingly individual, so in the no-two-alike class so to speak, is arousing an enthusiasm for furs that knows no bounds. Everything that can be made of fur is being made of fur.

There is a decided move in favor of wearing separate fur pieces. Many women are buying a smart cloth suit (velvet for formal afternoons) also an equally smart topcoat, with thought in mind of glorifying these units with fur neckpieces, muffs and hats throughout the coming months.

Fashion encourages the idea of the detachable fur by offering an endless array of accessories from which to choose. At your own sweet will you can don a huge showy fur stole or a quaint tippet (once on the old-fashion list, now very new and ultra). Perhaps you prefer one of the youthful sailor collars of fur which is the newest thing out in the way of neckpieces. If your fancy runs to wide revers of fur or to neat and trim military collar effects you are equally sure to win smiles of approval from the powers that be in fashion realms.

You can have fur go up and down the front opening of your coat, or go round and round at the hemline or go criss-cross. You may have your cloth coat fantastically pocketed with fur or widely cuffed with fur or both. Sleeves, all of fur, in the cloth coat are likewise in the style picture. If you wish to adorn your coat with a breast-plate of fur or a gilet or vestee, it's a sure sign you are correctly fashion-inspired. A short jacket all of fur or a cape long or short or a handsome full-length coat of luxury fur, each and all testify to the marked luxury trend that prevails this season.

As to the muff and the hat made of fur, they are absolutely fashion "musts."

The fur that trims the costume below to the left makes a gorgeous showing. Handsome silver fox forms a deep sailor collar at the back, the fur continuing a wide border effect down each side of the front. Of course, there is a corresponding trim of fur on the hat.

Brocade Revival

The fact of fabric elegance impresses one more and more this season. One of the outcomes of the call for rich materials is the revival of handsome stately brocades. Ice blue brocade in a tulip motif fashions this lovely formal evening gown. It shows a tight bodice, elbow-length puffed sleeves and bustle back. A ruby and gold pendant pin is used at the heart-shaped neckline.

Black Velvet Bonnet

Designed like a demure little puritan bonnet with stiff wings on either side to frame the face is a hat made of severe black velvet, with a tiny bow of mink as its only trim.

Fox Trimmed Wraps Smack of Luxury

Luxurious white fox and deep jewel-toned velvet are combined to make a new group of magnificent evening wraps. These fitted and flared coats with their modified back fullness are particularly effective in black, carnelian red and purple. Some of them boast full-length tuxedo bands of fox, left open at the waist to permit the hands to be inserted muff-fashion, and others have yokes of white fox or back plastrons of fur curving from shoulder to waist.

Charming Costume For Casual Sports

A gay and casual sports costume is one which combines a beige camel's hair jacket cut in swagger style and a heavy wool plaid skirt. The coat has a removable parka hood lined with navy and cherry red plaid to match the skirt. Illustrating the corseleted influence, the skirt has an extra wide waistband measuring at least four inches across. Navy blue shoes and gloves and a cherry red brushed wool sweater are the accessories.

Young Girls Favor Evening Sweater

The evening sweater is being promoted everywhere for young girls. It finds itself with a low heart-shaped decolletage front and back, slightly off - the - shoulder puffed sleeves, a nipped-in waistband. New cellophane iridescent sequins, gold nailheads, crystal buttons, gold braid trimmings and myriads of other decorative gestures embellish these festive sweaters.

How Other Lands Mark Christmas

A melting pot of the world, America has created its Christmas traditions from countless customs brought across the seas from foreign lands. In these far-away places the Yuletide symbols of bygone ages still endure. Here are a few of them:

ENGLAND:

Christmas to rural Englishmen means not only the observance of Christ's birth, but also a parting of the ways between the old year and the new. Preparations are started for the next year's farm work, which begins right after Christmas. Throughout the island such trappings as the holly and mistletoe remain undying traditions, nor is any Christmas complete without the Yule log burning. On clear frosty nights the carol singers raise their voices over the countryside. To many Englishmen's despair, such American customs as the turkey dinner are gaining a foothold.

GERMANY:

Two years ago storm troopers in Berlin lit bonfires in the public squares as a revival of the pagan custom of celebrating the winter solstice. But this distraction will not stop the Christmas-loving Germans from decorating their trees in every town and village, and joining in the famed Christmas hymn, "Stille Nacht, Heilige Nacht."

ITALY:

Most Italian families celebrate Christmas eve and spend the following day quietly in their homes. Here it is a feast more for grown-ups than for children, whose merry-making day comes 12 days later, on January 6. On Christmas eve families gather around the "ceppo" or Christmas log blazes. At nine p. m.

IN ITALY—Children of the Italian Alps at Christmas Time, praying before a wayside shrine.

begins the "cenone," or big supper, at which no meat may be served. Gifts for children, which come on Epiphany, are brought not by Santa Claus but by an ugly witch whose name is "Befana."

FRANCE:

Exchange of gifts comes not on Christmas but mostly on New Year's day, which in France is the big family day for reunions of cousins, aunts and uncles. Santa Claus is "Pere Noel," who leaves his gifts in wooden shoes. Christmas eve is not spent at home but in revelry and feasting.

BELGIUM:

Neither Santa Claus nor Pere Noel visit children here—but St. Nicholas makes the rounds, surprisingly, on December 6! A quaint Belgian custom is the putting up the chimney of a few carrots for the little donkey on which St. Nicholas makes his visits.

RUSSIA:

This anti-Christian nation forbids celebration of the Yuletide but no longer compels foreign residents to import their own Christmas trees. Making an about-face, the Soviet government uses this emblem of childhood for its New Year's celebrations when Dadja Moroz, or Uncle Frost, appears with gifts for good children.

POLAND:

This Christmas celebration lasts until February 2 and is preceded by fasting which is not broken until the first star apears on Christmas eve. In all homes the tablecloth is placed over a layer of fragrant hay in commemoration of the manger.

HUNGARY:

St. Nicholas leaves boxes of candy for children early in December, after which the youngsters must be on their good behavior. They write letters to the angels, who, they believe, bring the presents. If they find bits of tinsel on the floor they claim this is angel's hair and proof that the angels are everywhere, observing which boys and girls are good.

HOLY LAND:

Where it all began nearly 20 centuries ago, worshipers reverently hail each Christmas at the church of Nativity which is built over Christ's traditional birthplace. It has remained unchanged more than 1,500 years. There pilgrims gather from all over the world to intone "Glory to the New-Born King."

THE CHILD AND THE KINGDOM

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 1:18-25; 18:1-6; 19:13-15

GOLDEN TEXT—A little child shall lead them.—Isaiah 11:6.

The children's holiday!

Yes, Christmas is the children's day of days, and it is also the day for those who have been "converted and become as little children" (Matt. 18·3). It is quite proper that it should be so, for Christmas really means nothing very significant except as we gather at Bethlehem's manger and there we find a child, the Christ-child. Those who come on the morrow to do homage to Him in the spirit of childlike faith will truly keep Christmas. In that spirit the writer of these notes wishes for you who read these lines just that kind of a holy day of joy and gladness.

Let us then go first of all to Bethlehem, and there having seen the One who "became flesh and dwelt among us" as a little child, we shall be ready to go on and learn from Him what a blessed example, responsibility, and opportunity there is in the childhood which we see all around us.

I. The Child—Jesus Our Saviour (Matt. 1:18-25).

The virgin mother Mary "brought forth her firstborn son" and "called his name Jesus"—the one who should "save his people from their sins" (vv. 21, 25). In order that He might be the Saviour, He had to be both God and man. This could only be true as God sent His own only-begotten Son into the world by giving to Him a human mother in whom He as the eternal Son of God was "conceived by the Holy Ghost" (as we express it in the creed) and became the Son of Man.

For anyone who believes that God has all power and all wisdom to do what He wills and as He wills, and who further believes that Christ was pre-existent as the Son of God before His incarnation, there is no difficulty in believing in the virgin birth. In fact, no other manner of incarnation would have been possible. It necessarily follows that the one who denies the virgin birth of Christ thereby declares that He does not believe in the God of the Scriptures and in Jesus Christ His Son our Lord.

II. The Child—Our Example (18: 1-4).

The disciples had been having a discussion about who was to be the greatest in the kingdom of heaven. This was not because they desired their brothers' advancement, for each one wanted to be the greatest (Luke 9:46).

Jesus frankly told them that they needed a real change of heart, a conversion. True greatness is not a matter of worldly position or ambition, but of a childlike humility. Such an idea was absolutely revolutionary in the day of Jesus, and in fact sounds unbelievable to the worldly man today. But it is nonetheless true that the great man or woman is the one who knows and recognizes himself to be utterly dependent on God in every moment, every circumstance, every trial, and in every opportunity of life. We need to learn of our children.

III. The Child—Our Responsibility (18:5, 6).

These awful, solemn words should be considered with great care. What a terrible judgment awaits those who cause little ones to stumble by reason of their false teaching, their failure to bring God's Word to bear upon their lives, improper discipline in the home, or the influence of a bad example. There are probably preachers, teachers in the Sunday School, grandparents, uncles, aunts, mothers, fathers, yes, even friends of little children who need to reread these verses and then cry out to God in repentance before it is too late.

IV. The Child—Our Opportunity (19·13-15).

Jesus knew the real value of a child and His loving heart reached out to invite the children to come unto Him in love, in obedience, and in trust. When they came, He never failed to bless them.

The glorious thing is that we are privileged to thus bring little children to Him. Someone may say, "Jesus is no longer on earth, I cannot take my child to him." Jesus is not here in the flesh, but He is here ever present with His children. You can bring your child to Him, for the coming which He has in mind in these verses is not in any physical sense but rather spiritual. The parents who teach their little ones about the birth of Christ on this Christmas day have brought them to Him. Every word of instruction, every encouragement to pray, every example of devotion to Christ which the child may follow is the true bringing of that child to Him.

Will you do it this Christmas—in the home, in the Sunday School, in the church, anywhere? If you do, there will be blessing beyond your ability to contain it and you will have A Blessed Christmas!

PATTERN DEPARTMENT SEWING CIRCLE

THIS frock (8587) is so devastatingly becoming to fashion-wise moppets that you needn't be surprised if your own small daughter develops a slight superiority complex when she puts it on! From a high waistline, the full skirt ripples about her dimpled knees. The sleeves puff out like little balloons. There's adorable quaintness in the cut of the top. Pattern includes panties, and it's quick and easy to make.

Gingham, linen, batiste or challis are pretty everyday materials for this frock. A party version will be sweet in organdy or taffeta, dimity or dotted Swiss, with ribbon instead of braid for trimming.

Pattern No. 8587 is designed for sizes 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6 years. Size 3 requires 1⅞ yards of 35-inch fabric for the dress; ¾-yard for panties. To trim with two rows of braid or bias fold requires 8½ yards.

Send your order with 15 cents (in coins) to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., Room 1324, 211 W. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill.

Over half of the tuberculosis deaths in the United States occur in the age period 15 to 45, the main ages at which the individual is economically most productive and socially important to his family and the community Tuberculosis strikes down those who are young and those in whom their elders have invested long years of cherishing care This peculiarity, that it kills in the young adult years makes tuberculosis a far greater social evil than those illnesses which take lives at later years when family responsibilities are less heavy.

Farmers Shun Expansion in Wartime But They Hear 'Be Prepared' Warning

By GEORGE BRADFORD
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

CHICAGO. — What will the war do to American agriculture?

That question has been raised with growing insistence ever since Adolf Hitler's gray-clad legions went blitzkrieging into Poland. Repeal of the arms embargo brought it still farther into the foreground.

For the extent to which America's vast reservoir of foods and fibers is used has become a matter of close concern to everyone on or near a farm.

Three fairly definite answers have emerged, but each is conditioned by a large "if"—if the European war drags on:

1. The war will create a rising demand at home for American farm products, with an upward price level.

2. It will increase the demand from abroad.

3. It will likely bring a rise in land values.

War's stimulating impact on industry will soon be felt on the farm, authorities believe. Already men are returning to work, steel production is rising, dividends are increasing, stocks and commodities are going up. Americans will soon buy more and eat more because they'll have more money to spend. More cereals, fats, meats and woolens will be needed—and at higher price levels.

Can't Hold Two Jobs.

Let's look at Europe. Despite 1939's record-breaking world's wheat crop (5,290,000,000 bushels, exclusive of Russia and China) every month the war lasts will diminish Europe's food supplies. Men under arms can't till the soil, whether they're mobilized neutrals or combatants.

Consider, too, that there are 40,000,000 more mouths to feed in Europe today than during the World war, from which we recall the following production figures:

In 1917 wheat and other cereals stood at 35 per cent below normal, or 960,786,000 bushels. That year American farmers planted 238,000,000 acres to care for America's needs and those of Europe. It was 22 per cent more than the previous 10-year average of 195,000,000 acres.

If the present war drags on, Europe must turn for replacements of bread, meat, potatoes, woolens and butter to the United States, the various British dominions and South America.

Will Prices Go Up?

The third factor—especially interesting to farm owners or investors—is the prospect of higher land values. S. M. Waters, president of the Mortgage Bankers association, has this to say: "The man who owns a farm today undoubtedly has something more valuable than it was three months ago. The European conflict may have the most far-reaching effects for owners of farm property."

Nobody wants to profit by human misery, least of all the American farmer. But war, peace or neutrality, he has a stake in the present situation and if he does some straight thinking he can be stronger at the war's end than he was at its start.

Chester Davis, agriculture's representative on the federal reserve board, urged farmers to "keep their shirts on, think intelligently and work together," thus moving out of the war into an improved position.

Stress Soil Conservation.

By "keeping his shirt on," Mr. Davis meant the farmer should avoid overexpansion and the pitfall of too easy profits that later may turn to losses. The World war taught that lesson, and it is highly significant that next year's AAA program aims to place more emphasis on soil conservation than on crop control. Probably the most practical move the farmer can make, say the experts, is to take stock of his land's fertility. For if agriculture is called on to step up production as a result of the war, this will be of major importance.

How does the fertility score stand?

Of 600,000,000 tillable farm acres, 50,000,000 have been completely ruined, according to the soil conservation service. An additional 50,000,000 are seriously damaged and a lot more has suffered a marked decline in fertility.

Causes were erosion; failure to replace necessary plant food removed year after year by growing soil; leaching; drain of live stock raising; oxidation of soil organic matter, and by fire.

The total annual fertility loss to American farm land is 16,000,000 tons of nitrogen, 2,500,000 tons of phosphorus and 36,200,000 tons of potash, it is estimated.

'Be Prepared.'

"Whether war or peace prevails," says the Middle West Soil Improvement committee, "the necessity for an ever-increasing program of soil conservation is indicated by the fact that fertilizers and manures are believed to restore only 18 per cent of the annual nitrogen loss and about 6.8 per cent of the potash loss. Restoration from other sources reduces the annual net loss to 2,700,000 tons of nitrogen, approximately 1,200,000 tons of phosphorus and more than 30,000,000 tons of potash.

Agriculture here has one advantage in the matter of fertilizers that it didn't enjoy at the outbreak of the World war. Then we were almost entirely dependent on Germany for potash and Chile for natural nitrates. Today, thanks to science and American industry, we are independent and will continue so.

When the American farmer hears the "be prepared" signal to get his land ready for any eventuality, he knows it can be done.

If Europe's War Continues:
Domestic food demand will become greater.
Price of farm products will go higher.
Warring nations to seek more foodstuffs here.
Land values expected to increase.

You Eat Ton of Food in Year, With Emphasis on Dairy Items

CHICAGO.—The food the average American eats in a year, equal to almost a ton and more than ten times the average weight of an adult, was piled up for display before a group of young vegetable growers here recently.

The merchandise was assembled in actual quantity at the annual banquet of the Junior Vegetable Grocers' association during their convention.

On the basis of figures compiled from official sources, the average American consumes nearly his own weight in meat alone—using 150 pounds as an average weight.

Heavy on Dairy Products.

Likewise, if you maintain an average consumption, you'll consume your weight three times over, at least, in dairy products, which lead the list in "tonnage." Much of this is in fluid form, the balance in butter, ice cream, malted milk and similar products.

The young vegetable growers, who were guests of the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea company at this year's banquet, were particularly interested in the assembled mass of fresh and canned vegetables which statistics indicate the average American consumes annually. Potatoes of course lead in this division, with a per capita consumption of 145 pounds. Other items in the vegetable division, such as sweet potatoes, peas, corn, beans, spinach, carrots, lettuce, tomatoes and all the others, reach to a volume close to the weight of an average adult.

All grains consumed, in the form of bread, cereals and in liquid form, treble the weight of the average adult.

We're Eating More Fish.

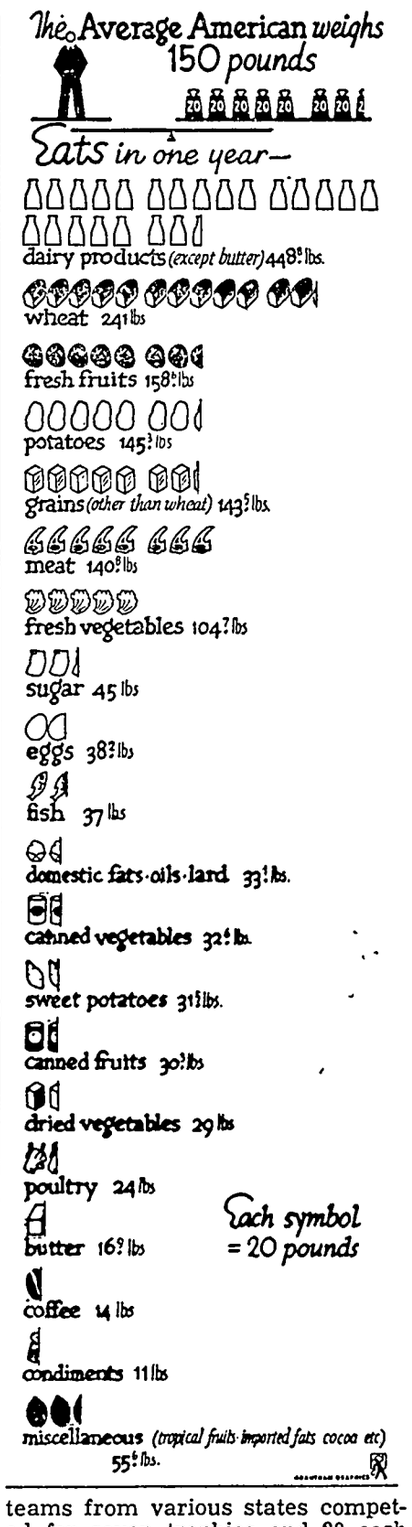
Figures indicate that fish consumption is gaining. The figure used includes fresh and salt water fish, canned fish, frozen fish and all the various items such as oysters, crabmeat, lobsters and so on. The quick freezing process which permits shipment to inland points of salt water fish is credited with bringing about some of the increase in demand.

The Junior Vegetable Growers held their judging contest on the day of the banquet. Thirty-five teams from various states competed for seven trophies and 20 cash prizes.



The Average American weighs 150 pounds

London Censors Christmas Cards To Foil Nazi Spies

LONDON.—Spies will find it difficult to use Christmas cards for sending messages out of Great Britain this year because of an ingenious control system which has been introduced by the department of military censorship.

Britons who wish to send cards to certain "censorable countries"—including most of Europe, China, Japan and the overseas possessions of neutral European nations—must place their orders with a stationer and give him the list of names and addresses of those people to whom cards are to be sent. The stationer then himself will address and mail the cards.

This control was thought necessary because during the last war, enemy agents made extensive use of greeting cards to convey information to Germany by way of neutral countries.

College Income Up in '39, U. S. Information Reveals

WASHINGTON. — Colleges and universities did better financially during the past year than the year before, according to a survey by the United States office of education.

A report from some 330 institutions showed collections from students for educational purposes went up 8 per cent over the previous year while national, state and local governments contributed 1 per cent more.

While income from endowments dropped 3 per cent, private benefactions for current purposes increased 9 per cent and revenue from sales and services of "related activities" increased 24 per cent. The report was prepared by Henry G Badger and Frederick J. Kelly.

FOR THE NEW YEAR'S PARTY

Foreign Parties Are Fun

For your New Year's eve party, why not plan one that is foreign in flavor? Whether you like to sway to the rhythm of the rhumba, or prefer swing, you'll find a rhumba party with a menu of Cuban delicacies, full of charm for your guests.

There are all sorts of amusing, inexpensive favors to give an authentic note to your rhumba party decorations—little pottery figures and tiny dolls dressed in Cuban costumes; and for noisemakers, a pair of maracas, those gourd-like rattles filled with seeds that rhumba orchestras shake to emphasize the beat of the music, and tiny wooden castanets that the dancers manipulate with their hands as an accompaniment to their steps.

Refreshments, too, can be distinctly Cuban. A dish that has gained fame among visitors to Cuba is rice with chicken—"Arroz con pollo." With rolled sandwiches and plenty of coffee, you have a delicious, satisfying supper.

The Cuban idea of coffee is small cups and plenty of them, filled with strong, black coffee. If you like, use decaffeinated coffee, so that your guests can drink many cups in the Cuban manner, without fear of sleepless hours later. Remember that decaffeinated coffee needs a little extra brewing to bring out the rich flavor.

After-Dinner Coffee or Demi-Tasse.
(Extra Strength)

Use 1½ heaping tablespoons coffee, regular grind, for each cup (½ pint) of water. Make by any method desired. If using decaffeinated coffee, drip grind, measure well-rounded tablespoon instead of heaping tablespoon.

Arroz Con Pollo.
(Chicken with rice)

Cut a chicken into small pieces and wipe dry. Melt ½ cup butter or other fat in a saucepan and fry the chicken and a cup of diced sliced ham, uncooked, until golden brown. Add a cup of canned tomatoes or tomato paste, half a dozen small olives, a teaspoon of chopped parsley and salt to taste. Then add ½ cup of rice Brown the rice lightly, stirring constantly. Then add 1 cup of boiling water and cook slowly, in a casserole in the oven, keeping tightly covered, until chicken is tender and rice is done.

Vegetable Salad Bowl.

1 head lettuce (cut in wedges)
Raw spinach leaves (coarsely chopped)
1 cucumber (peeled and sliced)
1 green pepper (cut in rings)
1 bunch radishes (sliced)
Onion (cut in very thin slices)

Prepare vegetables and dry thoroughly in clean towel. Chill. Place all the vegetables in a salad bowl and toss together with well-seasoned french dressing. Serve at once.

Garlic Bread.

Slice French, Italian, or white bread in thick slices to, but not through, the bottom crust. Crush one clove of garlic. Add to ⅓ cup of butter and heat over a low flame for about 5 minutes. Strain out the garlic. Brush slices and top of the bread with the garlic butter. Heat in a moderately hot oven (375 degrees) for about 15 minutes. Serve at once.

Rolled Sandwiches.

Cut fresh bread in thin, even slices. Trim off crusts. Spread with soft butter or with any desired filling. Roll and fasten with toothpicks. Place sandwiches in a deep pan, and cover with a cloth wrung out of hot water (this must not touch the sandwiches). Let stand for 15 minutes. Just before serving, tuck a sprig of watercress into one end of each sandwich, for garnish, and remove the toothpicks.

An Italian "Help-Yourself" party is a grand idea for informal entertaining—especially when you plan to have a crowd. Cover tables with brown wrapping paper in place of linen, or use coarse cotton tablecloths in red and white checks.

In the center of each table place a basket or a wooden bowl of fruit, to be served, later, as dessert.

Italian Spaghetti.
(Serves 8)

1 can imported Italian tomatoes (large)
1 can tomato paste
⅔ cup water
¼ teaspoon soda
Salt and cayenne pepper to taste
½ cup olive oil
1 clove garlic (grated)
1½ large onions (sliced)
½ cup parsley (chopped)
1½ pounds ground meat (beef, pork and veal)
1 package spaghetti (approximately 8 ounces.)
1 cup grated Italian cheese (bulk preferable)

Strain tomatoes, add tomato paste, water, soda, salt and pepper. Place olive oil in frying pan and add garlic, onions and parsley. Fry in the oil until lightly brown. Add meat and continue to fry until it is cooked through. Combine the above two mixtures and simmer about two hours. Stir frequently.

Meanwhile, cook spaghetti until tender in large quantity boiling water (salted). Serve tomato sauce over spaghetti and top with grated cheese. Serve very hot.

Frequent Cleaning Is Protection for Woodwork

Interior woodwork finish will last longer and look better if subjected to frequent and thorough cleaning.

It may be kept clean by periodic removal of surface dust and by preventing the formation of grease film. Woodwork should be washed or cleaned when dusting is inadequate. For cleaning varnished or painted surfaces, solvents that will attack the covering must be avoided as well as abrasive preparations.

A good quality of soap will usually do a satisfactory job. When the paint is flecked, marred, or discolored, it is necessary to resurface the woodwork.

Refrigerator Tips

Perishable food always should be placed in the refrigerator as soon as possible. Raw fruits and vegetables are best washed first under running water and the outside of milk bottles wiped with a damp cloth. Left-overs should be cooled, if necessary, and placed in spotless, tightly-covered containers to keep odors from escaping and uncongenial flavors from mixing. Foods with strong odors, such as cheese if put into the refrigerator, should be kept on a top shelf.

Quickly Made Dolls For Late Gift Choice

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

HERE is a boy and a girl doll that you can make quickly. The body is two tubes of material made of fabric stitched together to simulate socks and shoes and then stitched, turned and stuffed as indicated at the left of this sketch. The head is a two-inch ball of cloth covered first with cotton and then with tightly stretched cloth sewed in the back as in steps 1 and 2. The wig is made as in step 3.

The diagram shows how the tubes and the head are sewn together. Sew across the top of the legs to make the doll jointed. Sew the arms down and the tips of the feet up as indicated. Sew clear through the head when adding the bead eyes about half way between the top and bottom. This shapes the cheeks. A few stitches in red make the mouth. The pleated skirt is cut straight. The trousers are slightly shaped in the crotch. The sweaters are made from the striped tops of children's socks.

December 25, 1866, Marked the End of An Heroic Ride and It Halted a Gay Christmas Ball at Old Fort Laramie

Barracks and officers' quarters at Fort Laramie. "Bedlam," where the Christmas ball on December 25, 1866, was dramatically interrupted by the arrival of John ("Portugee") Phillips with his message of "disaster at Fort Phil Kearney," is the two-story frame structure at the extreme left in the picture.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

CHRISTMAS night, 1866, at historic Fort Laramie on the old Oregon Trail.

A Christmas ball was in progress in the two-story frame building where all the social activities of the post were held—"Bedlam," they called it, because it was where the unmarried officers were quartered. In sharp contrast to the cheery scene inside—the warmth, the music and the soft light of candles and keresone lamps—was the darkness outside, made more desolate by the whistling wind and the biting cold.

While the festivities were at their height, across the snow-blanketed parade ground a horse staggered. Its rider reeled in his saddle as he urged the weary beast forward. When at last he drew rein before the lighted building and painfully dismounted, the horse dropped in its tracks.

A moment later a huge figure, clad in a heavy buffalo overcoat, leggings, moccasins and fur cap, lunged through the door of "Bedlam" and tottered out to the middle of the dance floor. The music stopped with a crash, and several of the women screamed at the sight of the strange figure which stood there swaying from side to side like a great brown bear.

As several officers rushed forward, the man in the buffalo coat lifted his hand wearily, pulled off his cap and gasped: "Fetterman and 80 men have been wiped out by the Sioux at Phil Kearney! Carrington must have help at once!" Then he dropped in a dead faint at their feet.

This messenger of disaster was "Portugee" Phillips, and his 236-mile ride from Fort Phil Kearney to Fort Laramie, in the dead of winter and through a country swarming with hostile Indians, was one of the most remarkable exploits in the annals of America. Compared to it, the historic rides of Paul Revere and Phil Sheridan sink into significance.

The reason for his heroic ride was the now-famous "Fetterman Massacre" in which the Sioux and Cheyennes on the morning of December 21, 1866, killed a force of 76 soldiers and two civilians led by Capt. W. J. Fetterman, Capt. F. H. Brown and Lieut. G. W. Grummond.

That afternoon another detachment went out from the fort and recovered their mutilated bodies. Soon afterwards the weather changed, the thermometer dropped to 25 degrees below zero and a blizzard came howling down upon the grief-stricken garrison, who fully expected the Indians to follow up their victory over Fetterman with an attack on the fort.

The blizzard piled snow against the stockade so rapidly that forces of men, working in shifts of only 15 minutes because of the bitter cold, were kept busy shoveling it away lest the drifts should become so high that the Indians could use them to climb over the palisaded walls. In this crisis Carrington decided that the only hope of saving the remainder of his command was to secure reinforcements from Fort Laramie, 236 miles away, the reinforcements for which he had been vainly asking for several weeks.

But there was no telegraph line nearer than the station at Horseshoe Creek, 40 miles from Laramie, and the only hope of getting a message through was by courier. So the commander called for volunteers. But none of the soldiers were willing to take the risk.

Then John Phillips, a civilian, stepped forward. "Portugee" Phillips they called him because of his Portuguese parentage. He would go, he said.

Before leaving, Phillips asked if he might see Mrs. Grummond, a bride of little more than a year and already a widow, whom Mrs. Carrington had taken into her home when the news was brought back to the fort that the lieutenant was among the slain of Fetterman's command. Several years later, after the death of Mrs. Carrington, Mrs. Grummond became the second wife of Colonel Carrington, and in her book, "Army Life on the Plains," she tells of that interview as follows:

"A knock at my door brought me to my feet. An orderly, brave and faithful Semple, announced that a man was waiting in the adjoining room wishing especially to see Mrs. Grummond. There I was met by an entire stranger, John Phillips by name, a miner and frontiersman, in the employ of the quartermaster, clad in the dress of a scout, who had something to communicate. So impressed was he by the gravity of the situation of the garrison that he extended his hand to me, with tears in his eyes, and in brief but pathetic language said, 'I am going to Laramie for help, with despatches, as special messenger, if it costs me my life. I am going for your sake! Here is my wolf robe. I brought it for you to keep and remember me by if you never see me again.'

"There was no price put upon John Phillips' services. He asked no reward. The only condition he imposed was that he be allowed to choose his own horse. That choice, promptly conceded by its owner, was a fine thoroughbred belonging to the colonel."

At midnight Carrington himself unbarred a little side gate in the stockade and Phillips led his horse through it. He carried only a few crackers for himself and a hatful of feed for his mount, for in his race with death every ounce of weight would count. As he swung into the saddle, Carrington reached out his hand and murmured "God bless you and keep you on this journey!" Then as horse and rider faced the howling blizzard the colonel relocked the gate and, with heavy heart, returned to his all-night vigil in his quarters.

The most dangerous part of Phillips' journey was the stretch of country from Phil Kearney to Fort Reno, for it was likely that the Indians would be watching for a courier from the beleaguered fort and would try to cut him off. But if there were Phillips outwitted them for he "steered clear of the trail" riding parallel to it but at some distance away. By doing this he lessened the chances of discovery but he increased the peril of losing his way or dropping into some deep ravine partly filled with drifting snow which covered the ground from three to five feet.

By some miracle of good luck he pursued his journey in safety during the night. When morning came he rode into a thicket and lay there all day for he dared not risk traveling while it was light and being discovered by some keen-eyed Indian scout. That night he reached Fort Reno, commanded by Lieut. Col. H. W. Wessels of the Eighteenth infantry, who had recently taken charge of that post.

After a hasty meal and a brief rest at Reno, Phillips set out on the longest part of the journey but presumably least dangerous—so far as Indian attack was concerned. But before he reached Horseshoe Creek telegraph station he was pursued by a band of Indians mounted on ponies. Thanks to the speed of Colonel Carrington's thoroughbred, however, Phillips was able to outdistance them and gain a high hill where he prepared to make a last stand.

But the savages had no stomach for charging up the hill and did not attack. All through the night the courier stood at bay there, keeping a constant look-out against attack and ready to mount and ride for his life if necessary. At the first streak of dawn, he "made a run for it" and reached Horseshoe Creek station a short time before it was attacked and burned by the Indians. There he gave the telegraph operator dispatches—one to the commander at Fort Laramie and one to the department commander at Omaha—which Wessels had entrusted to him at Reno.

But, according to Mrs. Carrington's book, "the operator at Horseshoe Creek station was unwilling to risk so long a dispatch as that of Colonel Carrington so Phillips pressed on with his dispatch, reaching Fort Laramie at 11 o'clock with icicles hanging from his clothing and both beard and hair matted with snow and ice. He delivered the dispatch and relieved of that responsibility he fell, exhausted and unconscious."

When he was revived he learned that the message from the telegraph station at Horseshoe Creek had reached Laramie at two o'clock that afternoon and preparations were already under way to send reinforcements to Phil Kearney.

It was a sad Christmas day at that post for it was devoted to the burial of the victims of the disaster on December 21 and in the days that followed there was the ever-present fear that the Indians might attack and that Carrington's decimated garrison might not be able to repulse the savage assault. Would the attack come before reinforcements from Laramie arrived—that is, if indeed reinforcements were on the way? For there was no way of knowing whether or not "Portugee" Phillips had reached his goal. That he might not have was a specter which haunted the minds of every man, woman and child in Phil Kearney during the next week.

New Year's day came and passed. And still no word from Laramie. Then, chronicles Frances C. Carrington:

"One day there was a sudden, almost a tumultuous, hurrying out of quarters, with excitement and bustle as intense as if we were called to arms against an advancing foe. First, the Pilot Hill picket, and then the sentry before headquarters, and the look-out on the headquarters tower, announced the unmistakable appearance of troops, five miles distant.

"The bugle call and the 'long roll' were never more gladly echoed in hearts. Our spontaneous cry was, 'Open wide the gates and admit our deliverers.' We hardly had patience to don protective outer-garments because of the glow of our quickened blood, and our common outbreak of joy was simply, 'At last! At last! We are saved! We are saved! Phillips was saved, saved, for us!'"

The story of the subsequent career of "Portugee" Phillips is an all-too-familiar story of the proverbial ingratitude of republics toward men who have served them well. In the years that followed his heroic ride he was employed in various capacities around the frontier posts in Wyoming. But he was continually hunted and harassed by the Sioux who looked upon him as the man who had prevented their following up their victory over Fetterman by destroying the whole garrison at Fort Phil Kearney. They drove off or killed his cattle and when he tried to get compensation from the government for his losses the Court of Claims gave him a judgment for the sum of $2,210.

Then it was discovered that Phillips, born of Portuguese parents on the Pacific coast, wasn't a naturalized citizen of the United States at the time of the Indian depredations on his property. So the claim was not allowed! Later he became a naturalized citizen but still the claim was not paid Broken in health by the exposure and strain of his perilous ride and his treatment at the hands of the revengeful Indians, Phillips died in Cheyenne November 18, 1833, at the age of 51, leaving a widow and a child in straightened circumstances.

It was not until 33 years later that the government took official recognition of his heroic ride. In 1899 Senator F. E. Warren and Congressman F. W. Mondell of Wyoming, aided by affidavits provided by Carrington (now a brigadier-general) and Mrs. Carrington (his second wife) succeeded in obtaining the sum of $5,000 for Mrs. Phillips in partial recognition of her husband's services in 1866 and his losses at the hands of the Indians.

Monument to "Portugee" Phillips near the site of Fort Phil Kearney.

Among the tributes that have been paid to "Portugee" Phillips is this poem, written by Griff Crawford and printed in the Kansas City Times on March 3, 1929.

I'M RIDIN' FOR LARAMIE

I'm goin' to Laramie—down the divide;
A headin' for Laramie—goin' to ride
The trail as I find it and gaugin' the breath
That blows from the Big Horn, a-singin' with death.
I'm hopin' for luck when I'm makin' it through
The brakes that are hidin' the clan of the Sioux.

They're waitin' out there in the coulees, I know.
But it's death if I stay—and a chance if I go
So, here's a goody-bye to the pards at my side—
I'm tryin' for Laramie—down the divide.

I'm tryin' for Laramie No one can tell
The cunnin' that lurks in the minions of hell
That wait just beyond where the spent bullets fall,
Nor measure the storm that is king over all
With its cold, bitin' sting and the drifts layin' deep,
And the wild, drivin' wind that comes down with a sweep.
I'm knowin' the trail will be long at the best—
I'm knowin' the risk and I'm takin' the test—
And hopin' and prayin' that somethin'll guide
Me straight into Laramie—down the divide.

I'm tryin' for Laramie—crawlin' it through
The scalp-raisin' ring—and I'm foolin' the Sioux;
I'm freezin' a bit—but I'm warmer inside—
And soon I'll be out where I'll chance it and ride
The wind has a sting and the goin' is rough,
But I'm out—and away—and my broncho is tough.
The trail may be long but it's worth it to know
I am fightin' the miles and I'm buckin' the snow
For help—and I'm grinnin' for makin' it through
That circle of death—and I'm foolin' the Sioux

I'm ridin' for Laramie! Somehow the creep
Of cold in my veins wants to put me to sleep
And the hours—and the days—and the weeks—and the years
And the drummin' that sounds like a knell in my ears—
And the eyelids that's froze to my cheeks sorta seem Like a phantom of night or the hell of a dream
I'm freezin' I know, but I'm ridin' it out—
From Kearney to Laramie—swayin' about—
I'd grin, if I could, for I'm makin' it through From Kearney to Laramie—foolin' the Sioux.

L'ENVOI.

We're here, little hoss, and our journey is done;
The bugles are ringin', we've made it and won.
The sting that is bitin' my flesh doesn't count;
I'm watchin' the soldiers ride out as they mount
A headin' for Kearney. I'd cry if I could.
They're headin' for Kearney—I knew that they would!
I'd like to be ridin' the ice-pelted track—
Be ridin' for Kearney a-leadin' them back—
And watchin' the fight as they're beatin' it through
That hair-liftin' circle and whippin' the Sioux.

Our Greed

The great error of our nature is, not to know where to stop, not to be satisfied with any reasonable acquirement; not to compound with our condition; but to lose all we have gained by an insatiable pursuit after more.—Burke.

Don't let winter catch you unprepared

Last call! If your car won't start. If you wear out your battery in a hopeless tussle with congealed summer oil. If you burn out bearings because cold-stiffened oil couldn't get to them. If you are troubled all winter with sludge, carbon and corrosion due to impurities in the oil . . . don't say we didn't warn you to
